Last week witnessed one of those strange, unaccountable revulsions in business that occur at irregular times. Traffic was exceedingly good the first half of the week, coupled with something of a scarcity of all kinds of material. Thursday brought in a large increase of good material and patrons purchased quite heavily, only to find later that customers had suddenly disappeared. This story was told quite generally. But Saturday was a fairly busy day and resulted in a very fair clean up all around in retail lines, with just about enough good material to cover all demands, and quite a surplus of poor goods left on the growers' hands. Goods inclined to be scarce now are Perle, Morgan and Helen Gould roses, fancy kinds of carnations, violets and lilies.

In roses the quality is off and there are mighty few blooms that can be classed as specials. The quotations on firsts are almost generally the top of the market, and on culls there is almost no bottom. We bear, for instance, of such sales as 2,000 for $15, and a very large proportion of the stock received comes in the "seconds" and "culls" classes. Considerable mildew is noted. In some cases the top quotations are given by only one house. For instance, only one quotes Kaiserin at as high as $10 for specials. The rest uniformly give $6 as the highest price obtained. In other words, they have no specials to offer. The same variation was noted in regard to Liberty. Few have as yet any blooms that they can ask over $6 per 100 for.

It is the same in carnations. Only a few houses have stock of the $3 grade and as a rule $2 is the top, but any decent sort of a bloom will bring $1.50 and few are so poor as to get into the $1 class. There is a surplus of poor grade roses and none too many of the best qualities, while in carnations there are none too many of any kind, in fact, rather a shortage.

Stock in general begins to improve in quality. There is a heavy supply of roses just now, and especially of Brides, Maids and Golden Gates. Meteors, Carnots and Perles are limited in quantity. American Beauties are in better supply than they have been for some time, yet not half enough come in to supply the demand, which is always good. These wholesale at from $1 to $3 per dozen. The smaller roses, such as I mentioned, are sold at from $1 to $4 per 100. The best of them sell quickly, but there are plenty of the seconds left over to be sold cheap in large lots the next day.

The carnation growers are almost through with housing their plants and are sending in some first-class blooms. Of these the Lawsons are the best but have very short stems. Daybreak, Scott and Crane are as yet quite small but of good color. These are selling well and very few, if any, are left over after the morning sales. The price the past week was from $1 to $2 per 100.

Asters were quite plentiful the past week and some very fine large white are in the market. The light shades are the best sellers. The choicest of them brought $1.50 per 100.

Some good valley brought $3, with the demand good. Asparagus and smilax is to be had in large lots and is of good quality.

A few Fitzwygram chrysanthemums are in the market and they sell at sight at $1 per dozen. J. J. B.

MILWAUKEE.

The market the past week was firm. All good shipping stock found ready sale. In roses the call was mainly for white and Beauties. Carnations are extremely scarce, in fact there are practically none in the market worth speaking about. Violets and mums are making their appearance, but in small straggly lots.

A Disappointment.

Great preparations had been made for the reception of President Roosevelt, who was to have been here Wednesday. J. M. Fox had the decorations at the Pfister and Plankinton hotels and had the job well under way when the announcement came that the president was not coming. Hundreds of Beauties and other roses as well as smilax and asparagus will be sacrificed.

Sigmund Hoppenrath, a pioneer florist, died Tuesday evening. Mr. Hoppenrath conducted a stand in the market hall a great many years.

Visitors: Jas. Wilson, Chicago; John Evans, Richmond, Ind. INCOG.

SOFT COAL.

How tall a smokestack should I have to burn soft coal? Can a fire of soft coal be left unattended for the same length of time as a fire of good hard coal, or does it need to be broken up more frequently than a hard coal fire? I have had no experience with soft coal. Does a fire of soft coal clinker more than a fire of hard coal? Have heard that it does and that it needs more attention.
FLORIST.

Replying to Florist, would say the dimensions of a smokestack depend very largely upon the style and size of boiler used; thus, for an ordinary wrought-iron tubular boiler, say 20-horse power, a stack 30 feet above the boiler would give good results, and if it is a slow combustion boiler, having a long and slow flue travel, a higher stack would be required.

In order to get the best results from a soft coal fire, it will require considerable more attention than would hard coal, as a thin fire is necessary, and, if the coal is very soft or gassy, it will require frequent breaking up. Clinkers form much more readily from soft coal than from hard—in fact, firing with soft coal is much more laborious than with hard; flues will also require more frequent cleaning. HENRY W. GIBBONS.
New York.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICH.

The dry spell is at last broken; this morning it commenced to rain and has continued a steady downpour all day. It is badly needed as corn and all field crops still out were drying up. It is the first heavy rain in six weeks.

Business is quiet from the retailers' standpoint, but the shipping of carnation and violet stock and cut flowers has kept the growers very busy. In fact, everything considered, it has been the busiest season ever known here, and such a scarcity in carnations was never before heard of. Field grown flowers of carnations are about over with, and indoor grown are beginning to be in evidence. The stems are short but that fault will soon disappear.

Prices are firm. Carnations, 25 cents per doz.; roses, $1 per doz.; American Beauties, $1.50 to $2 per doz. Longiflorum lilies, of which Crabb & Hunter have a fine lot bring $2 per doz. They are from cold storage bulbs.

Chas. Chadwick has his carnations benched, but is behind with his repairs, rebuilding of benches, altering the piping, etc.

The Floral Co. is hurrying the rebuilding of two more houses so as to get them planted to carnations before frost. The houses are constructed with Garland gutters and solid cement beds.

Cross is getting along finely with his brick boiler shed and the setting above ground of his boiler. He is in a stew, for fear he may not get all his houses connected before frost.

Henry Smith has at last decided to build, and is now hard at it.

Recent visitors: H. D. Seele, florist for Hon. C. G. Conn, of Elkhart, Ind.; Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Tweedie, of Cadillac; also agents for the following firms: W. W. Barnard & Co., Chicago; M. Rice & Co., Philadelphia; Geo. Wittbold Co., Chicago; Ionia Pottery Co., Ionia, Mich.; J. W. Sefton Mfg. Co., Chicago, and, last but not least, Evans, of Richmond, Ind., making a laudable effort to ventilate the town. So successful has Mr. Evans been that he booked orders for fifty-one machines in one week. G. F. C.

NORTH ADAMS, MASS.

F. H. Pratt, the Ashland street florist, has his house well stocked with carnations and mums. A batch of early Harrisii shows up very strong and healthy.

A. J. Schmutz, the Arnold place florist, has finished glazing his new range and is fast getting things into shape. He has a very fine lot of carnations and mums already benched and a large stock of palms and ferns is on hand. He will make bedding plants a specialty. This will be the most modern and up-to-date place in the city.

George H. Phelps, the Blackinton florist, has his carnations benched and they are up to his usual standard, "the best." George has the knack of getting there every time.

The principal topic now is, "What shall we heat with?" Anthracite coal at $12 per ton and only a few tons in the city. Pratt is the only florist who has any coal, he having secured half a winter's supply of a very fine grade of soft coal. Others are thinking of using soft coal, the price of which is $5.75 to $6.25 per ton.

T. D. Brown, of Adams, was a visitor this week. He reports that the material for his new range has just arrived and the erection of the house will begin at once. The Lord & Burnham Co. has the contract. As there is no hard coal to be had in Adams, Mr. Brown will use soft coal this winter. O. S.

Trade is first-class from every point of view and there is enough extra business in sight to keep the florists of this city very busy all of this week. Although Monday and Tuesday of last week were a little on the slow order as to business, the following days more than made up for them, and all kinds of flowers, especially those that work up well in lsrge decorations, were used. Asters were in by the thousands and the majority of them were AI quality. All of them sold at good prices; in fact, the poorer grades brought better prices than at any time so far this season.

Roses are in very good supply. There were more pink than any other, but American Beauties are coming in in much increased numbers, and there is a ready sale for them, even very short stemmed ones. The extra long-stemmed ones are not yet coming in in large enough numbers to fill all orders. Medium-stemmed ones are just about equal to the demand. Brides are more plentiful, but still by far not enough. Meteors and Liberties are about equal to the demand.

The supply of carnations is increasiog, but is not nearly up to the demand, and from present prospects it will be some time before it is. Perhaps it is just as well, as chrysanthemums will be with us very shortly and when they are in other flowers must take a back seat.

There is a good supply of green goods, and a good sale for it also. You can get just about what you want and in any quantity. Smilax, first-class stock, Asparagus plumosus, strings and bunches the bunches go very well here; Asparagus Sprengeri, which is fast making a permanent place for itself; galax leaves, leucothoe sprays, ferns, etc. There is a good demand for southern wild smilax. C. J. O.

MONTREAL.—The greenhouses of Messrs. Hall & Robinson, at Outremont, were seriously damaged by fire Sept. 12. The loss is estimated at $2,500, with no insurance. The fire is supposed to have started from sparks from a pile of refuse that was being burned on adjoining property.

INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

The principal event in the floral line so far this season was the floral display at the state fair, which was held Sept. 15 to 19. In plants there was only one firm showing and in spite of the good quality and size of the plants there were less plants than are usually shown. Baur & Smith were the only exhibitors in the plant classes. In their group of show plants were some magnificent plants of geraniums, which showed up fine among the green foliage. They also had some grand plants of Rex begonias, some of them nearly three feet across in 8-inch pots. Two great specimens of Boston ferns attracted much attention.

In roses W. W. Coles, of Kokomo, carried off the first honors with a superb lot of blooms on extra long stems for so early in the season. E. A. Nelson, of this city, running very little behind with another fine lot. In collection of cut flowers, E. A. Nelson won first and Mr. Coles second. In collection of gladioli J. L. Childs, of Floral Park, N. Y., showed a grand lot of blooms and took first, Mr. Coles taking second and E. A. Nelson third.

In baskets, bonquets and floral designs J. A. Rieman, of this city, won first in every class and E. A. Nelson won second in each class. In the class for "original show arrangement of flowers," Mr. Rieman showed an arch with steps leading up to it and a plow on top of the arch. This was easily the finest piece of work ever shown at any of our state fairs. Mr. Nelson showed a rocking chair that was easily worthy of first premium if it had not been up against such a grand piece as Mr. Rieman put up. There was also a nice collection of dahlias shown by a gentleman named Burt, way up in Massachusetts, and they were greatly admired.

Trade has been about as usual the past week. Nothing very rushing and yet enough funeral work, etc., to keep things moving. Roses are getting better right along and so are carnations, while outside flowers are fast disappearing. Mums will be in soon, and in fact Baur & Smith have already cut a few Lady Fitzwygram and others will follow soon.

On the 17th Miss Minnie Hack was married to Mr. J. Gruenwald, and they will in the future make their home at Maywood. Mrs. Gruenwald has been tending her father's stand on the market and became acquainted with most every florist in the city, and her friends are many. A. B.

INCREASING BOILER CAPACITY.

Is it practicable to put ten 4-inch pipes on bottom of boiler in order to get more heating capacity? Boiler is 54-inch shell, 14 feet long and has 34 flues. My idea was that it would increase the heating capacity of boiler one-third. The boiler has to heat 44,688 square feet of glass to 55 degrees at night and 60 to 65 degrees during the day. We carry a low pressure—5 to 8 lbs. It has carried same amount in weather above zero, but if adding pipes is practicable I would like to increase the heating capacity in preference to adding another boiler. Pipes to screw in boiler at bottom, using T end, making one entrance do for two pipes. Boiler is arranged so that heat goes first to rear end and then returns through flues and out to chimney.

S. J. P.

Replying to S. J. P., I very much question the practicability of adding heating surface to the boiler in question in the manner he describes. The heating surface in such boilers is seldom, if ever, in excess of the amount required to maintain a proper ratio with the area of the grates, and any additional heating surface placed as he suggests would require either additional grate surface or an increased height to the smoke stack to induce stronger draft, and also more frequent firing, which intense firing would have an injurious effect upon the boiler; it would be better to install a second boiler to do the additional work, connecting the two to common mains.

New York. Henry W. Gibbons.

PAINTING STEAM PIPES.

Have just given the interior of my houses a fresh coat of white paint. The steam pipes look very unsightly. How can I whiten them permanently without affecting radiation? C. L. D.

Replying to C. L. D., we know of no white paint which can be used satisfactorily on the steam pipes of a commercial greenhouse. If it is desired to paint them for appearance only, use lamp black and turpentine with just enough oil to give it a body, but, if the intense black color is objectionable, a little white lead might be added to give a gray or slate color tint; if, however, the paint is to preserve the pipes, a coat of red lead should first be used.

Mr. Theron N. Parker,
Parker-Bruen Mfg. Co.
Dear Sir: I have used your Wire Carnation Supports for the last two years, in all about 12,000. They fill the bill in every particular. Nothing could be more satisfactory, and it would give me a great deal of pleasure if I can bespeak a good word for you to the trade, and you are at liberty to refer to me at any time.
Yours very truly,
A. L. Thorne.

Theron N. Parker,
Harrison, N. J.
Dear Sir:—After using your Model carnation support in two of our houses the past winter we have come to the conclusion that it is perfectly adapted to supporting carnation plants and shall use them on all our plants the coming season. We were much pleased with the simplicity, strength and neat appearance of the support. Yours truly,

MISCELLANEOUS SEASONABLE HINTS.

Poinsettias.

This is about the last week that you can disturb the roots of poinsettias. No matter how carefully you may shift them, the roots will feel it and the leaves will drop. So give the plants that you want to flower singly in a 6-inch pot their last shift. Since we have been growing three plants in a 10-inch pot, or seven or eight late propagated plants in a 10 or 12-inch pan, the single stem in a 6-inch pot is not in much favor. We find use for all sizes and grow a good many in 4-inch pots, keeping them as dwarfed as possible. One of the most effective center pieces we ever put up was a mass of poinsettias. The table was round, twelve feet across, and the bed of poinsettias was six feet across, beginning with plants a foot high and coming down to plants not more than 6 or 8 inches high, with well berried holly to hide the pots. It was around Xmas time and Admiral Sampson was the guest of honor. It took several hundred plants, but they were little the worse and did service again.

To keep these poinsettias dwarfed is the principal object. Pot firmly in a heavy but rich soil and give them the lightest and brightest bench you have, with plenty of ventilation whenever weather will permit. They are a tropical plant, but 60 degrees at night is all they want. I am not sure whether I have ever mentioned what we have found out about keeping cut poinsettias from drooping or wilting their bracts and foliage. If cut with two feet of stem and put in cold water and in a cool room or cellar or ice box they soon have the appearance of a wet hen, only not so useful. Cut them over night and put the stems in water at a temperature of 150 degrees and keep in a warm room. They will stand up stiff, leaf and branch.

Cyclamen.

If you have grown your cyclamen in a frame or hotbed, it is time now to bring them in where they are more under your eye. We have some this year that are not prize plants because the seed was not sown until the end of January. We also have some earlier and larger ones, but I like the late sown batch because they are compact and perfectly healthy. They have never been out of the houses; were shaded when the sun was bright and the shade removed on dull days, and since they were in 2-inch pots they have always been plunged in tobacco stems. Greenfly is their great enemy. Don't let up on the tobacco, and if plunged in it it will save you lots of smoking. Syringe lightly every fine morning. Fifty-five at night is the temperature for those that you want in bloom by November and on to the holidays, but cyclamen will thrive in a much lower temperature if you want to retard them for late flowering. For filling the Christmas plant baskets we found last year that well flowered cyclamen in 4 and 5-inch pots was among the best material we had. Little, if any, shading is needed after this, and if in a north and south house, none.

Asparagus.

More and more are loose bunches of roses and chrysanthemums asked for, and some loose green to go with them is constantly wanted. Maidenhair fern, even the splendid fronds of Adiantum Bardii as grown by Peter Crowe is not large enough for all purposes, and for many occasions I don't know that it is any more suitable or pretty than Asparagus plumosus or Sprengeri. The former is grown in immense quantities for the long strings and you usually rob the bottom of the plant of the short growths. Sprengeri you should grow anywhere you have a corner to spare. What it wants is deep root room. In a shallow bench it soon gets exhausted. As fine and continuous a lot as I ever saw with sprays 3 feet long, and in the same place from October to July, was in boxes about 16 inches deep and 8 inches wide and 2 feet long. There was the depth that the roots wanted. These boxes were standing beneath the gutters in a range of rose houses. But that is not the only place you have. There are many odd places where a few boxes can be stood. It is depth and richness of soil that will pay. It is not too late yet to start such boxes. You want this useful plant every day in the year.

Sweet Alyssum.

Another very common little plant we often neglect to grow and miss it, is the double sweet alyssum. I see it advertised as the "Giant double." I don't know much about the giant part of it, but it is the double form you want, and if giant monstrosa, so much the better. It is of the greatest use in funeral designs, and there is something about it that is tasty and by no means gives a cheap appearance when associated with larger flowers. I would hardly say occupy a bench with it, as I have seen done, but a few hundred plants 2 or 3 feet apart along the edge of your carnation benches will do them no harm and the alyssum will be clear profit.

Ferns.

I suppose you have already laid in a good stock of young ferns for filling the pans this winter. There are plenty advertised now, but in the middle of winter they are often scarce and difficult to procure of the useful size. These young ferns of small varieties and species, such as onychium, Davallia stricta, Pteris cretica and others, should not be in a cool draughty house. Neither should they be in a very warm, damp house or they will grow too fast and become too tender, and you don't want that for fern pans. A fairly light house where the temperature ranges between 55 and 60 degrees at night is about right. And keep them in 2½, or at least 3-inch pots as long as you possibly can.

When Nephrolepis Piersoni gets spread over the country and can be sold at the same price as Bostoniensis, there will be nothing else grown, but that won't be this winter, and the Boston fern is still in the field. Any you have planted on the benches should be lifted and potted at once, so they will be established. Some growers don't plant them out at all. When first lifted they will want shade for two weeks, and after that no shade. The nephrolepis, or at least the Boston variety, needs no shade any day in the year. We have had large plants out of doors in the full sun all summer, and the young fronds are as green as spinach in April.

A very good house fern, hard to kill, is Cyrtomium falcatum, so called because the division of the frond resembles a falcon's beak. It is one of the best ferns.

Perhaps the best of all large decorative ferns is Cybotium Scheidei. It does not have the appearance of being a very tough, everyday fern, it is so graceful and even soft in appearance, yet it is the very best of all ferns to put up with unfavorable surroundings, and this makes it one of the best for decorating. We have tried it in a dry store near the floor and near the ceiling, and it thrives anywhere, and all should have it.

Don't forget to dust your violets once a week with tobacco dust. It will keep the black aphis away, and now is the time the black demon would like to work.

William Scott.

CORRECTION.

In Mr. Scott's notes on lilies on page 567 of our last issue the date for bringing in the Bermuda bulbs should have read 1st to middle of November instead of April. The error was probably apparent to all as in the next paragraph was mentioned the temperature to give them "till the first of February."

ROSES.

Care of Blooms After Cutting.

The first and most essential condition towards the successful preservation of cut blooms for shipment is to have a good cold store, one constructed on the best up-to-date plan, the qualities of which must combine dryness and airiness, and the chamber of which must be sufficiently isolated from the influence of outside atmospheric conditions. The idea of having such a chamber in a cellar or partly under ground is obsolete, or ought to be, as in such a structure the vitiated air being so much heavier than the pure, is always nearest the floor, and having no means of escape causes that damp mouldiness so detrimental to cut blooms.

The modern structure is built so that the floor is fifteen or twenty inches above the surrounding surface. The walls, which should be about ten feet to ceiling, are built with a view to being as non-conductive as is necessary. In the center of the walls is an air space of four inches between two boards one inch thick; these boards are paper covered, then on each side of this space is another space of four inches which can be filled in with either saw dust, dry coal ashes, charcoal or, what is still better, although it adds materially to the cost, asbestos wool. Both sides of the wall should be covered with paper and the inside finished with dressed sheathing, the outside with German siding. The ceiling should be constructed on the same principle as the walls.

Along the sides of the chamber and close to the floor holes one foot square should be made to allow the vitiated air to escape, and holes of the same size should be made near to the ceiling to admit fresh air. These holes should be about six feet apart and have close fitting doors on both outside and inside of the chamber, so they can be readily opened and closed.

At one end and near to the ceiling should be placed the filling door and made large enough to admit an ordinary block of ice. This door, and also the entrance door, should be built on the same isolating principle as the walls. From this door the rack to hold the ice should extend nearly the full length of the chamber, and should be made of 2x4 scantling, dressed, running lengthwise, with three-inch spaces between, and with a slight incline to facilitate filling.

A zinc lined drip pan should be placed some six inches below the rack and erected in such a way that it can be tipped over for a periodic cleaning. From the bottom of the drip pan a pipe should be run to a drain outside to carry off all the water, as the less water spilled in the chamber so much easier can the temperature be regulated. By keeping the ice near the ceiling the cold air descending from the ice gets qualified before coming in contact with the blooms. The floor should be of concrete, with a finish of pure cement, so that it will absorb as little moisture as possible.

With an intelligent night man the temperature of such a structure can be regulated with the nicety and precision of a greenhouse. To facilitate the sorting and to lessen the handling of the cut as much as possible, a box should be made of thin wood and of such a shape that the blooms can be placed in it so they can be readily lifted from it and put into water before the wound has had time to dry. I have recently had propounded to me several questions concerning the right temperature of the water to be used for this purpose. Before concluding this article I will give some rules for the guidance of those who have not themselves experimented along these lines.

The temperature of the sorting room should never be higher than the house the cut came from, in fact it is safer to have it a degree or two less. The blooms should be assorted according to size, quality, length of stem, etc., into specials, firsts, seconds and culls. These last comprise all small, short-stemmed and off color blooms which cannot be otherwise graded. The jars for holding the cut should be of stoneware and large enough to hold fifty blooms without crowding.

The temperature of the cold room should never be allowed to get lower than 48 degrees, ranging from that to 52 degrees, above which temperature they will soon go wrong. After being in storage for twenty-four hours the cut should be taken out, reassorted, have half an inch of the stem cut off to make a fresh wound so that they can again absorb a fresh supply, and have the water changed. In forty-eight hours they begin to enter on the salted stage, and the less of this kind of stock a grower handles so much the more satisfactory will it be both for himself and his customer.

Regarding the right temperature of water to be used for storage purposes. Care should be taken not to give the cut a sudden chill by putting them in water which is too cold, nor to raise their temperature with hot water previous to putting them in the cold room. A safe rule to go by is to strike a medium between the temperature of the house they were grown in and the temperature of the cold room. Thus, if the temperature of the house they were grown in is 56 degrees and that of the storeroom 50 degrees, the water should be 53 degrees. As water approaches its greatest density at about 41 degrees, it should never be used near or below that point for storing the cut from a greenhouse. These last remarks apply with even more force to carnation blooms, they being more sensitive to sudden changes than roses are, thousands being sent to sleep daily by inattention to these seemingly trivial matters. Ribes.

GRUB WORMS.

We have a house of roses that have been attacked by grub worms. The worms did not seem to do any harm till lately, when suddenly they began to cut off all the roots of the plants right near the stems, and as a result the plants so injured died. It is a trouble I have never seen or heard of before. There were a few worms in the soil when it was taken in. We picked out all we could see, but undoubtedly some escaped. We have often before seen them in the manure taken into the houses, but in previous seasons have never suffered any damage from them. Is there any way of getting rid of them? Can anything be done, or will they leave in time?

Also please state what causes club root. J. B.

I know of no sure way of destroying these grubs except by hunting for them in the soil. Keep a sharp eye on the plants and whenever you see the least sign of wilting in the young foliage, search around in the soil and you will invariably find the grub.

As these same grubs frequently come on the surface and eat the bark around the neck of the plant, it might be well to try a mixture of paris green and finely sifted bran scattered over the bench. It is harmless to plants and worth a trial.

Club root is caused by some insect attacking the roots, eel-worm being a very prolific source of this trouble. I have as yet learned of no remedy which will destroy the worms without also destroying the plants. They, like the grubs, are brought into the house with the soil.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS.

are reported as coming into the market in several localities, but the price, 4 to 10 cents each, is nothing to boast of. The varieties that can be got in by this date are such kinds as Fitzwygram, Marquis de Montmort, and Madame Gastelier. Whether it pays to bother with them those who are at present shipping know best, but I could never see any money in September flowers myself, and have had sufficient flowers to ship in quantity by Sept. 1. This has been a great aster year, and a first-class aster is just as good as an early mum, often better in fact, so that under the circumstances the present low prices are inevitable.

The time to catch the market with your first flowers is just after a killing frost, when all the outside stock is wiped out. This is generally about the first or second week in October, and at that time the market is almost destitute, as indoor roses and carnations are not yet producing to any extent. I have seen good flowers of Merry Monarch bring $5 a dozen just at that time, and a week later when more varieties were available prices would be cut in two. It is simply a question of supply and demand, but from my own experience I would not recommend any one to look on very early flowers as a profitable crop.

Of course there are some other things to take into consideration beside the crop of mum flowers when figuring up the returns for bench space. If you clear out your benches early in October it gives room for storing many bedding plants that have been dragged in hurriedly and stuck everywhere when frost threatened, or carnations can be immediately planted in the vacant space. Every man is the best judge of his own market, and where one man would come out all right another would lose.

The later varieties are coming along in good shape, though the excessive rains of the past week are conducive to the rapid spread of leaf spot. Very many varieties are showing color, and now is the time to be absolutely certain that the plants are free from aphis. It is impossible to fumigate without injury when flowers are half developed. Mrs. Coombes is making enormous buds, and this, combined with a very free habit of growth, leads us to hope that a worthy rival of V.-Morel is at last in the field. Lady Harriet is coming along very rapidly and looks as though it would be in before Robinson. I have seen some wonderful buds well advanced on the new Adrian. How they will finish is yet a problem, since the introducers recommend terminal buds instead of crowns for this variety.

Crown buds on Eaton are already two inches across, with no sign yet of petals. Some record flowers may again be looked for. Overhead syringing must be stopped when buds swell out like this, or many of them will rot, owing to the water lodging in the center. Jeannie Falconer is another variety that one should be careful in syringing, as its large flat bud holds the water like a saucer.

Terminal buds on any variety are more pointed, and consequently the bud seldom rots in this manner. Merza is showing very fine buds, just beginning to color. It is a pity that this variety keeps so poorly after being cut, for it has a perfect finish. H. J. Jones has done specially well with several growers and this variety will probably make a sensation this year. When Childs and all the other reds are burning up with the sun, Jones will not lose a petal. I think it will become the standard red when better known.

The mum house just now is the Mecca to which the faithful turn. Nothing is so interesting as to watch the development of the flowers, wondering whether this bud was not taken too early, or why this variety is so slow this year. Some of our growers are kept too busy this year bending the stems in every direction to keep the flowers down from the glass to do much wondering. Some varieties have certainly gone "up in the air,"

owing, of course, to the cool, moist summer. Whether such long stems will produce as good flowers as usual remains to be seen. BRIAN BORU.

POEHLMANN BROS. CO.

We present in this issue a number of views of the establishment of Poehlmann Bros. Co. at Morton Grove, Ill., near Chicago. Though the establishment ranks among the largest producing cut flowers for the Chicago market, it has not before been illustrated. There are really two distinct ranges. The main range, shown in the largest picture, is within a stone's throw of the railway station; the smaller range is a few blocks away. A full line of cut flowers is grown—chrysanthemums, lilies and a general line of bulbous flowers being produced in addition to an immense quantity of roses and carnations.

The company is a corporation, but is entirely controlled by three brothers. John, the president, presides at the city salesroom, 35 Wabash avenue, Chicago; August, the secretary and treasurer, and Adolph H., the vice-president, superintend the growing at Morton Grove. All are young men, energetic and progressive, and are rapidly expanding their already large business.

Of late years they have branched out into the rooted cutting and plant business and have marketed surprising quantities. As can be seen by the pictures, their facilities for handling stock in a wholesale way are ample.

CARNATIONS.

Stem-Rot.

Can you give any information as to the cause and remedy of stem-rot in carnations? We had about 2,300 plants in field and lost about 100 from stem-rot in field and since planting in greenhouses have lost 200 more. Thinking it was entirely in own stock, we purchased some and they were soon affected in same manner. We have tried every known remedy and preventive, all to no avail. Have used a thick coating of wood ashes on part of our houses and lime on other parts and left parts of benches free from either lime or ashes. Then we worked trenches between rows and watered part of bench heavily and another part remained almost dry. We gave plenty of ventilation and it seems as though the healthiest looking plants succumb first.

Our plants were grown in sod soil out of doors which was very loose, almost a mold of rotted blue grass sod. This same kind of soil with manure was used in benches. Could the disease come from the soil or is it more likely that the disease was among rooted cuttings of carnations we bought in spring, and would the disease spread among other carnations which we had shipped in after same are planted in same house with those already affected with stem-rot? G. & S.

After reading your communication I am inclined to think that the bottom of the trouble lies in the soil. It very often happens that carnations planted in sod ground which is not thoroughly cultivated first will be affected with stem-rot. The fact that not only your own cuttings but those you bought were attacked with equal severity goes to show that it is not the stock. Of course it is possible that the disease was in both lots. There is another thing, however, that might be the cause of the trouble. Are the plants set in the soil deeper than they were in the field? This is about as often the cause of stem-rot among carnations as anything I know of. Examine your plants and if they seem to be set too deep scrape some soil off the benches.

You have done about all any one could do to check the disease, and I can only advise you to keep everlastingly at it. You cannot tell but what you have saved a good many more plants from being attacked. Be careful to keep the stems and foliage as dry as possible, but do not allow the roots to suffer for water; give plenty of ventilation day and night and when the weather is damp fire up and run a steam pipe to keep the air dry. If it is too warm raise the ventilators. In the evening of rainy days take your bellows and blow some Grape-dust or Fostite or mix sulphur and lime in equal portions and blow the air full of this to purify it.

If you plant other plants in place of those that have died out you should take out all the soil you can without injuring the plants next to the one that died and put in fresh soil to plant the new plant in. I would not advise G. & S. to mulch these carnations at least until next spring, but I would depend entirely on liquid manure for feeding this winter. I might also say right here that I believe the bottomless pots will help materially to keep down stem-rot, because they allow a free circulation of air and in case of an attack you can water only the soil on the benches and have the soil in the pots and the stems perfectly dry. We have found this out by personal experience and know it to be a fact. Outside of this we have never been able to find any advantage in the use of these bottomless pots.

A. F. J. Baur.

Twisted Growth on Joost.

What causes the twisted growth on Joost carnation? A good deal of the new growth comes curled or twisted, some of the flower buds being deformed. We have noticed it on Scott also. Both varieties are affected some in the field. A good many growers speak of the trouble. We notice that the plants grow out of it after getting established. Does any one know of a remedy or preventive? Several Inquirers.

I cannot say positively what might be the cause of your carnations coming with twisted growth in the field without having a specimen before me. The fact that it grows out of it in the house inclines me to believe that it is not caused by a disease, but rather by some insect or grub or the condition of the soil and weather. We have never been troubled in that way, and so I cannot speak from experience; but examine your plants and see if you cannot find something that is feeding on the sap of the young stems, or dig in the soil and look for grub worms. Too much manure and water and a very hot sun might also be the cause of it. A. F. J. Baur.

Fairy-Ring.

Please tell me the best remedy for carnation rust. I have a bed of Mrs. Fisher for summer blooming that were the first to show the rust, and my winter carnation plants were grown close to them. The latter were housed August 25 and did not show any sign of rust until about a week ago. It has appeared on a few plants in different parts of the house, which contains 1,000 plants. I have commenced to use the solution of potassium sulphide you recommended for mums. Is that right, and if so, how often should I apply it?

Subscriber.

The disease that is affecting the carnations is not what is usually called rust, but is what we call Fairy-ring spot, and is caused by a fungus. He did quite right in spraying them with a solution of potassium sulphide or any other fungus destroyer. If it does not seem to check the disease he might try the copper solution. I would apply it about twice each week at first and if it seems to be checked after a few weeks I would continue to apply it once each week for a few weeks longer. Apply it to the whole batch of plants, as it will help to stop the disease from breaking out in new spots. Wherever he sees a diseased branch he should cut it off and burn it, as it will spread if left on the plants. Give all the air possible and keep the plants dry except when applying the fungicide, as like most all other fungus diseases it requires moisture to make it active. Pick all the open blooms before applying the fungicide, as it will discolor them. A. F. J. Baur.

Carnations in House with Roses.

Will it do to have carnations in the same house with roses? That is, will the sulphur on the pipes hurt the carnations? I have a bench 60 feet long and a rose bench same length, also a bench of same length containing miscellaneous pot plants. When I get my new house done will move the pot plants into it and put the present one all into carnations, roses, or both. M. W. B.

I would not advise you to plant roses and carnations in the same house, because either the one or the other will be sure to be a failure. The two require conditions so widely different that if you suit the one you injure the other. In the first place, your roses want 58 to 60 degrees, while your carnations want 50 to 55 degrees; 55 degrees will not be warm enough to grow roses profitably, while 58 degrees will cause your carnations to grow soft, with small blooms and weak stems. If you give enough ventilation to suit your carnations you will continually have your roses full of mildew, and if you keep the temperature high enough and moist enough for roses you will again have your carnations soft and worthless in general. The sulphur of which you seem afraid will not injure your carnations in the least.

It would pay you much better to plant your house with either the one or the other and then buy what blooms you need of the one you do not grow. If you have your new house finished in time you should of course plant your roses in the one house and the carnations in the other, or if your new house will not be finished for another month and you have the carnation plants on your hands, pot them in 4 or 5-inch pots and then plant them on the benches as soon as you get the house ready.

Judging by your letter, it would seem as though you haven't your roses planted yet. If you have not you would do far better to plant all your space in carnations. It is early enough yet to have fairly good success with carnations that are planted now or right soon, but you cannot have good success with roses that are planted in October. Next season I would advise you to arrange one house for roses and the other for carnations. You can grow much of your pot stuff in a carnation temperature, but some of your plants will want a rose temperature, and so you see you will be ahead all around. A. F. J. Baur.

Dry Stem-Rot.

I send some branches of Lawson carnation. Upon examining the stem you will find part of it dried up. This spreads and results in the decay of the whole branch. What is the origin of the trouble and how can it be prevented? The carnations were planted on the benches out of pots, but the decay is also to be found on plants grown in the field.

M. S.

The branches sent have not yet reached me, but from the description I can plainly see that the trouble is due to what we know as dry stem-rot. We have had an occasional plant attacked by this disease, but never enough to do any serious damage, and so we have never sought a remedy. When we see a plant affected with this disease we jerk it out at once and burn it, to avoid any chance of the disease spreading.

It is a fungous disease, and no doubt the copper solution or the potassium solution would help to check it. This disease is not caused by moisture, and so I don't think that dusting lime or sulphur or anything of that nature would help matters any. A few years ago we thought that by cutting away the diseased branch considerably below the affected part we could save the plant, but we found that in most cases the entire plant soon went, too.

CARNATION NOTES—EAST.

Prevention of Disease.

In my notes last week reference was made to the use of Grape Dust. I wish to say further that this preparation is an excellent preventive of disease. Having seen it extensively used by rose growers and in graperies, it occurred to me that it might be of benefit to the growing of carnations. After a trial on a small scale the result is that rust is absent except in two new varieties purchased last spring. Other ailments have also been less prevalent; in fact, our plants have improved from year to year.

I do not claim that this is altogether owing to the use of Grape Dust, but it has been an important factor in dispelling fungus disease and to my mind it has aided in stamping out rust. Apply at intervals of two or three weeks when the plants are dry, at the time of day when the houses are the warmest. If possible choose a bright day following one in which you have watered. By this means the preparation is allowed ample time to extend its influence before another watering.

A thorough spraying with Bordeaux mixture twice during October will greatly assist in keeping the foliage healthy, and as the leaves of a plant are its lungs, it is evident that this is an important operation. Use a spray pump arranged with a nozzle capable of making a fog enveloping the whole plant. As this is a liquid, apply early in the morning of a bright day, choosing a time as before mentioned regarding Grape Dust. Your judgment will tell you to plan the operations to occur by alternation.

It is a good plan to paint some of your pipe with a mixture of lime and sulphur as soon as firing is begun. You must decide as to the amount of surface to be covered, for when steam is used less will answer than when hot water is employed, the object being to diffuse a faint odor of sulphur through the house. Slake the lime in hot water, adding the sulphur as soon as violent boiling ceases; stir thoroughly until mixed and apply at once. We use one pound of sulphur to four gallons of wash, allowing the mixture when done to be somewhat thicker than ordinary whitewash.

See to it that the space under the benches are free from rubbish, such as decayed wood, dried leaves, broken pots, etc., which if allowed to remain are sure to harbor insect pests as well as become a breeding ground for fungous diseases. Give the ground under the benches a generous coat of air-slaked lime.

It is wrong conditions that produce all ills the human flesh is heir to and so it is with plants. People often say: "I don't have any luck with plants." Neither do successful carnation growers. The secret is their ability to produce proper conditions suitable to the growth of that particular plant, and when those conditions have been brought about it will not be a question of selling the product, but rather who will get it.

Pardon the slight digression, but I feel that prevention of disease is not practiced to the extent it should be, especially when our hybridizers are putting forth every effort at present to produce healthy, fine blooded stock, which of necessity must be kept healthy to remain in the class to which it belongs.

Not being a believer in the coddling of plants, or classing myself as a plant doctor, but preferring rather to associate with healthy life of either high or low order, prevention is everything.

CARNATION NOTES—WEST.

If you find any blooms that show signs of thrips in your carnation houses you should lose no time in getting after them in earnest. They can not stand the fumes of tobacco, but the regular fumigating once each week will not suffice to destroy them after they have a foothold and so you must get after them in a more effective manner. If you began fumigating regularly as soon as your plants had taken a good hold your houses will be tolerably free from these parasites, but so many growers don't see why they should fumigate their houses unless they can see a lot of greenfly all over the plants. Greenfly seldom seems to bother us until well along toward winter, but the destructive little thrips remain with us the year round and need attention at almost any time. You will readily see the results of his work by the white spots in your pink and red blooms and the brown spots in your white ones.

I do not know whether the various tobacco preparations will kill thrips or not, but I do know that the smoke from tobacco stems, or dust will do the work, and that a tablespoonful of cayenne pepper sprinkled over the tobacco will help to make it more effective. Pick all the blooms before you fumigate, and as soon as you are through give all the air you can so as to get rid of the smell as soon as possible. Carnations will take up the tobacco odor and hold it for a day or two and so you can not fumigate every day if you want to have salable blooms, but by picking the blooms just before you fumigate you can fumigate every other day. Keep it up until you are sure you are rid of the pest and then by fumigating regularly once each week you can keep your plants free from them.

GENISTAS AND ADIANTUMS.

M. W. B. says his genistas are losing their foliage after turning yellow and that his "maidenhair" ferns are dying, and would like to know what he has or has not done. He says he has kept all his ferns wet and may have wet the foliage of the "maidenhairs."

Supposing the genistas to be canariensis or racemosus, they are an easy plant to grow. They do not make much growth in the hot months. Most of their growth is made in the early spring, fall and winter. Never plant them out. One-year-old plants we sometimes plunge in a frame during summer. Winter propagated plants we like to grow indoors during summer. In the hot weather they should be often syringed, for they are ever ready to be attacked by red spider, and this I think is the trouble with M. W. B.'s plants. When winter sets in they want a cool house; 45 degrees at night is about right.

It is quite difficult to say what is the matter with the "maidenhair" ferns. They should never want syringing; still, in warm weather an occasional syringing should do them little harm. They want a moderate amount of water, about as the great majority of plants do.

Slugs are their great enemy, and air-slaked quick lime dusted over the fronds and on the crown of the plants is the best and most effective remedy. With ordinary treatment the fronds of "maidenhair" ferns should not turn brown till they ripen with age, except from one cause, and that is tobacco smoke. It is just possible that M. W. B. has been fumigating the house containing the ferns. Great cure-all that tobacco smoke is, it very quickly browns and shrivels up adiantum fronds.

AILANTHUS GLANDULOSA.

I enclose sample of foliage and seed of a tree which I wish you would give the name of in the Review. Also the best way to grow it from seed. Is it a good tree for shade and as an ornamental tree for parks? Subscriber.

The tree is Ailanthus glandulosa (Desf.), called "Tree of Heaven," introduced some years ago from China. It is fairly hardy in this region though exceptionally severe winters in some places kill many of the older trees.

It is of rapid growth and fine appearance and does well in cities as an ornamental and shade tree, reaching 30 to 35 feet, with an open, airy head. Some of the trees bear seed and others have only staminate flowers which are rather ill-smelling. The seed-bearing flowers are not so malodorous.

Ailanthus can be easily propagated by slips of the root. Nurserymen advertise to supply the female or seed-bearing tree for about one-fourth more than staminate or seedling kind. Ailanthus seems to grow readily from seed and is not select as to soil, doing well in almost any situation. In a light, humid soil and somewhat sheltered location it will make very rapid growth.

If intended for sale it would be advisable to propagate from roots of seed-producing trees for the reason given above, though the odor of the flowers does not cause any inconvenience in the parks of this city.

BULBS FOR WINDOW BOXES.

Please advise me what kind of early spring flowering bulbs will do best in window boxes, and whether the boxes can be left in the windows all winter. They are on west side of building, second story, and have no protection whatever. Party wants tulips, Dutch hyacinths, narcissus, etc. Southern Indiana.

I know of no early spring flowering bulbs that will be at all satisfactory under such conditions as the above. Freesias might do fairly well planted in the boxes, but if "Party" wants to have tulips, hyacinths and narcissus in February, March and April they must be given seven or eight weeks' time in which to root, either out of doors or in a cool, dark cellar.

We presume that Southern Indiana knows how to treat the bulbs for his own use, and he must persuade his customer to borrow a small corner out of doors somewhere in which to keep the boxes while the bulbs are forming roots. Without it the bulbs will send up small, premature flowers. They should not be brought into the room before the early part of February.

Any of the Dutch hyacinths will be satisfactory, so will the narcissus. The tulips should be the varieties that are often named in these pages as the best for forcing. If desired to have some tulips in the month of April, then several double varieties might be added. Murillo, La Candeur, Tournesol, Rex Rubrorum or any of the varieties sold as early double. Roman hyacinths, paper white narcissus, the polyanthus narcissus and the gay early little crocus will flower in the window providing there is a comfortable temperature and the bulbs are rooted before being brought in.

PALMS.

My palms are opening their leaves too near to the heart of the plant, and with little or no stem. What is the matter and what is the remedy?

How may plants in a greenhouse be watered without soiling the blooms and at the same time cleansing the foliage?

A. B. P.

Without knowing what species of palms are referred to, it is somewhat difficult to answer this query intelligently, but speaking in a general way such a condition is likely to arise from a check to the growth, and this may be due to starvation at the roots, either from the use of poor soil or from allowing the plants to remain in the same pots for too long a time. An insufficient supply of water during the summer may also cause this short-stemmed growth, and is in fact the cause of many failures in palm growing.

If the plants are very much rooted I should repot them as soon as possible, so that they may become established before winter sets in; keep them fairly moist, and place them in a house where a night temperature of 65 degrees is kept during the winter, this temperature being a suitable one for most of the palms in common use.

In regard to the watering of plants that are in bloom, it may be said that they cannot well be watered overhead to any great extent without more or less injury to the flowers, and unless one is expert in handling the hose it is the safest plan to do the watering of such plants with a watering can, the cleansing of the foliage being a part of the culture that should more properly be done before the flowers begin to open.

CHRYSANTHEMUM SOCIETY OF AMERICA.

The November Show and Meeting in Chicago.

"When the hurly-burly's done, when the battle's fought and won," among our eastern growers in their several cities, there comes the great show in Chicago, November 11 to 15, and the convention of the C. S. A. The time is fast approaching and the moment is opportune for reminding all growers of this important occasion. There are now so many chrysanthemum shows held each year that our individual interest and support usually centers in the show of our own immediate locality, but a national importance attaches to the Chicago Horticultural Society's show this year. Chrysanthemum growers, therefore, throughout the country should make a united effort both by exhibiting and by their presence, first to make the largest and most complete exhibition of this flower we have ever seen, and next to swell the ranks of membership in the national society and launch it safely on a prolonged voyage, with every important city scheduled as a future port of call.

A great show in Chicago is already an assured fact, thanks to the comprehensive and liberal schedule drawn up and distributed several months ago. But outside of the actual competitive classes there are ways and means by which we may amplify the show and materially enhance its scope. If limitations of distance debar some of us in the east from entering in competition, we can at least contribute an exhibit, and small though it might be, the aggregate of a number of growers would be considerable. We want representation from every possible district. It is almost needless to point out what a golden opportunity is here presented for a great assemblage of new varieties present and prospective, and all who have them should make a timely note of the fact and endeavor to show them at Chicago.

Last, but by no means least, we want attendance from every section, and an early intimation of intention to attend, so that reduced rates of travel may be secured. An invitation has already been extended to the writer and will be tendered to the C. S. A. at the proper time and place for a chrysanthemum convention in an eastern city next year, but sufficient for the present is the coming convention, and it is "up to us" to make this new departure in the policy of the C. S. A. all that it should be. A successful November meeting is essential to the life of the C. S. A. in the future. Let us combine to make the first one it holds command attention and merit support hereafter.

PACKING AND SHIPPING LETTUCE.

Please advise in the columns of your valuable paper as to the best modern methods employed in packing and shipping lettuce to market. Market is within twenty miles of forcing houses. We wish to ship Grand Rapids and head lettuce. Plants are grown in benches and not in pots. No. 404.

The first thing for your correspondent to do is to hunt up his prospective agent and find out from him what style of box or barrel is generally used in shipping lettuce to that market. It is not a wise policy to ship in any different receptacle than the market is accustomed to handling. It may seem that anything would do to ship in as long as the goods were first class, but it is a fact that dealers greatly prefer to stick to what they are accustomed.

Boxes holding three or four dozen are used in Boston, while New York runs to barrels. The lettuce should be taken up with the roots left on but cleaned of soil. In packing a barrel, which is perhaps the most generally used for shipping, begin at one side and work around, laying the heads on their side and packing in layers. There is not much art in the operation. Simply fill up all the spaces and pack fairly tight without absolutely jamming and the lettuce will travel safely for a far greater distance than your correspondent has to ship.

The Flower Market.

The latest development in the plans for the new market is a very important one, and yet it was not a surprise. For while this piece of news is only just out officially, still it is known all over town, for everyone has been saying to everyone he meets: "Did you know Charlie Meehan is to be the market's manager?" and the answer is always something like this: "Oh, yes; so and so told me. He is just the right man to make it a go."

Charles E. Meehan is a young man who is admirably equipped for the responsible position he has accepted. He is the son of Joseph Meehan, whose wonderful knowledge of trees and shrubs has made him a recognized authority on arboriculture. His training has, however, always been that of a florist, rather than the nurseryman.

He worked for several years, as a boy, under the late Louis C. Baumann, the training school for many of our prominent florists of today, and also under the late David Cliffe. Mr. Meehan then became salesman for John Burton, and in this position he earned a reputation for integrity, ability and judgment that placed him in the front rank of rising young men in our business.

About twelve years ago Mr. Meehan started in business for himself, building two greenhouses at Slocum and Musgrove streets, Germantown. He was successful from the start, his roses doing phenomenally well the first year. He now has ten greenhouses, containing probably 25,000 feet of glass, devoted to roses and a variety of plants and flowers. Mr. Meehan has always sold his own flowers, believing this end of the business to be of the greatest importance. He is fortunate in having the aid of a good foreman, Joseph Slaughter, who with the aid of several capable young men, always keeps the place in good trim and full of thrifty stock.

Reply to a Critic.

"K.," in his Philadelphia letter to a contemporary weekly, which appeared Sept. 20, criticises the taste and want of judgment shown in the selection of a location for the flower market in this city. I am a great admirer of Mr. "K.," believing that his bright weekly letters have done much to cement the feeling of comradeship so strong among our florists. It will therefore be seen that it is in no unfriendly spirit that I answer his criticism. Two distinct committees went carefully over the entire field, seeing all the available buildings in the district which they considered sufficiently central. All the temporary directors, after going over the report of the second committee, agreed that the place selected was superior to any other. Despite this fact, they cheerfully went to see a place selected by Mr. "K." before finally committing themselves, but could see no reason for changing their minds.

With regard to the criticism that the place chosen should have been near Sixteenth and Chestnut streets, it must be remembered that the growers and the commission men do not require the same surroundings. The former want, first, to be within easy reach of both railroad terminals, and second, to be as near the local business center as possible—a little north of Market street—in order to attract the uptown buyers. The commission men, on the contrary, consider proximity to the offices of the express companies as of paramount importance. I do not believe that any of the growers, or of the uptown buyers, consider Sixteenth and Chestnut streets as a central location.

Notes.

Bernheimer is getting some very good Queen of Edgely from the Floral Exchange place at Tullytown, also the Helen Gould, or Balduin rose. These, when good, bring 6 cents.

S. S. Pennock is handling a great quantity of dahlias. Last Saturday he sold more than two wagon loads. They came from Peacock, and are there growing by the acre.

The first chrysanthemums of the season were received from De Witt on September 24th by S. S. Pennock, and he had some from Weber & Sons a few days later. He reports the shipping end as keeping up very well, having had an order last week for 200 cattleyas and a quantity of valley. His first shipments of double violets came in on the 29th. The price asked was 50 cents per 100.

Charles H. Fox has closed his Atlantic City hotel for the season and is now at work at his Columbia avenue store painting and getting ready for winter. He says that he had a very prosperous season at the shore.

John Leach, who has been in the west for the past twelve years, has returned to this city. He says the people in the west are hustlers.

Charles H. Miller, the well known landscape engineer at Fairmount Park, in getting out of bed last week broke his hip. Mr. Miller has been in poor health for some time, but was recovering, and it is feared this will be a set-back.

George Faulkner, who has been with Joseph Kift & Son, will in a few days open a store at Fifteenth and Walnut streets.

Charles E. Meehan has withdrawn his interest from the Plender Co., and John C. Gracey will now be sole owner. A number of improvements have been made on this property, including a boiler which heats house, store and greenhouse. Mr. Gracey has also added a new member to his family, and the little lady is receiving bunches of flowers from her admirers already. PHIL.

New Co-Operative Markets.

This feature of floral troubles became even more distorted the past week by an organization being formed by dissatisfied stall-holders at the old market, and others, whose strongest movement was the occupancy of N. F. McCarthy's huge basement. His co-operation made this plan very belligerent indeed to the old market people, who had been simply winking and smiling, so when a committee of dissatisfaction waited upon them they came out much more in detail with their plans, and promised so many reforms for the future so far as space was concerned, that all movements are declared off until January 1st, but the organization is still held in force, perhaps largely in order to co-operate in some other features of the business, like the coal situation, prices, etc.

Coal.

An observant friend criticises me for not mentioning this question, which is surely more burning than the real article itself just at present. I tell him knowledge of the critical danger is too well known to need further ventilation, and there is yet no knowledge of the remedy. A few growers are well supplied for the whole winter, many have enough for a few weeks, and altogether too many have none at all. It is time for thought and action of authority and not for theorizing.

The marriage of John P. A. Guerinean and Annie J. McGowan, both long time employes of Sehlegel & Fottler, celebrated a few days ago, would seem to prove that familiarity does not always breed contempt. J. S. Manter.

Otto G. Koenig, who has been indorsed by the St. Louis Florists' Club for Superintendent of Floriculture at the World's Fair in St. Louis.

OTTO G. KOENIG.

We present herewith a portrait of Mr. Otto G. Koenig, of St. Louis, whom the St. Louis Florists' Club has indorsed for the position of Superintendent of Floriculture at the Louisiana Purchase Exposition, to be held in St. Louis in 1904.

Mr. Koenig was born in St. Louis, September 12, 1871. After leaving school he worked himself up in his father's greenhouse establishment, as floriculture was his chosen profession, all the time attending night-school and college to render himself proficient in any branch of business. At the early age of nineteen years he went east, and without disclosing his identity sought a position at the bottom of the ladder with those he thought were the best growers in Philadelphia, and they certainly had a reputation those days. His experiences there are highly interesting. He always got along well, for the simple reason that he always worked with heart and soul. His ambition was to learn all that there was to learn for his own benefit, which invariably proves to be the employer's benefit. On one occasion, when he was refused employment by a firm where he wished to get some pointers, he went to work for his board, and by the end of the second month he gained the proprietor's confidence to such an extent that he was promoted to assistant foreman, and was asked if there were any more young men in St. Louis that wanted work.

After several years of apprenticeship in this manner he became an active factor in his father's business and is today secretary and treasurer of the Koenig Floral Company. Since he has occupied this position he has wonderfully elevated the condition of the business of the firm, which is greatly due to his love for order and a desire to have everything in the best condition, as well as to his general knowledge pertaining to everything in floriculture. He is very energetic as well as agreeable and intelligent and is liked best by those who have known him longest. He is a Knight Templar and a thirty-second degree Mason, but he keeps out of politics.

Should he receive the appointment of Superintendent of Floriculture at the Exposition his many friends in the trade are certain he would leave no stone unturned to make the department adequately representative of the great progress that has been made in floriculture and a credit to the profession.

The Retail Trade.

The retail trade is steadily increasing each day. Fair counter trade is reported, and there is a great deal of funeral work. On Tuesday last the South St. Louis florists had all they could do in making up designs of all kinds for the funeral of ex-Mayor Ziegenhein. The arrival of Miss Helen Gould, of New York, who is here to organize the Board of Lady Managers for the World's Fair, used up quite a lot of Beauties Tuesday.

Chrysanthemums are beginning to show up in the windows, but are yet small. A few violets can be seen, but are pale and very small. Asters, which made the bulk of the show in our windows, are about over and only very few can be seen. Carnations have had a good call all week and the store men report good sales on them. In roses their stock is made up of Brides, Maids, Meteors, Gates, Carnots, Perles and Beauties. Of these, Beauties had the best call, with Meteors, Brides and Maids next in order. Valley is not carried in stock much, as the sales are slow on it. In greens, smilax and asparagus have been used a great deal the past week.

Notes.

Ostertag Brothers were somewhat disappointed at the failure of President Roosevelt to come to St. Louis, as they were to furnish the decorations, but will make up for it tomorrow (Tuesday), as they will furnish the decorations for the Helen Gould reception at the Southern hotel.

Walter Sanders, son of C. C. Sanders, left Sunday night for New York City to take a position with J. H. Small & Sons, of that city, for some months to learn the ways of the floral business in a large city. The best wishes of the local trade go with him. He hopes that our friend Austin Shaw will look after him occasionally.

Louis Eberenz, a florist living at Webster Groves, was sent to jail for refusing to pay tax on his dog. John Connon, a brother florist, came to his rescue, went on his bond and he was released.

Mr. Ayers, superintendent of floriculture at the fair grounds, reports a number of entries for his floral exhibition, which takes place next week at the St. Louis Fair.

John Zeck, of Chicago, representing J. A. Budlong, is in town looking up his old friends and trade at the same time.

Base Ball.

The Berning Base Ball team is now the undisputed champion among the florists, having defeated the Tessons two out of three games played. Will Sanders, manager of the Bernings, says they are open to play any florist team in the country, Chicago preferred.

Bowling.

The Florists' Bowling Club will hereafter bowl every Monday night at the new Monarch alleys, at Twentieth and Locust. The club will be composed of those who did not join the city tenpin league, which is composed of Weber, Young, Miller, Sanders, Ellis, Adels and Tesson. At the close of the season the league bowlers will join them and make up a team to bowl at Milwaukee next August. As the old saying is "Practice makes perfect," we will wait and see.

Arthur Ellison met Harry Steers, the bowling champion of Chicago, Monday afternoon in a match game. The scores were as follows:

	1.	2.	3.	Tot.	Av.

FRANCISCEA CALYCINA.

We present herewith an engraving from a photograph of a plant of Franciscea calycina, which is said to have shown great adaptability as a house plant. It is a native of Brazil. The foliage is thick and glossy and the flowers a pretty shade of blue, each branch bearing from five to nine buds. The plant illustrated had been in full bloom for two months before being photographed.

The older plants, when apparently through blooming, may be again brought into bloom by cutting them back and inducing fresh growth. The culture of this plant is not difficult. Good leaf mould serves best for soil and the plants like a shady situation. They winter best in a light cold house until they begin to set buds in the spring, at which time they should be freely syringed.

Propagation is not so easily accomplished, but cuttings root very well if the wood is selected from the plants in the right condition through the season of growth.

BUFFALO.

A wet week has been very welcome, as after the deluge of spring and summer a month's dry weather baked things up rather hard.

Business is showing signs of an awakening. A great number of the leading stores have had their "opening," and all have called more or less for the florist's art and articles. September has been very prolific of the events when men and women have been and gone and done it for better or worse, and the crop of weddings for October is advertised as very large—none yet of any great magnitude, but little fish are sweet, so perch fishers say, and I hope these happy events will do every one of us good. As the cool winds of autumn come and the red and golden leaf of the maple flutters to the ground, there is another crop of events, sad where the visitation comes, yet as natural as birth, and which greatly helps the florists' trade, and, as undertakers flippantly remark, "September is a good month."

The new crop of carnations is coming in and Lawson is the best at this date. I hope carnations will keep up as good a price as they did last year. The chief flower in making the florist's window gay of late has been the gladiolus, and none of the innumerable varieties is handsomer than the beautiful Rochester variety, "1900." Where a pale color is wanted of course it wouldn't do, but for its brilliant red and white throat it beats them all. Like many, or most other of our florists' flowers, how few varieties are wanted. Half a dozen varieties would very adequately fill the bill, as they do with roses, carnations and mums. Asters have been very fine this summer and I don't know what we should have done without them. They have been in constant demand for all occasions. Good roses are yet scarce, except very fine varieties. Mums we have not yet seen in color.

Sorry I can't give you more personal notes. Am still in the backwoods and shall have a rare batch of "Florist Society Notes" when I emerge. There have been no births, marriages or deaths within the craft, or we should have heard of them.

Mr. M. Bloy has returned to Buffalo after helping Mr. Neubeck at Corfu for a month.

Mr. John Hetherington has left the employment of W. Scott and has returned to Mr. H. Michel, of St. Louis.

Mr. Kasting got back from Europe some three weeks ago. We heard him but have not seen him. From the voice over the telephone we should say he has spent much of his time in the environment of "Hold Lunnen," as his salutation was, "'Ow are ye, old boy? Awfully glad to hear yer old familiar."

Of our dear friends, the commercial travelers, alias drummers, have neither seen nor heard for a long time. The breed is not extinct, we feel sure, and to make amends for their present scarcity they will come down on us later, as the locusts invaded Egypt. I notice by the very interesting New York letters of Mr. J. A. Shaw that one of the very brightest and brainiest men on the road has hung out his own shingle, as the M. D.'s say. Mr. McHutchison, the much traveled Australian, is bound to thrive anywhere, and if he would take along with him on his initial trip a live specimen of his native Platibus paradoxa, his solicitation for a trial order would be irresistible. W. S.

CINCINNATI.

Various Items.

Notwithstanding the bad weather, which usually puts somewhat of a dampener on business, there is no complaint to be heard from this city.

The Fall Festival, which lasted two weeks, undoubtedly helped the florists' trade, as enormous quantities of cut flowers were used on many occasions. There are very few things that will draw as large a crowd as a well-conducted and advertised flower show. This has been demonstrated many times, and perhaps never more vividly than at the floral contest held in Music Hall last Saturday.

Three prizes were offered for the best lodge emblems made of flowers. These prizes were to be competed for by the lodges themselves, each lodge entering with its own emblem done in natural flowers. The show was a great success and brought out some of the finest floral work ever seen in this city. Each design was a masterpiece and reflected great credit upon its maker.

There were fifteen designs entered, which were made by the following florists: B. P. Critchell, Hoffmeister Floral Co., Walnut Hills Floral Bazaar, T. W. Hardesty, J. Baer, H. D. Edwards, two pieces; Otto Walke, H. Glins, F. Ball, R. A. Betz, two pieces; A. Sunderbruch's Sons, two pieces; J. A. Peterson.

The first prize was won by the Scottish Rite, design being an altar with open bible on top, made by B. P. Critchell. The second prize went to the Blue Lodge. It was a jewel case with lid half open disclosing the Blue Lodge emblem within, made by T. W. Hardesty. The third prize was a large eagle, the emblem of the order of Eagles, and was made by R. A. Betz. There was not a poor piece in the lot, and the judges, who were H. M. Altick of Dayton, Ohio, John Bertermann of Indianapolis, Ind., and C. A. Rieman of Louisville, Ky., had great difficulty in making their decisions.

A few blooms of the carnation Enchantress were received by E. G. Gillett, but owing to having been received a day late, they were hardly in a condition to be criticized. For this time of the year they had a very good stem and the flowers were of first-class size. Looks to be a very good grower.

The W. F. Therkildson Co., of Ironton, Ohio, has bought out the florist business of Mrs. E. Miller, at same place. It will continue the business, adding largely to the area of glass.

Mr. Herbert Heller, of the South Park Floral Co., New Castle, Ind., is here spending his vacation. He brought with him a new rose, called No. 444, at present, of which he thinks a great deal. The color is light yellow at edge of petals, shading to orange at center, has a very good stem and looks to be a great producer. Mr. Heller says that all the large plants about New Castle are in fine shape, and from present indications there will be great quantities of A1 stock cut there this winter.

Other visitors were: Mrs. J. F. Young and daughter, and H. M. Altick of Dayton, Ohio; Mr. Washburn, of Bassett & Washburn, Chicago; John Bertermann of Indianapolis, Ind.; C. A. Rieman, Louisville, Ky. C. J. Ohmer.

NEW YORK.

Few of the retail florists have yet been seen at the weekly auctions. Doubtless a little later the regular auction buyers will be seen, and yesterday several of the critical buyers of decorative plants were on hand at the disposal of the large specimens in the Bottomley shipment from Asheville.

The Bloomingdale Conservatories are being enlarged this fall and the usual fine display of good stock at good prices is already in evidence. Mr. Burnham's management has been a success from the start and his sustaining of prices has commended him to his brethren in the regular retail stores.

Hicks & Crawbuck, of Brooklyn, have opened their New York store at 45 W. Twenty-ninth street, directly opposite Saltford's. Mr. Hicks is presiding on the New York side and has a very neat and attractive place, with good prospects of securing his share of the trade.

All the seed and bulb men have been exceedingly busy during the past week. Shipments are enormous this year and stock never better.

Clucas & Boddington were crowded with stock, even with the added facilities of the new store, and evidently when I called it was "their busy day." We shall have something to say later of their acres of cannas.

The "wholesale cut flower district," which includes Twenty-sixth to Thirtieth streets, was the center of excitement on Saturday, when on Twenty-ninth street, close to several of the florists' establishments, occurred one of the most terrible murders ever known in the country.

The Brooklyn Horticultural Society will meet the third Monday in October. In behalf of the carnation convention in February already a very large sum of money has been subscribed and great preparations for a "banner gathering" are under way. An attendance of at least 300 is expected outside of New York, and it is not generally known that on Long Island alone there are 486 florists in business, every one of whom ought to take an interest.

The Assembly rooms of the Academy of Music will be a grand place for the meeting, and the Union League Club—the largest in the city—will be none too large for the banquet.

The venerable Jas. Mallon, when I called, was superintending the improvements at his headquarters on South street and is looking remarkably well.

Langjahr has about decided to give all his spare time to the interests of the carnation convention and to postpone the opening of a New York wholesale branch until the fall of 1903.

C. H. Joosten is back from the Shawangunk Mountains of Ulster County, the better for his two weeks' fresh air and freedom. His Dutch Romans are going fast, and he considers them better than the French stock, when the higher prices for the latter are taken into account. His American grown, own root rose stock is exceptionally good this year.

H. H. Berger & Co. report a large shortage in Chinese narcissus, only about 30 per cent of orders having been delivered to the importers owing to the cold and drouth in the "far East."

The anniversary services of the Stumpp & Walter Co. are in progress today and congratulations from all sides are numerous and hearty.

"Charlie Arick," as everybody knew him, who 27 years ago commenced his work with Siebrecht & Son, and who later has been with Wadley & Smythe, died of pneumonia, Saturday, September 20, leaving a widow and daughter. He was popular and a good artist. Quite a number of the craft were at his funeral, which was in charge of the Masonic order, and several handsome floral pieces were sent by his old employers and his friends.

Alex. McConnell this week made a very beautiful decoration at the funeral of Mr. Berkmans, of the Tiffany Co., the casket being banked with vases of American Beauties, Kaiserins and other roses, white chrysanthemums, lily of the valley and smilax, nearly fifty vases being used in producing the effect, and over 1,000 of the finest roses; twenty strings of smilax and a pall of cattleyas that was especially beautiful. For several days this decoration was continued.

Mr. McConnell's work at Lakefield seems to be interminable. His plantings of hardy stock on the Gould place have been enormous during the past year.

The exhibition of the New York Horticultural Society at the American Institute last week was one of the best of recent years. The exhibits were far in excess of the room provided, and many were obliged to use the gallery and adjacent rooms to compete at all. The attendance was only fair, but the rainy weather was a sufficient reason for apparent want of appreciation.

Ellwanger & Barry, of Rochester, were represented by Mr. William Barry, and their show of varieties of fruit was very large as usual. Frank Weinberg, of Woodside, had a creditable display of cacti, 150 varieties, among them several new ones. The new dwarf begonia of the Vernon type, which he has named "Gertrudiana," and which is in color very like La Reine, but with a much smaller flower, was much admired.

Wm. Slack, gardener for Mrs. Hoyt, of Stamford, had some grand bunches of foreign grapes, as fine as any ever exhibited. White & Rice, of Yorktown, had also an excellent fruit exhibit of about everything in their line. Siebrecht & Son displayed fine staghorn ferns and many palms donated for decorative purposes.

Lager & Hurrell, as is their custom, staged a fine assortment of orchids, among them the "Dove" or "Holy Ghost" orchid, Cattleya Hardyana, C. chrysotoxa, C. Harrisonæ, C. Bowringiana, Rodriguezia secunda and Zygopetalum Gautierii. James Dowlan, of Seabright, had a fine bank of foliage plants, and any quantity of fruit, on which he captured a good share of the prizes offered.

The Central part of the hall was devoted to an exhibition by the Manhattan State Hospital for the Insane, the entire exhibit being the work of the insane patients. Wm. Thompson is the gardener of the institution and will be remembered by many in Chicago, where at the World's Fair and at private places he spent five years before coming east. The display he made included about everything in fruit and vegetables Long Island can produce, including peanuts, "strawberry tomatoes" and a 140-pound pumpkin, which brought back memories of "pies like mother used to make."

Geo. H. Hale, gardener for E. D. Adams, of Seabright, had an ornamental group that was very creditable, and among his novelties a green rose that everybody wanted to see. Julius Roehrs took first prize for his bank of foliage plants, a most artistic group, added to in effect by the use of Cattleya labiata, Vanda caerulea, Oncidiums tigrinum and ornithorhynchum, and many fine Oncidium varicosum.

In addition to those before mentioned, Lager & Hurrell had fine plants of Odontoglossom grande, Cattleya Forbesii, Miltonia candida, Oncidium ornithorhynchum, Brassavola fragrans and Laelia Dayana. W. A. Manda showed some fine specimens in pots of his new golden privet.

The dahlia exhibit was a grand one. Geo. Hale's Salmon Queen was a special favorite. Other exhibitors were Rowehl & Granz, Hicksville, L. I.; Theo. Havemeyer, Hempstead, L. I.; W. H. Waite, Yonkers; L. A. Martin, Greenwich, Conn.; C. W. Bolton, Pelham, N. Y.; J. C. Sorenson, Stamford, Conn.; Geo. Burchett, Montclair, N. J.; W. P. Lothrop, East Bridgewater, Mass.; H. F. Burt, Taunton, Mass.; E. S. Miller, Wading River, L. I.; Jas. Allen, Tuxedo Park; Geo. H. Hale, Seabright; W. L. Bell, Sparkill, N. Y.; H. McCarron, Seabright; S. Clifton Bell, Sparkill, N. Y.; P. Sayre, Irvington; Alex. Mann, Oakdale, L. I.; E. F. Bourne, Oakdale, L. I., and W. Van Fleet, Little Silver, N. J. It would take much time and space to do all the exhibitors justice. The whole was worthy of unstinted commendation.

At this writing the absorbing topic is the coal supply and the serious outlook for all, not only those with small plants and limited means, but the great growers, whose cellars are empty and who cannot maintain their establishments without hundreds of tons of the "black diamonds" in some cases.

Walter Sheridan's reputation for "Beauties" does not diminish. On Saturday last his counters were loaded with the finest stock I have seen this season. All that is needed now is a reasonable demand for the goods.

Ghormley's store is all ready for a big season's business, enlarged, painted, facilities unequalled, new and unique signs, stock of first quality. Everything betokens enterprise and expectation.

John Young's big store looks bright and hopeful in its new dress and here may always be found the best of everything and the earliest novelties. The outlook here, and with all the wholesalers, is hopeful, and with the fuel question solved, the "opening of the season" will be all that is anticipated.

John J. Perkins, of West Thirtieth street, is handling some extra fine Brides and Maids. His experience dates back to 1872, when the cut flower business was in its infancy, and his reminiscences are decidedly interesting.

Mr. Donker, the naturalist, has made several of the Bon-Ton florist store windows attractive with exhibits of his aquariums filled with Japanese finny beauties and "self-sustaining" through the ageney of the aquatic plants he uses. His headquarters are at Clarke's Sons' new store on the boulevard, where a whole window is devoted to this decoration.

W. P. Peacock, the dahlia expert, found a lack of room for his exhibit at the Institute last week, and Thorley's Broadway window received the benefit of as pretty a dahlia show as has been seen for many a day. The display was brilliant, most artistically arranged and attracted a great deal of favorable attention.

Bowling.

The preliminary meeting of the New York Florists' Bowling Club was held Monday evening and was fairly well attended. Mr. Burns cheered the boys with the good news of his wife's improvement in health. Capt. Lang does not seem at all cast down by the accidental defeat at Asheville, and will have a championship team at Milwaukee. Mr. Traendly was in excellent voice and "made the welkin ring" as usual. Grandpa Lorentz and Papa Zeller would make a good team. President Sheridan shows remnants of old time skill.

Following are the scores made Monday night:

Lorenz	121	97
Sheridan	106	119
Stewart	133	111

Beauties are the best sellers, some few bringing $3 per dozen, while $2.50 and $2 is the price for most of the better grades. Good Brides and Maids are really scarce and the price is 4 cents. There are plenty of the cheaper grades to be had. Good Kaiserins are in demand at from 4 to 8 cents. This is the best white rose at present. Carnations are in demand. The rain of the last few days spoiled the outdoor stock, and there are not enough indoor ones as yet to go around. The price runs from $1 to $2 per 100, very few bringing the last named figure. The rain also spoiled the asters and they are not in evidence enough to be quoted. We hear of some late ones of these, but they are not on hand as yet. Violets are beginning to arrive and are very good for this season. Niessen had five good shipments of the singles on September 29th. He has never had them so good at this early date before.

Last week prices for cut flowers of all kinds dropped about 25 per cent below the prevailing rates of the week before. The supply was enormous, the quality almost universally excellent, but the equinoctial storm, together with four days of steady downpour and the moderate demand made it one of the most discouraging weeks of the year.

In ordinary years a good frost would be universally welcomed, but not this season, as not one grower in twenty has housed his coal supply or even contracted for its delivery.

On Monday cut flower receipts were heavy, sales were slow and there was no improvement in prices. J. A. S.

No fault should be found with the amount of trade now going on. It is all that can be expected under present conditions, and there is just about good material enough coming in to supply it; consequently prices range just about right, except that poor material is hard to sell at any price, which is hard on the man who grows that kind. Roses get hit the hardest, because of the general prevalence of mildew, but there are enough good, clean ones to supply the call. Scarcity exists along the lines of violets and chrysanthemums, of course, but a buyer who wants any will get them if he calls early enough and is content with rather poor single violets and white mums, with rather a poor chance of getting a few yellow ones. M. L. Belcher draws first blood on white Fitzwygram, Norris F. Comley on Bergmann, and Mr. Zirngiebel on yellow Fitzwygram.

The cut has diminished and demand has strongly increased, and as a result there is now a shortage all along the line. While quotations show only a slight advance, and that always on the top grades, the rates are stiffer on all grades and some kinds of stock is almost impossible to secure in any quantity.

Beauties are scarce in most all grades. The best Brides and Maids now reach $6 and on Brides $2 is the bottom, though the lowest grade Maids can be sometimes had at $1.50. In Kaiserins the bottom grade is no longer quoted. Only one house is yet offering Liberties that can class as specials. La France is a new item in the rose classes and this old favorite is bringing a good price. Ivory continues to meet with good demand and the quality has so improved that the best now command $10, with the seconds at $4 and $5.

The carnation situation is even more strained than last week. The shortage is severe. Fancy stock brings $2.50 to $3 easily and any decent sort of a flower, especially in white, will sell at $2, which is practically the bottom and is surely a record. Chrysanthemums (Fitzwygram only) have improved in quality and the best now reach up to $16. Asters are still arriving, but in limited quantities only.

On Wednesday bright weather returned and if it continues the supply will undoubtedly rapidly increase and relieve the present shortage.

At Kuehn's the past week were noted some fine Brides, Maids, Meteors and Beauties, of which Brides and Maids had the best call. In carnations there was a good supply, but not enough for the demand. All greens had a good call. The week just passed was a good one for supplies and wire work. Shipping trade here is always good.

At Ellis' the large stock of roses, including fine Carnots and Beauties, had a good demand. Some very fine carnation blooms were seen, noticeable among which were twenty-four blooms of Enchantress from Joliet. These attracted a great deal of attention among the trade. They were sold to Mrs. Ayers at $2 for the twenty-four. They were the first seen in this market. Violets had a fair call. Some valley and tuberose stalks sold. Shipping trade is picking up.

At Berning's a big lot of fairly good carnations were on hand all the week. Same can be said of roses, among the best being Brides, Maids, Meteors and Beauties. For all these the demand was good, both local and shipping. A few asters, valleys, cosmos and other seasonable flowers sold well. J. J. B.

KANSAS CITY, MO.

September 28 we enjoyed the first sunshine for a week. Six consecutive days of rain was enough to drown everything except funeral work; of that there has been an extraordinary amount the past week. Some few decorations were reported. The first chrysanthemums have arrived from Chicago, but they made a rather poor appearance. Climatic conditions make mums from one to two weeks later in this locality than in the east and north, and while some growers have them about ready to cut, Barbe is the only man that has them ready to cut now, and these only the very earliest.

Carnations are coming in slowly and range in quality from good at $1.50 to trash not worth selling, but which is sold, nevertheless, from lack of something better. Saturday at 11 a. m. Sam Murray put on exhibition a bunch of Enchantress. It was well advertised in the city papers and attracted considerable attention. The retailers who saw it were mostly of the opinion that the shade of pink was too light, admitting, however, that the flower was something fine in other respects. Plenty of good roses are coming in, Kellogg furnishing the bulk of the stock.

Miss J. E. Murray has removed her store from the Midland hotel to two doors off Eleventh street, on Main. This is one of the finest locations in the city, being in the heart of the business center, and a fine business there is predicted for Miss Murray.

Newell reports having had on Saturday one of the heaviest days in funeral work since he has been in business here.

Rock has completed the redecorating of his store and also his conservatory, making him one of the finest stores in the west.

Convention Hall, where the show will be held next month, was thrown open to the public for inspection last Friday night; $40,000 has been spent on the building this summer, and when the florists arrive to attend the show they will find the great hall will be in harmony with the greatest all-American flower show ever given.

TARRYTOWN, N. Y.

At the regular monthly meeting of the Tarrytown Horticultural Society, held September 25, Messrs. George Legg and Charles Eddison were elected to honorary membership and Homer Hitchcock, Tarrytown, to active membership. Mr. Schrader, gardener for J. D. Rockefeller, was proposed for active membership.

A large and splendid display of dahlias was a feature of the meeting and the following were awarded honorable mention for their exhibits: L. A. Martin, Greenwich, Conn.; David McFarland, Scarborough; F. R. Pierson Co. and Thomas Cockburn, Tarrytown.

Mr. L. A. Martin read an essay on dahlias and it was discussed by Messrs. Mooney, Cockburn, Gibson, McFarland, Pierson and Scott. A hearty vote of thanks was given Mr. Martin.

Mr. Harry Bunyard, of the New York Florists' Club, was present and invited all members to visit the club's exhibition to be held in New York October 30 to November 6.

Schedules of the annual exhibition to be held in Tarrytown November 11, 12 and 13 are now ready and can be had of the secretary, E. W. Neubrand, Tarrytown, N. Y.

H. J. Rayner, Cor. Sec.

NEW HAVEN, CONN.

The second annual exhibition of the New Haven County Horticultural Society will be held November 11, 12 and 13 in the new Music Hall, this city. The schedule of prizes may be had upon application to the secretary, Mr. Thomas Pettit, 316 Orange St. The majority of the classes are open and fairly good prizes are offered. It is believed that the exhibition will be the best ever held in this state. Messrs. Patrick O'Mara, New York, F. L. Atkins, Rutherford, N. J., and Mr. Wirth, Hartford, Conn., will act as judges.

The society is steadily growing in membership and we are pleased to state that our wealthy citizens are supporting us by giving numerous special prizes. It is therefore up to the members of the craft to make the exhibition deserving of this support. John Doughty.

The stores are shining up things while the greenhouses are being made air-tight for another season.

Although near the soft coal, some of us were caught with empty bins and are giving the question some thought. Nobody about here likely to be hurt much, however, except in cutting down profits some.

Mann & Brown have put in a new steam boiler and will heat a part of their range that way, and eventually get all steam on. They have completed some new houses. Hammond has also finished some new houses, and likewise Whitty.

Mosmiller is going into a new and handsome store on Upper Main street. It is said that one of the largest growers hereabouts will ship North this season. The Louise violet grower has been heard from and "violets and partridges" have come here together this season—a little early. O.

The incessant rains of last week have put the asters out of the market. Very few if any are putting in an appearance. Roses are good. Meteors are coming a little short stemmed, but color is excellent. Brides have mostly all got a touch of mildew. Maids are better and of good color. Gates are good, but do not find too ready a market. Beauties are way short of demand. In fact the market is short this week all along the line. Carnations are snapped up as fast as they appear. Any color goes. Mums are few. Dahlias, snapdragons, begonias, zinnias, etc., from open ground are being brought in to relieve the scarcity of other stock, which will last till mums come in and give the funeral design worker material for ground work.

Demand is increasing faster than the supply. In roses American Beauty heads the list, and of select stock in specials there are scarcely any to be had. Many more could easily be used. There are more firsts, but scarcely more than enough to fill regular orders. In shorter stems many more are coming in and find a ready sale when they are of good quality. In other roses, Brides, Bridesmaids, Golden Gates, Liberties, Meteors, etc., there are very few specials, and firsts, too, are scarce, the majority of stock being confined to rather short-stemmed ones with small buds and poor colors. There are a goodly number of these with the exception of white, which are scarce in all grades. A few ivory are seen now and then, and from present indications, this rose is going to be a winner.

Many roses are mildewed at present, but not nearly so many as one would expect, as the weather has been especially trying to rose plants.

The supply of carnations is beginning to increase, but many more could be used. White ones are scarce, also good red. Pink are in better supply. There are scarcely enough of any grade to meet the demand. Chrysanthemums are beginning to come, but they are still very uncertain. A few violets also are making their appearance, and some very good ones will be in shortly. They come from the mountains of Virginia. Asters are very near the end of the crop and are mostly very poor in quality.

CHICAGO.

Market conditions are noted in connection with the cut flower quotations elsewhere.

The weather has continued wet and generally cool and though there has been no frost outside flowers have been practically eliminated from the situation.

The demand was materially strengthened this week by the immense quantity of stock used in the great decoration for the opening of Marshall Field & Co.'s store.

The coal situation is getting serious for the small growers. The large growers, who made their usual contracts for the season in July, are getting their coal all right, but those who buy a car at a time at current market rates are having all kinds of trouble. It is to be hoped that the reports appearing in the daily press to the effect that a settlement of the coal strike has been brought about have foundation in fact.

John Zeck, of Budlong's is spending a few days in St. Louis.

Edgar Sanders continues to improve and sits up in a chair an hour or so each day.

The bowlers played another series of games at Anson's last Tuesday night.

Wietor Bros. say that the new white rose Ivory continues to gain favor with them. They now believe it will prove to be a very important factor in the trade and wish they had planted it much more largely than they did.

The decoration of the immense retail store of Marshall Field & Co. for their annual "opening" was probably the most elaborate decoration of the sort ever attempted. The total cost of the decorations for the week aggregated $21,000, and of this sum over $5,000 went to the florists.

The Geo. Wittbold Co. supplied over 5,000 decorative plants for the week, 70 large cases of wild smilax, 1,000 strings of smilax, 500 strings of asparagus and six hay wagon loads of oak leaves. Their bill was $3,000.

The cut flowers were purchased through the McKellar & Wintersen Co. and they cost $2,250. They included 6,700 Beauties, 3,000 Brides, 4,000 Bridesmaids, 2,000 small red roses, 13,800 carnations, 1,600 asters, 1,600 gladioli, 500 smilax, 100 asparagus, and 175 blooms of the new Enchantress carnation that brought $17.50.

The electrical effects and paper flowers and shades cost about $15,000. Mr. Ben Hinkley was in charge of the decorations for Marshall Field & Co. and he certainly has great abilities as a decorator. The effect was superb.

And the firm has now ordered 20,000 carnations to give away to school children who visit the store next Saturday.

HARTFORD, CONN.

The Hartford Florists' Club had an outing Tuesday, the 23rd inst., going to New Britain on the invitation of Messrs. Traut and Slocum, of that city. Thirteen members were present, as follows: President McRonald, Secretary Coombs, Treasurer Wirth, Messrs. Karlstrom, Huss, Burr, Zuger, Sternberg, Scrivner, Phelps, Brooks, Mead and Osborn. The fourteenth man, in the person of Mr. Jackson Dawson, made the party complete.

Mr. Justus A. Traut's place was first visited, where was seen a typical German garden, reflecting the ability of Albert Bichner, the gardener. After a stroll under the linden trees through garden and greenhouse a visit was paid to Mr. Traut's billiard room, where insecticides and fungicides were freely discussed, Mr. Dawson branching into Phenomena and Faith. After a unanimous vote that our host left nothing to be desired and that his place was a model one, departure was taken.

Coombs and Osborn were obliged at this point to return home, the main body moving on Mr. Slocum's place. Having no report as yet concerning this second manoeuver, this will be concluded in our next. O.

FLORISTS' PUBLISHING CO.....Caxton Building.....CHICAGO.

ST. PAUL.

September trade has been most favorable and all indications point to the continuance of good sales. Carnations are becoming more plentiful and improving in quality. Mums are nearly all late, owing to the cool summer, and but few good blooms will be had before November 1.

The chrysanthemum exhibit to be held November 4 and 5 has been postponed to November 15. Exhibitors and others will please take notice and govern themselves accordingly.

The soft coal situation, while not as serious as the hard, is receiving considerable attention at the hands of our florists. Prices are already 12½ per cent higher than last year, with a promised increase of 25 cents per ton very soon. There is a large shortage reported at the head of the lakes, with only about six weeks' open water in sight. One large concern here is putting in ten or twelve carloads of best Youghiogheny for use in time of trouble, when the cold weather comes and the north winds blow and prices soar skyward while quality drops downward. More of the brethren would do well to do likewise. But while coal is soaring in price, flowers sell at the same old figure. This is not a correct condition and we hope that florists will form a trust of their own and invite the coal barons to look at roses through telescopes at 50 cents a squint.

The president's abandonment of his proposed northwestern trip canceled one floral decoration at least. But we must learn to take our disappointments as stoically as Teddy did his.

Dutch bulbs are just arriving, likewise Japanese longiflorum, which we trust will be better in quality than last year. X. Y. Z.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICH.

It has rained almost incessantly for the past ten days. Flowers are scarce, especially carnations. Shipping orders are numerous and steady, but lack of carnations renders it difficult to fill them. Roses are in fair supply, with slightly mildewed foliage. American Beauties are very scarce.

On Sunday last Phil Breitmeyer, William Dilger, J. F. Sullivan and Tom Brown, of Detroit, and E. C. Brillhart, of Hart, Mich., paid us a visit. They were met at the depot by Henry Smith, George F. Crabb, Alfred Hannah and Charles Chadwick. After a substantial dinner at the Eagle hotel the visitors were driven through Ball Park, thence to the places of Henry Smith, Eli Cross Crabb & Hunter and Alfred Hannah, after which, as it was getting near train time, they reluctantly returned to the depot. They were all favorably impressed with the extent of the plants visited and the quality of the stock seen.

All had something to say on the coal question. It is beginning to look like, not how much will it cost for coal, but can we get it at any price? Here, even at the advanced price, the coal men won't sell except in limited quantities.

Roses, $1 per dozen. Carnations, 25 cents per dozen. American Beauties, $1.50 to $3 per dozen. Lilies, $2 per dozen. G. F. C.

NEW CARNATION.

Mr. M. P. Dilger, Waukegan, Ill., sends us a bloom of a carnation sport which he says he has christened Mrs. M. P. Dilger. The bloom is of fair size, of Daybreak shade of pink and has a very good stem.

Hobart, Ind.—A. Londenburg has just completed two new houses, each 20x100, both to be devoted to carnations. He reports business as very good.

PITTSBURG.

The demand for flowers at present is much heavier than usual at this time of the year. Trade the past week has been very good; funeral work has helped to clean up the stock very nicely. The supply of roses has been about equal to the demand except in the best grades. At this time the cut consists largely of short-stemmed stock, except in hybrids. The supply of carnations is short just now. The cold, wet weather has hurt the outdoor stock and the indoor ones are now only coming in and these are mostly short stems, excepting some pink and white varieties. Chrysanthemums are making their appearance, but the supply is still limited. A few good asters are still to be had. The majority are small; they are about done for for this season.

Fred Burki is cutting some very fine Kaisers and he is also sending a few chrysanthemums to the Pittsburg Cut Flower Co.

The only successful gladiolus grower in this section this season was B. L. Elliott. He grew the Shakespeare variety.

Messrs. Streiff and Niegle, a new firm that will open a stand in the Allegheny market October 1, have the good wishes of all who know them. The boys are well known to the retail trade.

Bill Clarke, of the Cut Flower Co., who was sick at home, is on hand again.

Mr. William Flemm has returned from his vacation.

Among the Boston notes your correspondent notices an item on how to cut glass with a "wheel glass cutter," which said to try dipping the tool in kerosene oil. If this does not work, or if not convenient, rub the wheel of the tool over your nose. Try it, boys.

BOILER CAPACITY.

I have a 40-horsepower return tubular boiler. Would it be advisable to use this for 4,000 square feet of glass with a proper amount of pipe, either hot water or steam? Which would be best —water or steam? M. M.

A 40-horse power boiler will do the work nicely and will have a liberal surplus capacity to spare for future work. A part of the grate could be bricked over till more glass is built. Steam will be the most desirable to use.

MISCELLANEOUS SEASONABLE HINTS.

The Eucharis.

There is a lovely, sweet flower that is beautiful wherever used, and which is a staple article in the florist shops, as well as the adornment of the conservatories of Europe, but which is too seldom seen here. It is the delicate, fragrant eucharis, or Amazon lily. They are not lilies, but belong to the same order as the amaryllis. The best species is E. grandiflora, which is widely known as E. amazonica. As they are from Central South America, it is needless to say they are tropical plants. Travelers, or orchid collectors, tell us they have passed over a clearing in the tropical forest in a dry time and have seen no signs of the eucharis, either of its broad dark green leaves or flowers, and a few months later they have seen this same spot a carpet of deep green foliage, whitened with the beautiful flowers of the eucharis.

No doubt there are some successful growers of this plant in the country, but few of them are commercial men. I remember seeing a plant in Toronto a few years ago. It was in an 8-inch pot. It had ten flower stems and the open flowers and buds numbered twenty-eight. You often see a few plants in a commercial place, most often beneath a bench, where it has been shoved away in disgust because it was not profitable. "The darn things won't flower for me" is frequently the remark that any comment about them brings forth.

A night temperature of 60 degrees will do them very well, but when growing vigorously a little higher would be better. They can be grown either in pots, or planted out on bench in six inches of soil. The soil should be of a rough or coarse texture: a turfy loam chopped up with a fourth or fifth of half decayed cow manure is what they like, and to this add a 6-inch pot of broken up charcoal to every bushel of compost. When making their growth they require copious waterings, and that is why the soil should be coarse and porous. When growing they also relish and need a daily syringing, which will keep down their greatest enemy, mealy bug. They do not like to have their roots disturbed, and well established bulbs in an 8, 9 or 10-inch pot will do very well without disturbance or a shift for two or three years, and the same applies to those in a bench. If you think the bulbs and roots are crowded, you can top dress them with loam and manure (if sheep, be careful not to overdo it), and when growing and making foliage you can give them weak liquid manure twice a week.

There is no doubt that the miserable failures that we all have in attempting to flower this beautiful plant are due to not understanding, and more than that, not following out faithfully the conditions of growth and rest that are so vital to its success. As good an authority as I know says this about it, and I have every reason to think he is right: "Supposing you have some plants that have been just existing for some time, but have not been making much growth. Put them in a good, strong heat, top dress them, water and syringe freely. They will soon throw up young leaves. When these new leaves are mature in size (which will be two weeks from time of starting into growth), withhold water partially, not by any means sufficient for the leaves to wilt or decay in the least, but shorten off water enough to arrest further growth. Continue this treatment for a month or six weeks. During this six weeks of semi-dormant condition the bulbs will have formed flower buds in place of more leaves. Then after the five or six weeks of partial rest begin with the watering and syringing, and the flower stems should soon appear. And when you once see them there is no misfortune likely to occur, for they develop surely and safely. After the flower stems are cut gradually withhold water and give them a rest of another month preparatory to again starting into a new growth."

English gardeners say that the eucharis can, if well managed, be made to produce four crops a year. If you can produce two crops a year, it is a most profitable plant, and their season of flowering is any time you choose. We have really a limited variety of flowers to offer our patrons, and for the past week or two have you noticed that, with the exception of white roses, what a famine there is in white flowers. This will soon be relieved, but there is room for this choice eucharis every day in the year.

Lily of the Valley.

We have about concluded that it is more profitable and more satisfactory all around to grow but few Roman hyacinths, and in their place increase our supply of the lily of the valley. The latter may not be quite so easily managed with success, but when you have the right facilities for its growth and a good quality of roots, there is no trouble about it. They cost less than the Romans, occupy much less room, and require only one-tenth the labor and time in forcing into flower, and bring a better price, and there is no doubt that our customers believe they have a choice article for their money. Therefore grow plenty of valley and let the Frenchman and his hyacinth have the opportunity to come off the perch, and the corners, combines, trusts and syndicates in the hyacinth can be a matter of indifference to us.

It will be several weeks yet before the valley roots arrive, but be prepared to care for them when they do. A very exhaustive, able and complete article was written a few years ago by Mr. Robert Simpson, yet some of you may have forgotten it. I am not now going into the forcing part of the business, later will do for that, but merely the care of the roots. At the outset don't try to force the fall imported roots before the middle of December. That will give you the first crop at New Years, or a little after. Up to that time the cold storage roots are depended on. Firms that grow hundreds of thousands, or perhaps millions, make use, doubtless, of their cold storage facilities the year around and put their freshly imported roots into it at once, but they are few in number compared to those who grow only ten to thirty thousand during the winter and spring months, and depend during summer on buying cold storage roots for their wants.

Unpack as soon as received; dip the whole bunch into cold water for a few moments, only long enough to thoroughly wet every fiber. We then pack away the bunches in boxes about one foot deep and of a size that will hold the quantity that you want to bring in weekly, or semi-weekly. Between every row of bunches we pack some old soil, leaving the crown of pips even with the soil. Then we water the whole just enough to wet the soil through, and after that cover the crowns with an inch of sphagnum moss. We place the boxes on boards in a frame out of doors. The only use of the board is that in case of very hard freezing the boxes lift up clean. Over the whole surface of the boxes we spread two or three feet of soil, and then cover the frame with boards or sash for the purpose of keeping the roots from being saturated by rains, which is very important.

Whether they freeze or not we never trouble. If they do freeze up hard under those conditions it would do no harm, but we doubt the old story that freezing the roots is essential. We know that lily of the valley naturally growing in our gardens and undisturbed is as hardy as the North Pole, yet I have seen these imported pips without covering, exposed to twenty degrees of frost and rendered useless. Large growers sometimes untie the bunches when received and sort them, selecting the largest and strongest crowns for early forcing and the smaller for later use. Doubtless in a large way this would pay, but if you pay a good price for the roots and get the best quality, you can depend on about ninety-eight good spikes out of a hundred, and the other two the cat is welcome to. For some years we have grown only the grade known as "Multibelle" and it is "Multigood."

Trees and Shrubs.

Many of you will now be asked to do some planting of shrubs and trees this month and next. If you keep a retail store on Chestnut street, or Broadway, or Michigan avenue, or Tremont street, and sell $500 worth of cut flowers every day, you won't bother about a cydonia or forsythia, a paeony root, an ampelopsis or Salisburia adiantifolia. While I am a believer in division of labor, and that the specialist is the man that moves the world around, as well as accumulating wealth, there are many florists in moderate sized cities and towns that can add considerably to their incomes if able to talk intelligently to their patrons on the planting of ornamental trees and shrubs, and follow it up with successful planting.

To digress a moment, there is a marvelous awakening all over the land, among not only the very wealthy, who can and are building castles on the banks of our rivers and lakes and in mountain retreats, and surrounding these palatial buildings with the art and skill of the landscape gardener; but people of much more moderate means are seeking summer homes in the country, if possible, but if not, on the outskirts of our big cities. And their taste in by far the majority of cases is educated above a bed of geraniums or coleus. They want herbaceous plants, grasses, flowering shrubs, ornamental trees. I don't say that all of our citizens of a comfortable income care about these surroundings. Some are all horse, or gun, or stocks and bonds, but for every well-to-do citizen who thirty years ago knew what the simple designation "ornamental hardy shrub" meant, there are now a thousand who can discuss the beauties of many species.

I can not refrain, although foreign to what this article is supposed to be, from asking you to subscribe for and read "Country Life in America." It came into existence only last November. It will elevate your thoughts, educate you broadly about the beauties of everything "out of doors." The silent, majestic tree, the trout that eludes your fly, the bird of the air and the quadruped of the prairie and wood and mountain are brought to your close acquaintance, as well as the flowers and plants that supply us with a livelihood. Its prose articles are poetry and its poems are original gems. Its numbers should be on the table of every man or woman that owns a home, and it is one more factor that will lead our people to seek the fresh air and environment of the country and to make these homes beautiful in their surroundings. I did not intend to digress so widely, and am not paid to obtain subscriptions for this grand and beautiful "Country Life," but I am just now chock-full of its inspiration and can't help it.

Obtain from the most reliable firm, or firms, in the country any trees or shrubs that your patrons want and you can suggest. Just let me say here that it is too late to plant what are known as evergreens, properly conifers. Fall planting of them in our northern states can be done from middle of August to middle of September, but no later with safety. With our trees and shrubs that lose their foliage during winter the months of October and November are an excellent time, and often you have more opportunity and a longer season in the fall than in the spring. You need not wait till "the leaves begin to fall." After the first frost the leaves of our deciduous trees and shrubs easily rub off and that should always be done if planting before they have naturally dropped.

The earlier you plant in the fall the better it will be. Heavy rains will settle the soil compactly around the roots, a most important point to their welfare. Shrubs that need strawing up during winter are not worth planting, but a string around the shrub, drawing up its branches and shoots so that the snow does not break them down is work well done. What is of great benefit to fall planted trees and shrubs is six inches of leaves or litter from the stable covering the ground for a foot or so around the shrub; or if they are planted only a few feet apart, cover the whole surface. It keeps hard freezing away from the roots that can not possibly yet have taken hold of the ground.

In ordinary seasons we have either copious rains in November, or early snows which melt and saturate the ground. But I can remember very dry October and November months, and then a sudden freeze up. This is most unfavorable for our trees and shrubs, our forests and orchards. All these trees want to go to sleep, if sleep they do, with their roots moist. So if such abnormal conditions prevail as described above, don't be afraid to soak the roots of these transplanted things before winter sets in.

Almost all the hardy herbaceous plants can be divided and transplanted with the best results during this and next month, and in their case a few inches of straw manure, or leaves, for a covering is most essential, and with many, necessary.

William Scott.

ROSES.

Seasonable Hints.

Roses which are expected to do a good winter's work should now receive some attention regarding their diet. The benches will now be well filled with roots, and the elements upon which they live and thrive will be becoming exhausted. To keep up a constant supply of these elements without overfeeding will from now on to replanting time be one of the most onerous duties of the grower, as without a proper knowledge of the wants of the plant and the qualities of the material used in feeding he cannot hope to obtain those high grade blooms so eagerly sought for in the market, and which we are all striving to produce.

Mulching is one of the best and safest means adopted to supply this want, as by this process the plants have always a store of food ready. A compost of two-thirds well rotted cow manure and one-third good rose soil, made fine by passing through a ¾-inch screen and thoroughly incorporated, is about as safe and serviceable a mulch as can be used during the dark months of winter. By having it in a fine condition it is easier assimilated, spreads more evenly and has a tidier appearance. To this can be added dessicated bone meal in the proportion of one 6-inch pot full to each bushel of compost. For first mulching one inch thick will be sufficient, as it is better to feed lightly and frequently than to take any risks.

After the mulch has become partly exhausted a slight top dressing of unleached wood ashes can be used. This gives color to the petals and tends to stiffen both stems and foliage. In using this great care must be taken not to give too much at one application for fear of sickening the young wood. One bushel will be sufficient to cover 100 square yards of bench; more can be used after the plants become accustomed to this kind of food, especially after the days begin to lengthen.

A generous sprinkling of air slacked lime will also be of benefit during dark weather, but neither of these can be used in combination with bone meal, nor while the bones on the bench are fresh, as this will release more ammonia than the plant requires.

Beauties, Meteors and Liberties being gross feeders, will require more of this kind of feeding and much more frequently than Brides and Bridesmaids.

Special care should be taken to see that the bench is equally wet before applying the mulch and that the soil in the bench does not become dry after mulching. The manure in the mulch retains the moisture and gives the bench the appearance of being wet when it may be quite dry underneath, so it will pay to make a daily examination. Ribes.

FIRMING ROSE BEDS.

Would it be advisable for us to tramp down the soil in our rose benches? It remains loose and does not seem to get solid enough. If tramped down, would it be best to wet the soil to make it more of a clay form when compacted, or would it injure the roots of the roses to tramp the soil? J. B.

It would have been easier for me to answer this question if J. B. had mentioned what varieties of roses he has trouble with, their age and the kind of compost he planted them in.

Too much manure in the compost is one very common cause for the soil not getting solid. Some soils are naturally of a loose and friable composition, and without some admixture of a clayey nature refuse to become solid. If the soil is of this kind it will improve it to firm it down. This should be done when the soil in the bench is in a half dry condition, treading it lightly with the feet, taking care not to go too near the stems.

If the roots are showing near the surface, and the plants are fairly healthy, they should then get a light mulch of two-thirds decomposed cow manure, and one-third good rose soil, thoroughly incorporated, and passed through a ¾-inch screen, with a sprinkling of bone meal added.

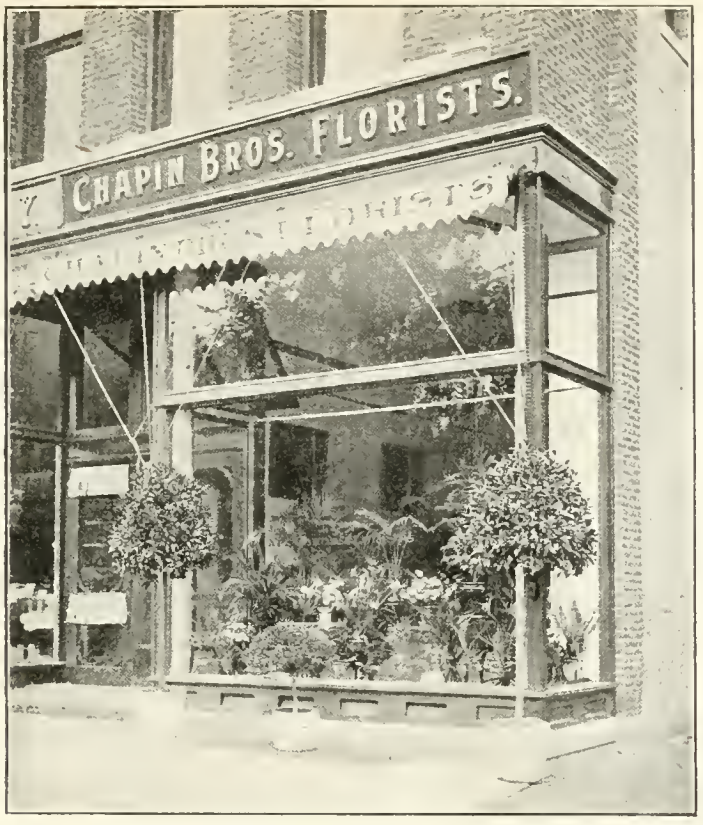
If the plants are small and young, cultivating the surface one inch deep will be best. Ribes.

CARNATION NOTES—WEST.

Watering.

The sun is getting weaker, the days are getting shorter and we are apt to have a dark rainy day sandwiched in now and then and you will need to be as careful now as you ever are in midwinter with your watering. Those plants that were planted early and have a good growth of both plant and roots will bear a rather liberal supply of water, but those that have been on the beds only a few weeks will need careful watering. The soil will sour quickly at this season of the year and your plants will not take hold readily. It is much better for newly planted carnations to be run on the dry side for a while as it will induce root growth, and what you want is a good base of roots to supply the plant with food and water. Go over the beds carefully and examine here and there by running your finger into the soil, and then water accordingly. After you commence firing you will find that the steam pipes will cause dry spots wherever they come close to the soil and you must continually look out for them.

We do not syringe as frequently from now on as we have been doing, but we average only about once each week, which is enough if it is done thoroughly. We believe that it pays just as well to use preventives against insect pests as it does to use them against diseases, and we have never been able to understand why it should be good policy to wait until you have a dose of red spider on your carnations before you begin to syringe them. Only syringe on bright days, though, and do it early in the day, never later than 12 o'clock, and you will usually find your plants in a nice dry condition by night and as fresh as can be. Pick the blooms before you syringe.



New Store of Chapin Bros., Lincoln, Neb.

Handling the Flowers.

With this cooler weather your carnations are bound to improve in quality as well as quantity, and the better the blooms, just that much better should the handling be. When the blooms are small and cheap one is inclined to pack them up almost any old way, but it pays to handle these fine large blooms with care. Many a lot of fine blooms is ruined after it is cut by being handled roughly or packed too tightly in a box or some other way. It is not only size of bloom and length of stem that our retailers are willing to pay the top price for, but perhaps the most important point of all is their fresh appearance. A badly bruised petal is often enough to put the finest bloom into the next lower grade.

I could never believe that carnation blooms could be shipped in the best of shape when the blooms are tied up in bunches of 25, as many growers do. There are bound to be some blooms crushed in the center of the bunches, as it is impossible to pack them so that each bloom will be free to itself. We find that packing the blooms in layers is by far the most satisfactory where the stock is of such quality as will justify it. It takes a little longer to pack and unpack the blooms, but you get them to your customer in good condition and he will be pleased when he takes them out of the box. We usually put two layers in a box with a piece of heavy paper between them to keep the stems from mashing into the blooms below. If you are packing several varieties, pack the heavy and solid blooms in the lower layer, because in the first place they will hold up the lighter ones better, and being on the bottom their weight will not injure anything.

An expert cut flower packer is a valuable man in a large place and it surely pays to have one man do all of it as far as possible, so he can become an expert. Never sprinkle water on carnation blooms, but you can lay damp tissue paper between the stems. When you finish a layer you should nail a cleat over the stems to keep the blooms from moving around in the box and if the box is a long one there should be one or more cleats about the center of the box.

There has been considerable complaint in times past of carnation blooms going to sleep soon after reaching the retail store. Growers and storemen each accused the other of being at fault and for a little while last winter it was hard to tell who had the best of it. No doubt a great many carnations are caused to go to sleep by being kept in poorly ventilated storerooms and in other ways in the stores, but a great many more are given their knock-out drops before they leave the grower's place. Too often the blooms are picked by the armload and laid on a table a half hour or more before the stems are put in water. If the sorting room is warm this will cut their lasting quality in two, and in any temperature it is not good for the blooms.

One hundred blooms is plenty to cut at one time and they should be set in water as soon as picked. It will not injure them if they are taken out of the water after a half hour and laid on the table while being graded, etc. The water should not be too cold and the storage room should be kept as near 45 degrees as possible. If the blooms are to travel any distance they should be in water several hours, over night if possible. The storage room should be well ventilated, but no draughts should strike the blooms. Do not pick blooms from plants that are suffering for want of water, nor when the sun is shining very strong. The best time is in the morning.

A. F. J. Baur.

A WESTERN STORE.

We present herewith exterior and interior views of the new store of Messrs. Chapin Bros., Lincoln, Neb.

The interior view hardly does the store justice as it does not show the front part where are two large mirrors 5 by 10 feet and a fine plant display. The store is lighted by forty electric lights, of which fifteen are in the window and twenty-five in the store proper. The fixtures are all of hand carved oak and they make a fine contrast with the walls which are decorated in white and gold. The ice box is lined with mirrors and is lighted by two electric lights.

In addition to this handsome store the firm has 25,000 feet of glass, all in fine shape. A new house 25x150 was built this past summer and is planted to American Beauties.

The firm reports business as having been excellent the past summer and as Nebraska will have a bumper crop this year they look for a record breaking trade this winter.

CARNATION NOTES—EAST.

Cloudy Weather.

The damp, rainy weather which has prevailed the past two weeks tends to make the plants take on a soft growth. Naturally you will hold the plants as dry as possible without injury during such a spell, but be careful not to overdo the matter.

It is surprising how well the carnation will stand a long period of dry weather in the field, due to the fact that moisture is drawn from below by capillary attraction. Under glass, with raised benches, the conditions are entirely different. In bright weather the surface soil dries out rapidly if kept broken up, as it should be, while below it may be moist. In the case of some soils during a rainy period, just the reverse often happens, the surface being moist while the lower soil will be quite dry.

It will be well to look to this matter in wet weather, and if necessary to water make a slight furrow between the rows; water very carefully without wetting the foliage, drawing the soil back to a level as soon as no water shows on the surface. I have heard growers state that they never watered on a cloudy day, and while not advocating its regular practice, I am sure there are times when conditions demand it.

Stems and Buds.

Your plants should now be sending up strong shoots, which must be kept within the supports and not allowed to sprawl about, resulting in crooked stems.

Let nothing put aside the operation of disbudding regularly, at the same time removing all imperfect buds. Have you ever considered the loss resulting from failure to give proper attention to these details?

I venture to say that with many growers by reason of inattention to either or both of these details, at least one blossom is lost or the value of two lessened 50 per cent on every plant under cultivation. Suppose 20,000 are grown, and assuming the average net price per bloom to be 2½ cents (which is low) there is strong probability that the receipts might have been larger by $500 for the season.

Twisted Growth on Joost.

Noticing an inquiry last week regarding twisted growth on Joost, will say that two years ago we had same experience directly the plants were housed and established. Always appearing in the same bench and disappearing after firing, also, the bench being a west side one against a partition, the hot morning sun having full play, while there was practically no sun after 3 p. m., we concluded that the soil remained too wet during sixteen hours' shade and darkness, also that the eight hours' sun being very hot, the two extremes forced this peculiar growth. I think Mr. Baur hit the nail on the head in the last sentence of his reply.

Geo. S. Osborn.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS.

Early Flowers.

A look over the plants reveals the fact that three varieties are now in excellent shape for cutting. These are October Sunshine, Lady Harriet and Miss Alice Byron, and form a very useful trio in yellow, pink and white. The buds from which these flowers have developed were all taken from August 9 to 11 and therefore have developed in about eight weeks, as date of writing is October 4.

October Sunshine is a beautiful yellow and the only fault it has with me is a delicate constitution, which renders it liable to leaf disease. It will come good on any bud, but makes the best flower from buds taken the second week in August. I would recommend this variety to anyone having a demand for early flowers.

Lady Harriet is classed as coming in with Robinson, but by experimenting with earlier buds we find it is two weeks ahead of that variety. Lady Harriet is one of the neatest and cleanest growers in the pink section that I have handled for a long while, and unlike nearly all the other early pinks does not show any signs of burning or damping. I unhesitatingly endorse it as the best early pink from my own experience.

Miss Alice Byron is generally catalogued as a mid-season, but if the flower will always come as clean and perfect from early buds as it is doing this year it may be classed as an early variety and one of the very best at that. It is the purest white in color.

Drip.

We are getting considerable rain and so far the weather has been unfavorable for the developing of flowers. A wet October always means loss to those growers who are growing an extra quality grade of flowers. Look over the flowers daily and remove any decaying florets and be careful to see that drip from the roof is not falling into the flowers. This is sometimes an unsuspected cause of rotting in houses which are not tight in the roofs.

Overfeeding.

If you find any buds that look as though the stem had been half severed through by a knife, it is a sign for you to stop feeding. The cause of this partial beheading of the bud is the fact that the roots are pumping up more nourishment than the bud can assimilate, and nature adopts this method of checking the flow of sap. This trouble will only be noticed on crown buds, which is easily enough explained. After a bud is taken there is no more growth, and the only outlet for the energy of the plant is the enlarging and perfecting of the growth already made. In the case of terminal buds there is an extra growth to develop, and therefore more outlet for the superfluous energy, though it should be remembered that before the terminal bud appears the crown bud is already at its work of development and therefore naturally makes the larger flower.

Watering,

owing to the constant rains, is just now a matter for watchfulness and discrimination. It is far better to run over the benches every day and water only the dry spots than to water the whole bed whether it needs it or not and trust to luck for the weather to clear and dry it out again. Even with good weather the supply of water can be much reduced, because as the bud nears development far less water is needed than during the growing season. Damping of the paths should be discontinued and every effort made to keep a genial, dry atmosphere.

Insects.

This dry atmosphere is very favorable to the rapid increase of black fly and red spider, but if you have fumigated earlier, as you should, your plants will now be clean and free from insects. Where black fly is making its appearance about all that can be done is to spread tobacco stems thickly through the house. Fumigation when flowers are open is out of the question, and flowers shipped to market in a dirty condition mean small prices and, what is almost as bad, loss of reputation.

An insect that fumigation does not seem to touch is the little brown thrips that secretes himself in the petals of the flower. This little pest seems to suck the coloring matter out of the petals, leaving the skin only, and unless destroyed will soon render a flower unsalable. "By his works shall ye know him," and hand-picking is the surest way to dispose of him.

THE DALE ESTATE, BRAMPTON, ONT.

I was once again honored with the position of judge at Toronto's big Industrial Exposition, the largest annual fair on the continent by a considerable majority. All Ontario and some of the other provinces should be, and doubtless are very proud of this big exhibition. It is a credit to the energy and patriotism of Ontario, for, as I understand it, it is no money making scheme, though self sustaining, and the people go to newer and better buildings, and those being erected now are both architecturally and substantially of an exalted type compared to those which have done duty for years. A great improvement is noticeable this year in the absence of dozens of peanut, orange and lemonade stands and other abominations. They are kept off the principal roads. Another improvement will be a more commodious and handsome structure for the Horticultural Department. As it is at present, plants, flowers and fruits are badly crowded, especially the two former. The show in the cut flower department was good, but we are sorry to see several of the leading firms taking no part in it. It's a great pleasure to meet old acquaintances and we met most of them, and sincerely trust that we left few kicks behind.

Leaving our better half (in our case no doubt about it) in care of our oldest baby, I boarded the Grand Trunk railroad train for Brampton, chiefly noted as the home of the now great flower growing establishment, founded and fostered to a good age by the lamented Harry Dale—a poetical name—a most modest, unassuming, splendid character, whose untimely taking off some three years ago was deeply mourned by all who had ever met him. If ever there was a man without an enemy, it was Harry Dale. In the smoking compartment of the coach was a most pleasant gentleman, and with him a cute, chattering little girl, whose chipper sayings sort of paved the way to a talk and the conversation led to flowers, and the M. D., as he turned out to be, said "If you want to see flowers, you want to stop off at a little town a few miles up the road." "My dear sir," said I. "You allude to the Dale Estate. I know all about it—been there lots of times." I really thought I did, but was mistaken, for it is more than three times as large as it was when last we were in Brampton.

My time was but two hours on the great place and that allowed only a "look in" at many of the houses. Doubtless many things of great interest missed me, but what I did see and what I relate is authentic and can be sworn to.

Several years before his death Mr. Dale associated himself with Mr. T. W. Duggan. Mr. Duggan is not a florist nor a gardener, but a bright, pleasant, shrewd business man, who ably takes care of that most important end—the business and financial end—and no better evidence of his management is needed than the size and growth of the place. He is also one of the executors of the estate.

Mr. Edward Dale is superintendent of the growing. Many of you have met auburn haired, handsome "Ed." If not, go there and you will be surprised at his modesty when he is showing you around this modern nine acres of glass. Unlike many large places I have seen where you had to step over steam pipes or jump over mud puddles in the paths, it is throughout neat, clean and substantial. There are now a total of sixty-nine houses, or 450,000 feet of glass, two-thirds of this erected within three years. There are but a very few of the old-fashioned long-span-to-the-south houses. There is one considerable range of the short-span-to-the-south devoted to carnations. Mr. Dale admits that was wrong and it will not be long until they are remodeled.

Although I have seen some magnificent roses grown in these same houses, what would jar you with wonder are eight houses, equal span, each 17 feet wide and 840 feet long. It is three acres of glass under one roof, for there is nothing to hide the view of the whole three acres but the posts supporting the gutters. The beds are all on the ground—not solid beds, mind you, because there are only four or five inches of soil on a three-inch tile. The houses are equal span, the walks under the gutter, no pipes supporting the ridge or purlins. The roof is supported by a system of ⅜ iron trusses and it seems to answer most admirably. The heating pipes are all on the sides of the walks and a little below the level of the beds. Mr. Dale wants no steam pipes more than a few inches from the ground, and none beneath a bench, and it looks as if he is right.

It may interest some to know how these acres of beds are built. Two pressed bricks are laid flat-ways and lengthwise and form the exterior of beds; then soil is filled in and firmed to level of top brick; then the three-inch drain tile is laid across the bed to the exterior edge of brick; then an edging of concrete is made about 1½ inches high by 1½, or a trifle thicker. Now is this not as near a permanent bed as it is possible to make? I inquired "Why the brick and soil below the tile?" and the answer was it raised the benches slightly and the plants did better than when the tiles were on a poor, hard soil, or cement, or boards. To convince me of that I was shown a bed of Liberty where the tile had of necessity to be laid on plank, and side by side the bed was continued with the tile on soil. The difference was so great that it was hard to believe that they were of the same age. The soil beneath the tile was not prepared rose soil—just ordinary sub-soil without manure. All the new ranges are after this fashion, both houses and beds, so I need say no more about construction.

Ninety thousand carnations are planted and a great variety is grown. Of roses the largest quantity is Bridesmaids, Brides, Cusin, Morgan and a sport of Cusin. The Canadians always could grow Perle and to perfection and here you see them growing like willows in June. A bed of Meteor 840 feet long and the plants three feet high is a grand sight.

My attention was drawn particularly to a bed of Maids growing the second year in four inches of soil on tile. They had been cut rather severely down this summer but were now three feet high, and for quantity of vigorous growth, buds and flowers, I have never seen the equal. Beauties are grown largely and the earliest planted in fine shape.

A range just completed and planted with carnations is also awe inspiring. It consists of thirteen houses, each 225 feet long. There are houses of smilax and asparagus, mignonette, violets and lots of mums, all in good order.

But my two hours were up and only left me time to walk along a trench on a 10-inch steam pipe to see the heating of the newest range. It consists of twelve 15-horse power boilers, a brick smoke-stack 100 feet high and 12 feet at the base. They don't believe in big boilers—all automatic stoking—down draft from every boiler into a big pipe which leads to the smoke-stack. The ashes, as they come out, go down a 10-inch pipe into a conveyor, which is in a tunnel large enough to walk in. Another great brick building is going up, some 100 by 75, and high enough for a church. That's to store coal. I don't know, but I hope that Brampton is not dependent on Pennsylvania for coal, and I am truly sorry we are.

If this is not a model place, I never saw one. And now, gentlemen, in conclusion, you must see it to realize the vigor and health of the roses and other stock they grow there. I was exceedingly glad to meet the bright Mr. Duggan. And for a final conclusion I want the Queens, N. Y. and Philadelphia papers to copy the fact that every light of glass on the place is butted.

W. S. alias Butted Bill.

FALL CARE OF PAEONIES.

Many suppose that pæonies lie dormant in the fall and that they need no further attention. This is a great mistake. August is their dormant month, if they do take any rest at all in summer, and then in September they begin a vigorous root growth for a strong push in the spring. Plant a pæony in moist ground the first of September and dig it up in December, if the ground is open then, and you will be amazed at the system of roots which it has thrown out.

These flowers are growing in value. The writer is carrying on a series of experiments, which he will give the public later on, regarding the best modes of propagation, but one very important item is fall care and cultivation. Any time in the fall is better for planting than spring. One fall I had a lot come from Europe well nigh dead. The roots were black and snapped like sticks. I had to cut off the roots and just plant the buds. I started them in moist earth in November in the cellar, planted them out in December, and saved every one, and one of them bloomed. If you want fine, strong, vigorous plants, put them out in September, water and cultivate as if it were spring time, and the next season you will be well rewarded.

The same is true of evergreens. They seem to be dormant in August and September, when in reality, if the conditions are right, they are making a fine root growth. So they should be cared for and cultivated until ground freezes.

INSTALLING A BOILER.

I am about setting a new boiler of 72-horse-power (return tubular) alongside my old one of 60-horse-power, which I have used alone hitherto. I would like to know what points, if any, beyond setting it on the same level as old boiler, I should observe to insure the water remaining at proper height in each. What sized stack would I need for 72-horse-power boiler situated in open country? Is there any advantage in putting stack at the rear of boiler? I am told there is a saving of heat in this, the hot air having to pass through a flue over the boiler to reach stack.

The main steam pipe from old boiler is 6-inch and I propose to connect new boiler with this main by a 4-inch. Will it matter to thus have the steam rise from one boiler through a 6-inch and then from the other through a 4-inch pipe? Is a 6-inch main large enough to conduct steam to heat 30,000 sq. ft. of glass? Temperature seldom falls below zero.

The return steam pipe now enters old boiler at the top, while it is arranged to enter new boiler at bottom. Will this arrangement work properly? Does steam circulate equally well when return enters at bottom as at top of boiler? I have planned this return to be 2-inch. Is that large enough? J. H.

In answer to J. H., in setting the new 72-horse-power boiler alongside of the old 60-horse-power boiler, it will, of course, be necessary to set it so that the water line in both boilers will be on the same level. The smoke pipe should be not less than 25 inches in diameter and at least 40 feet high; if bituminous coal is to be used, add at least 10 feet to the height.

I judge the boiler in question is a return flue boiler, brick set, in which the fire passes backward below the shell and returns to the front through the tubes; if such be the case, the smoke stack is best, as usually placed, at the front end of the boiler, so as to make as short a connection into the chimney as possible. At the bottom of the stack put a check damper, that is, one which will let cold air into the stack, in order to control the draft; this is better than the plate or butterfly damper so frequently used.

A 7-inch steam pipe is the smallest which should be connected to a 75-horse-power low pressure steam heating boiler; a 7-inch fitting, however, is often difficult to procure; therefore, if he desires to make a quick connection, 8-inch for steam pipe would be the most practicable. The return main should be not less than 5-inch. A 6-inch main will answer for 30,000 feet of glass, but in cold weather it might be necessary to increase the pressure above five pounds. A 7-inch pipe would be large enough to heat at five pounds or less at any time. The return pipe should enter the boiler at the bottom, as far from the fire box as possible. A perfect circulation is not secured where the return pipe enters the top of the boiler.

In calculating for low pressure steam heat, it is advisable to provide a steam main pipe having its diameter equal to at least one-tenth of the sq. root of the total radiating surface to be fed.

BUFFALO.

Much dull, wet weather has rendered useless about all the outside flowers there were left, and now there is nothing. Carnations are coming in so slowly, and roses are so poor in quality, except Beauties, that we are really hard up for flowers. There is no Mr. Peacock here to send in a wagon load of dahlias. The attempt to cultivate dahlias in this neighborhood is in nearly every case a failure. Yet you see by the side of a cottage in our country villages a few plants flowering as freely as the goldenrod by our fence rows in September. The beds of coleus at the stations on the railroads are as fresh and growing as they were in August, proof positive that we have had no frost, and therefore there should not be such a dearth of flowers. A few thousand carnations, not stopped after the middle of June, would be giving us lots of blooms out of doors, but I don't hear of anyone hereabouts having that few.

The agony will soon be over, for we began cutting Polly Rose and Willowbrook chrysanthemums a few days ago. There are very few Fitzwygrams grown here. Willowbrook seems to be a dandy. Others will quickly follow, and the constant necessity for apologies will soon cease. There is something joyous in the return of the bold and noble chrysanthemum. It's like an old friend returning after a long interval. And the old friend is not down at the heel, wanting assistance or relating misfortunes. He is well dressed, in the finest of spirits, in the best of health, and you are delighted to see him. He cheers you up; gladdens the whole family. But like most old friends, if he stopped too long, he would wear out his welcome, and after two months' stay you are not broken hearted when you bid him goodby with the remark, "Will see you later." Other flowers are nearer to our heart, and like other friends, we never tire of them.

Buffalo is not attempting a flower show of any kind this year. It's too bad we can't do it. A burnt child dreads the fire and a few of us have been scorched. Our worthy president, Capt. Braik, was willing to take the lion's share of the work, but there was a lack of interest and so it dropped. We don't believe that the public is to blame. They would patronize it if every florist in town would do the same, but oh, there is such a miserable, selfish feeling that controls the actions of two-thirds of our craftsmen, that instead of giving it their moral, if not material, aid, they would rather pooh pooh it. "It's nothing in their pocket." "They can sell all they grow without it." "They have no time to bother," etc. Perhaps other cities are the same, for the average of human nature is the same, whether it be Boston, Bengal or Basutuland.

It's remarkable how little is said in dead earnest in the florist press on that momentous subject, the coal strike. We are all hoping, like the optimistic Mr. Macawber, for something to "turn up." It would be presumptous and absurd for a humble florist to even pass his opinion on the merits of this calamity. When the President of this great country, and his wise counselors, can not see their way to make either side give in, or decide which is right, it's little good for us to discuss it. A few, I hope many, were fortunate enough to lay in their coal before the strike began, but for every one that is now so fortunate, there are ten who were careless, and I can not see anything but a great calamity before hundreds of struggling florists. Outrageous prices would be hard to bear, but money will not buy what will soon be needed to keep our homes from freezing.

There is an apathy just now, for the weather is favorable. Some coal left over from last spring, or a wood fire occasionally, keeps the chill off, and may for another month, but when the first night of fifteen or twenty degrees of frost drops down on us, what then? Pennsylvania has ninety per cent of all the anthracite of the world, owned and controlled by a few men. Under present conditions this coal has become a natural monopoly. And I may as well speak the truth about myself and say flatly that I am, and have been for years, a thorough believer that natural monopolies should be owned and controlled by the municipality, state, nation or community they affect. Call this socialism if you like, so much the better.

New Zealand is held up to us as the best government in the world, that is, best for all the people, and there all these phases of socialism are carried further than in any other of the so-called civilized countries of the world. Even the liberal monarchy of Great Britain has municipal ownership of natural monopolies carried out ten times more than our republic, and are acquiring by purchase the ownership of private monopolies as fast as they can to the great benefit of the public, who owns them. Not only the community who owns the trolley lines, water works, electric lighting, telegraphs and telephones, gets these necessities cheaper, but in many cases there is a large surplus left to help run the city expenses, and consequently lower taxes.

The New York Democratic platform adopted at Saratoga advocates the ownership and control of the anthracite coal fields. The Brooklyn Eagle says it is a cheap bid for the socialist vote, demagogical and absurd, and would cost the country more than the national debt at the close of the war in 1865. A Chicago paper, I think the Record-Herald, says it's a good, strong plank and will meet with the approval of many thinking men, and there you go. We got over the national debt all right, or soon will, and have paid in pensions since that something like $5,000,000,000. Money is no object to the country. Let us have peace and prosperity, and the use of those natural products which were stored up for future races millions of years ago.

The primitive savage man got along with a skin and some kindling wood, that is, after he learned to make a fire. Coal with our present civilization is a necessity and we must have it. Talk about a slight lowering of the tariff endangering our present commercial prosperity. Is not this terrible struggle in the Wyoming Valley much more serious than any lowering of the tariff on some trust made monopoly a thousand times. I would own the coal mines if I were Uncle Sam, but that could not bring immediate relief, and I must close.

We are very like the poor sailor who was chased by a farmer, a bull dog and a powerful, long-horned bull. Poor Jack had run as far as he could and come to a high stone wall, against which he knelt. Looking over his shoulder and seeing that the bull was approaching fast with lowering horns, Jack gave utterance to the only prayer he knew and which he learned aboard ship. "For what I am about to receive may the Lord make me truly thankful." We will be saying our little prayer about November 15th, or sooner. W. S.

CHICAGO.

There is likelihood of a strike of the drivers for the express companies and it is giving the wholesale florists some uneasiness. The Chicago Wholesale Cut Flower Association held a called meeting at the Bismarck Hotel last Tuesday morning and appointed a committee, consisting of E. E. Pieser (of Kennicott Bros. Co.), E. C. Amling and Leonard Kill (of Peter Reinberg), to confer with the drivers to see if they would not make an exception in favor of cut flower shipments in case a strike was ordered.

Commission men say growers are losing money by not making their shipments more frequent during present market conditions. When the cut is small the temptation is strong to hold back until there is enough to make a regulation shipment, but that is not the way to get the fullest value for the stock. Keep it coming so the dealer can take the fullest advantage of the demand, which always has its ebbs and flows from day to day, and in fact from hour to hour, and also insure every bit of the stock reaching the market in a fresh condition. The same stock that will make a quick sale at $10 today may not bring $5 tomorrow. Freshness is an absolute essential these days.

Wieter Bros. are cutting Kalb and Pacific chrysanthemums and some small Eatons from early propagated plants. They are more than ever impressed with Ivory rose. Last week they sold some select blooms at as high as $20 per 100.

Kennicott Bros. Co. are receiving some fine yellow mums that have sold at $30 per 100.

Mr. A. L. Randall has returned from his summer home in Michigan and is ready for another season of hustle.

Mr. C. L. Washburn is on the sick list and is confined to his home at Hinsdale.

Lloyd Vaughan, with E. H. Hunt, is spending a few days in the city, but will shortly resume his trip on the road.

Mr. Isaac Kennedy, of Cleveland, is in the city. He has sold his interest in the J. M. Gasser Co. and is looking for new fields to conquer.

John P. Tonner, the florist of Montclair, has for some years suffered much from insomnia and other troubles, and last Sunday morning he became so desperate over his condition that he ended his life by shooting himself with a rifle. He was 73 years old and had been a resident of Chicago and vicinity for over fifty years. The business has for some time past been almost wholly conducted by his son, Walter Tonner, and the death of the father will in no way affect it.

Bond issues have been recommended by the South Park and Lincoln Park Boards for raising money with which to provide a series of small parks through some of the thickly built up sections of the city.

The regular semi-monthly meeting of the Florists' Club was held last Wednesday evening in Handel Hall building.

Mr. A. T. Boddington, of Cleas & Boddington Co., New York, was a visitor this week.

Uncle John Thorpe left for Kansas City last Saturday. He says the attendance at the Kansas City show will be 165,270, and insists upon the "seventy" as well as the rest.

Edgar Sanders is still progressing slowly but surely. Electric treatment is to be given shortly in an effort to hasten improvement. He keeps cheery and hopeful.

A SOUTHERN CANNA FIELD.

The accompanying engraving is from a photograph of a part of the twenty-five acres of cannas grown this season in the Carolinas by the Cleas & Boddington Co., New York. They have been growing their canna roots in the south for some years, increasing the acreage each year, and this season over half a million salable roots will be the outcome of this enterprise, notwithstanding the retarding influence of a cold, dry summer, which has necessarily lessened production materially.

In the southern states, where these cannas are grown in such large quantities, they are not lifted in the fall and placed during the winter under greenhouse benches or in storing sheds, where there is always considerable shrinkage from both dry and wet rot, but remain in the ground, sometimes in trenches, protected by a covering of pine needles or hay and earth and can be got at conveniently at any time when wanted.

Having a much longer season of growth, the roots are more thoroughly ripened, for which reason they keep better in the dormant condition than those grown further north, and will store in barrels, when cut, almost as well as tuberose bulbs, if they are not kept too warm or exposed to the air.

The varieties grown chiefly by the Cleas & Boddington Co. are standard sorts, such as: Mme. Crozy, Chas. Henderson, Florence Vaughan, etc., and although they handle such a great number, their list does not comprise more than twenty-five sorts altogether. They are grown in such large quantities and under such favorable conditions that it is often a source of wonder as to how they can be profitably produced at the low prices quoted in comparison to those of former years. The picture gives some idea as to how it is done.

NEW YORK.

Plant Breeding Conference.

The International Conference on Plant Breeding and Hybridization held in the rooms of the American Institute last week, was one of the most interesting and important meetings of its kind ever held in this country and brought together a brilliant assemblage of the brightest lights of the horticultural world. The sessions began on Tuesday and lasted until Friday, were well attended throughout, and over fifty essays, lectures and papers were read and considered, the interest being intense and continuous. On Thursday the afternoon session was held in the Botanical Museum Building, after an elaborate lunch, provided the conference by the Bronx Park authorities, and under Dr. Britton's guidance the members enjoyed a stroll through "Hemlock Forest," and a visit to the conservatories, which was greatly appreciated by all.

On Friday the Council of the New York Horticultural Society gave the delegates an excursion up the Hudson river to Poughkeepsie, where they became the guests of Mr. F. R. Newbold, of "Fern Top," and were delightfully entertained at his beautiful home and given a carriage drive through the extensive grounds of F. W. Vanderbilt before returning by train to New York. President Jas. Wood, of Mt. Kisco, made a charming chaperone and his elaborate description of the many points of interest on the Hudson was greatly enjoyed. Leonard Barron, the secretary, performed the onerous duties of his position most satisfactorily to all.

Where essays and addresses were uniformly excellent it is difficult to particularize. Professor W. Bateson, of Cambridge, was a great favorite and made himself very popular. He is a delightful speaker and has a charming personality. Geo. Nicholson, of Kew, whose great "Dictionary of Gardening" has made his name a household word in America, was most cordially welcomed, and is as modest and genial as ever. From the West Indies and Canada came William Fawcett, Dr. Morris, Professor Hutt, of Guelph; Macoun and Saunders, of Ottawa, and H. H. Groff, of Simcoe. Interesting addresses were also given by Professor Bailey, C. W. Ward and P. O'Mara, in addition to those mentioned in the programme.

Notes.

Mr. Gottlieb, at Alex. McConnell's, did some very handsome work for Gen. Kingsley's funeral at Rutland, Vt., last week, a standing cross of violets and wreath of orchids being especially worthy of mention.

Wadley & Smythe and Hodgson find the Newport season still profitable and will not close their stores there before the first of November.

The Professional Woman's League has a week of celebration at the Madison Square Garden, commencing Monday last, and a large quantity of cut flowers will certainly be used, the attendance being enormous. The Rustic Construction Co. has an exhibit there of summer houses and other samples of its work that is large and creditable.

Schloss Bros., the ribbon merchants, have some handsome novelties for florists this fall, their new violet silk embroidered scarfs and handkerchiefs at $2 per dozen being in great demand, are rapidly becoming popular.

The New York Florists' Club will meet on Monday next, October 13, at 128 E. Twenty-eighth street, and on account of the nearness of the great flower exhibition, the occasion will be of great interest and as large an attendance as possible is requested. Several exhibits of plants and flowers are also expected and a special programme is being prepared to make the evening interesting. Full particulars as to the coming exhibition will be given and final arrangements completed.

Among visitors last week were Mr. Vick, of Rochester; Walter Mott, of Jamestown, and Mr. Clarke, the florist of Portland, Ore.; Warren Ewell, of Boston, and Wm. Tricker, of Riverton, N. J.

Mr. Withers, of "American Gardening," who was very ill last week with congestion of the lungs, is convalescing and his complete recovery now seems assured.

Mr. Bradshaw has returned from the "Sunny South" with many contracts for his holly supply completed and all arrangements made for a superior stock that will appeal to the best trade.

The firm of Bradshaw & Hartman is handling some excellent plants of all kinds, Bostoniensis especially. Many of the wholesale cut flower men seem to find this branch of the trade profitable.

The supply and variety of chrysanthemums is increasing daily and the quality is excellent. Nearly every retail establishment has a handsome display of them already, and the windows begin to "look like old times."

The "coal question" grows more serious daily. The continuance of warm weather alone holds in check the anxiety of the trade. Another week may lift the shadows and give hope to hundreds of growers who are now utterly unprepared for the winter.

The Clark-Potter wedding at Cooperstown, N. Y., on Saturday, was a brilliant affair, and the church and house decorations elaborate. Siebrecht & Son had charge of the floral display and shipped large quantities of palms from their conservatories for the occasion, one of the firms stating that three carloads had been forwarded.

The Thomas-Beekman wedding at Ardsley on the 8th, is another important event from the florists' view, and enormous quantities of flowers have been sent from New York for this decoration. The Rosary has the contract for the bridal and other bonquets, of white orchids, Brides and valley. J. H. Small & Sons have the decorations.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Flower Market.

The first annual meeting of the stockholders of the Flower Market will be held next Thursday evening, October 16, provided the charter is received in time. The necessary papers have been in Harrisburg since October 2 and unless the coal strike monopolizes the governor's attention his name will be affixed in plenty of time to hold the meeting on the 16th. At this meeting the by-laws will be presented. These by-laws provide for the election of nine directors who have power to choose officers from among their number. Any florist who wishes to become a stockholder with power to vote at the first election should send his name and address accompanied by $5.00 for each share of stock he wishes to take to David Rust, Horticultural Hall, Broad and Locust streets, Philadelphia, at once.

The temporary directors have been busy preparing all sorts of plans and improvements to submit for final action of their permanent successors. This course is necessary if everything is to be in readiness by the first of November.

It is a fine thing to be a charter member of a worthy enterprise. It shows a man has pluck and courage and is not wholly selfish. It is an especially fine thing to be a charter member of the florists' enterprise because it shows how splendidly our florists pull together. Here are the names that went to the governor as stockholders in the proposed Flower Market:

The annual election of the Florists' Club of Philadelphia resulted as follows: John Westcott, Pres.; David Rust, Vice-Pres.; Edwin Lonsdale, Sec'y; J. Wm. Coldflesh, Treas.

Later—The governor has now signed the market company charter and a meeting has been called for Oct. 16 at Horticultural Hall.

PITTSBURG.

Business in this market has been exceptionally good the past week. The demand exceeded the supply, in fact the market was almost destitute at times. Lily of the valley was the only flower in evidence until Friday when matters were somewhat relieved. A quantity of mums arrived that day; these were quickly bought up at $15.00 per 100.

Some weather stained asters are still around, but these only sell when nothing else can be had. Beauties are scarce in all grades. Maids and Brides sold as high as $6.00 for the very best grades. Carnations bring from $1.00 to $2.00. Light colored dahlias are selling well; the yellows and variegated ones move very slowly.

Mr. Langhans, of the Cut Flower Co., reports shipping trade very good. This firm is receiving some very good violets, Maids and Beauties.

We florists are quite jubilant over the long list of debutantes for the ensuing social season; these functions always add materially to the season's business.

H. L. Blind & Bros.' houses at West View are now under glass. These boys are very hard workers and they usually have something to show for it.

The Pittsburg Rose and Carnation Co., at Bakersville, is cutting some very good Maids and Brides. The stock looks very promising for a large crop.

The Pittsburg Plantation Co., of this city, has made application for a charter and has filed incorporation papers at Dover, Del. They will cultivate all kinds of tropical plants, etc. Capital stock, $300,000.

Dr. J. F. Shafer, our enthusiastic collector of rare orchids, has opened his conservatory to the public every afternoon from 2 o'clock until 4. The finer plants are now in bloom and can be seen at their best this month.

Breitenstein & Flemm are displaying a general collection of fine ferns and plants.

Mrs. E. A. Williams' store on Penn avenue always looks charming and beautiful. Mrs. Williams again seemed the plant decoration at the Pittsburg Exposition.

Randolph & McClements report business good and many advance orders for weddings and debutantes.

Another benedict. The marriage of Miss Alma D. Klein to Mr. David Geddis, the Carson street florist, took place at 6:30 Wednesday morning, October 1st. To avoid a warm reception from his many friends David got up early that morning. The couple left for a short eastern trip. They have the best wishes of the craft.

One of our well known suburban florists saw an advertisement of a $2 fire escape, sent his money, and received a Bible by next mail; stick to the book, John, it's a good investment, just as necessary as Wm. Scott's Florists' Manual; it's well to have both.

Hoo-Hoo.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

The improvement in business noted a week ago did not last long. The weather had a good deal to do with it, as it rained nearly all of the past week. The Jewish New Year brightened up business somewhat for that day. There is plenty of stock on hand, though no piling up as yet. The stock seen at the different stores shows improvement in quality.

Some good Brides, Maids and Meteors are coming in, while Beauties of all grades are better than a week ago. Carnations from now on should be fine. Many of our local growers are sending in first-class blooms of the new varieties and also of the old ones. Carnations are in great demand, and not enough are coming in just now to supply it. Violets are still small and not many are seen. Chrysanthemums are as yet limited and are not rushing in as fast as anticipated. Only a very few can be seen in the florists' windows. This being fair week in St. Louis, the florists are looking for a fair week's business.

Notes.

Visitors last week were James Wilson, of Western Springs, Ill., and J. C. Vaughan, of Chicago.

Mr. and Mrs. Foreman, of Louisiana, Mo., are in the city spending a few days with friends.

The great St. Louis fair opens today, Monday. The full list of awards on plants, cut flowers and floral designs will appear in the next issue of the REVIEW.

The blooms from the seed sown by the members of the Engleman Botanical Club were displayed in the basement of the High School last Saturday afternoon. Allan Mohr was awarded first prize for having the best all-around garden in the city, and Carrie Hellage received second prize. The display of wild flowers made by Mr. Letterman, of Allentown, Mo., was a great attraction.

William Graft, a Chicago and St. Louis fakir, is reported to be in Chicago, representing himself to the Chicago wholesalers as a partner of Frank M. Ellis. Mr. Ellis wishes me to state that he has no partner, nor representative, buying flowers for him.

Club Meeting.

The Florists' Club will hold its regular meeting next Thursday afternoon. President Dunford expects a large attendance, as he and the trustees are making great preparations for the winter meetings, which are going to be very interesting for grower, retailer and wholesaler, all of whom are expected to attend regularly.

Bowling.

John Sturtz, of the Florists' Bowling Club, was elected secretary of the St. Louis Tenpin League; quite an honor for John. Eighteen clubs comprise the league, which opened Monday night.

J. J. B.

BEATTY, O.—The Fairview Floral Co. is to be incorporated with a capital stock of $25,000. Those interested are Albert Hahn, C. C. Kirkpatrick, Clifford Allen, Ed. Myers and J. S. Haley. The company will purchase the Haley greenhouses and stock.

A PICNIC GROUP.

The accompanying engraving is from a snapshot photograph of a group of employes of the State Nursery Co., Helena, Mont., and their friends while enjoying their annual picnic.

This year the party journeyed in two tally-ho coaches to the Missouri river dam, which furnishes electric power for Helena and also the largest mining camp in the west (Butte), supplying both cities with electric light, car power and power for numerous shops and smelters.

There were thirty-two in the party, and a quantity of provisions. Some went fishing, others strolled about the dam while several took a steam launch ride on the lake above the dam, which is on the Missouri river 3,000 miles from its mouth.

THE NEW YORK FLOWER SHOW.

[Read before the Tuxedo Horticultural Society, Oct. 7, by the manager of the New York show.]

Anent the coming exhibition of chrysanthemums, palms, orchids and foliage plants under the auspices of the New York Florists' Club, to be held at Madison Square Garden this month and officially known as the Flower and Sculpture Exhibition, it is well to say something perhaps beforehand—not only to write a prophecy, but to write of a few of the arrangements already made and plans and features adopted.

It is not possible to hold a show on the "Hurrah" plan because New York is New York and New York methods must be followed and any catch-penny feature must be barred. The National Sculpture Society this year is working in conjunction with the New York Florists' Club. I do not know of any co-exhibit that can be more harmoniously arranged or blended with horticultural exhibits so long as it does not outweigh the display of plants and flowers. It should, however, give an atmosphere of architectural effect pleasing to the eye, without giving one the impression that it is anything else essentially, but a horticultural exhibition and not an exhibition of statuary.

For the information of the unitiated I might say that the floor area of the amphitheatre of the Madison Square Garden is nearly 35,000 square feet and the height from floor to roof, which is of glass and iron, nearly 80 feet, so you see one has quite a large "hall" to fill and decorate.

The Sculpture Society have already received nearly two hundred entries. The pieces of statuary range all the way from miniatures that can be held in the palm of the hand to pieces weighing several tons.

As to the entries for plants, flowers, orchids, foliage plants, etc., as the latest date for making entries does not lapse until October 25 they are somewhat problematical, though enough entries are already made by the large exhibitors to make this line an assurance, with several "counties" to hear from.

As to the general layout of the exhibition plans and features to be exploited, the following word-picture may give a semblance of an idea as to the beauty and magnificence of the exhibition that is to be.

The entrance or lobby leading to the exhibition will be flanked alternately with statuary and bay trees—at the immediate entrance a large triumphal archway of trellis work painted white will be erected; this will be covered with wild smilax and other greenery; the base laid out in rustic work—statuary in the niches and banked with plants. Passing under the archway one will obtain a vista of the whole exhibition, a long unbroken walk 25 feet wide, will reach to the east end;—ranged on either side will be massed the cut flower exhibits, with a background of palms, foliage plants and statuary on pedestals. A feature of the cut flowers is that they will be arranged in groups of one color—on benches of irregular size and shape, in stairway fashion, the benches covered with sheet moss. The vases will be of uniform color, white, in harmony with the general color scheme, white and green.

At the east end, that is, opposite to the archway, will be erected an immense arbor, semicircular in shape, the two ends facing the arch, all of trellis work and painted white. The base will be 6 feet in height, 12 feet wide, while stairways of rustic work will lead to the promenade, where a view of the whole exhibition can be obtained. Each side of the platform will contain 16 archways of trellis work and the roof will also be a trellis—all painted white and covered with wild smilax; between the archways plants and statuary will be alternated; in the centre of the arbor on the amphitheatre floor will be a semicircular pool of water to be filled with water lilies and aquatic grasses; a fountain will be midway between the two ends of the arbor.

On the two sides of the amphitheatre, about midway from either side and ends, will be two square arbors of trellis work arched and about 40 feet in height in the same style as the other features, and on either side about midway between these arbors and the arch and semicircular arbors four fountains will be installed.

A hedge of cedars will surround the "Garden," clipped to the height of the "boxes" which surround the amphitheatre. Where possible these will be trimmed to give a toparian effect.

A canopy of some light material and light blue in color will be hung from the roof covering the whole of the rafters and reducing somewhat the height of the building—all bunting and vari-colored decorations will be barred.

The floor of the "Garden" will be laid with tan-bark; this will add moisture to the air and be a great help to the plants —and free watering can be indulged in as there is nothing below this floor but "Mother Earth." Rustic seats and settees will be introduced and "stood around" where they will be most appreciated.

Formal tables for the exhibits will be entirely dispensed with where possible and groups of plants displayed in unconventional lines, specimens like foliage plants will be placed in raised beds, filled with tan-bark, so that the pots can be plunged.

Excellent judges have been appointed, and it now only remains for the curtain to run up and the show to begin. In conclusion I may say that success can only be achieved by the hearty co-operation of exhibitors and those interested in the success of the show. Send your entries in and stage them on time and then have it said that you materially helped to make a success of New York's most successful flower show.

Plant of New Canna "West Virginia."

CANNA WEST VIRGINIA.

We present herewith engravings from photographs of an individual plant and a field of the new Canna West Virginia on the grounds of the originator, Mr. Gustav Obermeyer, Parkersburg, W. Va.

It is a seedling from Queen Charlotte and the flowers are of similar color and markings, but the habit is dwarfed and Mr. Obermeyer considers it far superior in other directions. In the view of the field a small patch of Alphonse Bouvier is seen in the background to the left, and the comparative height of "West Virginia" may be noted.

It can be seen that the field was a mass of bloom when the photograph was taken, and Mr. Obermeyer writes that the variety starts blooming very early. He has had a fine lot of the plants in bloom for Easter in 3½-inch pots and only 8 inches high. He says he has never seen any other canna that will approach "West Virginia" as a free and continuous bloomer.

CINCINNATI.

The Market.

Though stock is scarce it has been impossible to advance prices over those of last week, as the quality is not there. Brides and Maids are both scarce, though there are more of the latter than the former. There are very few Meteors, but enough Liberties to take their place. Liberty has not as yet shown much quality. The stem is fair but the flower is inclined to come single, with little substance, and the color very dark in most cases. The present cut of Beauties is inadequate, but the prospects are good for a supply in the near future.

Chrysanthemums are making their presence felt and they are in good demand. Bergman are being cut but are not quite fully developed. Montmort is very good.

The supply of carnations is increasing, but not fast enough to keep up with the demand. In fancy sorts, Dorothy, Lawson and Estelle lead. Murphy's White is coming in fine shape and sells at sight. It has very long stems for so early in the season and the flowers are of very good size. Violets, both single and double, are now received in fair quantities. Cosmos and dahlias are now the only outdoor flowers in the market.

Business has been very good on the whole. The Jewish New Year created quite a demand. Weather is dark and rainy most of the time.

Death of Herman A. Betz.

On Saturday, at 7:15 a. m., Herman A. Betz passed away. He was one of five brothers living in this city, two of whom followed the florist's trade. Mr. Betz has been connected with the florist business in one way or another all of his life and at the time of his death was with Mr. J. A. Peterson at Westwood. He leaves a wife and one child, a daughter, about 10 years old. The funeral took place on Tuesday at 1:30 p. m., the four brothers acting as pall bearers. Mr. Betz was well known throughout the trade here and his sudden death will come as a shock to his many friends.

CLEVELAND.

The Market.

There is nothing very startling here to report. Business is rather quiet, but is better than it has been, although there is plenty of room for improvement yet. We are having a great deal of rain, which has about spoiled most of the outside flowers that were left, especially asters. Outside carnations have a dirty and bedraggled look, and cosmos and tuberoses show the effects of the rain.

Cut flowers, as a general rule, are rather scarce here at the present time. Especially is this true in regard to carnations. Roses are coming in better, but there is plenty of room for improvement. There have been some mums displayed in the windows here, notably the J. M. Gasser Company's.

Among the Craft.

A visit among some of the craft this week found them all hustling their stock under cover, as most of them are afraid of a frost after so much wet weather.

G. M. Nanmann's place was in its usual good order. Here I found some very fine cyclamens. His mums, carnations and violets are looking very good indeed. He has one entire house devoted to primulas, mostly Primula obconica. He also has some very good Gloire de Lorraine begonias growing outside in frames.

Casper Aul has his mums in fine shape and will begin cutting in about ten days. His carnations are fine, especially White Cloud and Marquis, a number of which he has in the field yet, and which he expects to plant after his early mums. He has several very good seedlings, of which one especially fine is after the stamp of Daybreak in color, but built much higher and with a much better calyx. He has a nice lot of hydrangeas in the field that he is about ready to lift. Here one new house has been added this year—a lean-to about 60 feet long by 12 feet wide.

G. Stehn was busy making geranium cuttings when I called. His stuff is all looking well, one house of violets giving promise of a good crop of flowers.

Tenep.

TORONTO.

Toronto has been favored with that kind of weather which has just about finished outdoor and garden flowers, with the exception of dahlias, which are coming in in quantities. In fact, we believe W. W. Tattle is reaping a harvest, bringing in two loads daily. Cut stuff in general has been short and the demand good.

Field of New Canna "West Virginia."

A visit to Miller & Sons, Bracondale, reveals stock in general looking very well, but then "mum's the word." Mr. Miller wears one of those broad smiles which he alone is master of, as he shows all his winter's fuel in a pile at the end of the greenhouse; those who are less fortunate do not wonder these times.

A visit to the retail stores shows every one making preparations for a big season. A number of the stores have undergone considerable alterations, and those that have not been remodeled have been treated to a considerable quantity of paint. Tidy & Son have just put in a new refrigerator and show case, which makes their store look considerably more up-to-date.

There is a rumor that a couple of the large wholesale firms are thinking seriously of opening stores, and if they do we have no doubt they will show the present generation of retailers how to fit up a florist's store and run it as it should be run. (Of course, they may change their minds.) D. J.

MILWAUKEE.

The Market.

The shortage of flowers in this market is unprecedented. There are practically no carnations in the market, and the supply of roses is far below the demand. It is all due to the continued dark weather for the past two weeks. Mums are not making any headway, so few are seen in the market. Violets are also coming in very slowly. Prices have advanced and roses range from $4 to $7 per 100; carnations from $2 to $3, according to quality.

Coal.

The coal question is beginning to be a serious problem with the florists. Hard coal cannot be obtained at all, and soft coal has advanced to almost double in price and no contracts will be accepted at present. The C. C. Pollworth Co. put in about 1,200 tons, mostly Pocahontas, before prices advanced, having laid in most of their supply in July and August. Pocahontas mine run is now quoted at $6.00 per ton, while other grades of soft coal which formerly sold at from $2.50 to $3.50 are now $4.50 to $5 per ton. Most of the trade in the northern part of the state burn pine slabs, so they will not be affected by the condition of the coal situation.

Notes.

The florist bowlers in the City League have won but one game out of six, although in the last series of three games the boys rolled a team average of 180¾ and lost on very small margins in each game.

W. H. Ellis has opened up a retail stand in the lobby of the Wells building.

William Brauch has opened a store at Farewell avenue and Brady street.

PROVIDENCE, R. I.

At the recent exhibition of the Rhode Island Horticultural Society, James Hockey, Charles Forbes and Farquhar Macrae were the judges of flowers. The display of dahlias was very extensive and the leading prize winners were H. F. Burt, W. P. Lothrop, W. H. Tarbox and Mrs. Samuel Lewis.

There was a large display of annual flowers, the numerous prizes being awarded to various amateurs.

There were many fruit entries also and the display was very attractive.

News Items.

Scarcity of news is a distinct feature at present. Coal is, of course, the chief subject of conversation, and upon this question the florists' opinions are much like those upon bloomers—they are divided. Some favor the operator and some the operatee. Personally, I notice that if a railroad wants to put a track where your house stands, they put it there and arbitrate afterward. Poor rule that will not work both ways.

Mr. Benwell, salesman for Hews' flower pots, lost an arm some few weeks since by accidentally getting it caught in some of the manufactory machinery.

Daily papers make quite an issue of the discovery of an old document by Mr. Waters while fitting up rooms for the Milk Street Floral Co. It was the enlistment roll of the Old New England Guard, whose existence was known to military men, but not its location. It is of value to them and is of the date of 1814. It seems the New England Guard was a crack company in its day.

DETROIT.

On Saturday evening last Messrs. George Reynolds and Harry Smith, of Grosse Point, entertained ten of the florists of the city at a stag dinner with a most elaborate menu. A most enjoyable time was had, and all participating voted the entertainers royal good fellows.

Cut flowers have been scarce for some time, but the sun has come out again and we may soon look for a larger supply. Rackham is cutting some fine blooms of Kalb and Willowbrook mums.

At the next meeting of the club the members will listen to a lecture by Mr. Alexander, the park botanist, on "Botanical Classification of Plants." The new president seems to be taking hold with a determination to make a record. There are several outings in view for the members, one to Mt. Clemens to visit the boys, one to Wyandotte, as the guests of Mr. Henry Smith, and the anniversary of the opening of the Michigan Cut Flower Exchange. All these together with the regular club work will keep the boys from getting the blues over the coal question, as the most of them are supplied in a measure.

Had a very pleasant visit with W. C. Cook, of Kalamazoo, on Sunday last.

It looks at present as if there would be quite a delegation from here to the Chicago show in November. Rag.

THE RETAIL FLORIST.

Next week we shall publish the first of a series of engravings from photographs of designs arranged especially for illustrating this department. The series will include hundreds of engravings, and they will cover every phase of the work of the retail florist. We believe the series will prove vitally interesting and exceedingly helpful to all in a very practical way.

Colorado Springs, Colo.—The members of the Hortieultural Society recently visited Glen Eyrie, General Palmer's estate, which R. J. Coryell has brought to its present condition of beauty and completion. It was a very enjoyable and instructive outing.

FOSTORIA, OHIO.

The Fostoria Floral Co., of this city, has just completed a 120x13-foot house that is to be used for growing smilax and ferns. On this house the Hippard gutter was used, and several of the other houses are equipped with Garland gutters. This firm has added several new houses to its plant of late years, which now consists of about 30,000 feet of glass. Five houses, 100x20, are filled with Maids, Brides, Golden Gates, Meteors, Perles and Kaiserins; three houses, 75x20, with leading kinds of carnations; one house, 75x20, with chrysanthemums; one house, 50x20, with palms and Asparagus Sprengeri; two houses, 120x13, with A. plumosus and Boston ferns, also a small propagating house. The entire stock on this place is in fine condition, especially the carnations and roses, the most of which is shipped to neighboring towns. Next spring Mr. Sackett, the proprietor, intends to put up another range of houses. VIKING.

A reference to prices for cut flowers exhibits little change from last week's quotations. The quality of all shipments shows improvement and the supply is abundant. With the Jewish holidays and the cooler weather business was on the mend. The "cold wave" came on Tuesday as promised from the west, but it was pretty well warmed before it arrived. Asters, gladioli and dahlias are all "in the sere and yellow leaf" and their glory has departed. The carnation has again asserted itself and the quality of stock is greatly improved and improving every day. Mildew has affected the rose supply badly and much of the stock is unpresentable. Violets are abundant and prices low. J. A. S.

Supply and demand pull together very well here. The only incongruity is that there is not much demand for the supply, nor supply for the demand. Saturday the demand got ahead and prices for the day took a jump; but as it is not the right date for a permanent advance, I hardly apprehend anything of the kind. A few pleasant days will regulate everything, except possibly carnations, which may insist on holding back a bit. Single violets are becoming more and more plentiful, and I saw a shipment of double ones arriving at Welch Bros.' the other day among their usual generous supply of all kinds of flowers. Chrysanthemums, too, are silently pushing their way, but as yet I have seen only a few colored ones. Asters are getting tired and sorry, indeed, and act as if they meant soon to drop out of the race. Later crops will probably arrive yet if good weather obtains.

The rain and gloom continued all through last week and with increasing demand and no expansion in receipts, prices have hardened materially all along the line, as will be seen by the quotations above.

Quality of roses has improved somewhat in spite of adverse weather conditions, and though culls are sold at as low as $2.00, as quoted, still very few are in this class and sales below $3.00 are uncommon. The bulk of the roses bring $4.00 to $5.00, with a respectable proportion reaching $6.00, while a comparatively few reach the $8.00 grade.

The shortage of carnations continues greater than that of roses, and carnation prices are considerably stiffer than last week. Though we quote fancy at $4.00 to $5.00 we hear of a few selling at $6.00. Of course there are some off quality blooms and occasional left overs from the day before sold at less than $2.00, but they are few, and $2.00 is practically the bottom, with the bulk of the stock bringing $2.50 to $3.00.

Fitzwygram no longer has the chrysanthemum field to itself. Kalb, Pacific and other sorts are appearing and of course they command better prices. A few belated asters are still arriving, but the quality is poor and they are so few as to in no way affect the market.

Double violets are improving rapidly in quality. They are largely Campbell, though there is a fair amount of Louise, and the best of them bring $1.00 to $1.25.

On Monday the sun again showed himself and we have had bright weather since. If it continues, as the weather bureau predicts, the supply will no doubt soon be swelled, with a consequent easing of prices. But no serious slump is likely, as demand shows a steady increase.

F. W. O. Schmitz, Prince Bay, N. Y., received by S. S. Vaderland his first lot (130 cases) of azaleas, and will now be in a position to meet all requirements of the trade. He sent two carloads of seed potatoes to Bermuda on last and previous steamer which were grown on his new farm on Staten Island, N. Y.

Mr. J. M Lamb informs us that the new carnation house just built by the J. Van Lindley Nursery Co., Pomona, N. C., is 34x200, and not 16x216 feet in area, as stated in his report as vice president at Asheville last August.

All the wholesalers report a decided improvement the past week. There are plenty of roses in the market, but a shortage in good carnations, which bring a good price. Select Beauties are also very scarce in this market. This week opened with bright weather, and the prospects look good for an extra supply of stock and for better business.

In roses quality and color is improving very much. All varieties are being sought after. Many store openings are using up more than usual stock. Beauty is the most sought after. Two large national conventions, one last week and one this week, are using up stock. For funeral work asters and other out-of-door flowers for filling in. Carnations are not coming in any too plentiful yet. Muma have made their appearance in limited quantity, but quality very good. Pink Glory of Pacific is bobbing up. White kinds are predominating. Indications are for yellow by the end of this week. Roses are much improved. Violets are getting better right along; of course, cold weather will bring them on better. Some very good dahlias have been coming in, as we have had no frosts as yet. Wild smilax and leucothoe sprays have come to stay for the winter. DILGER.

WAYSIDE NOTES.

Corning, N. Y.—A. H. Woeppel will cut Glory of the Pacific by Oct. 10. His chrysanthemums are in fine shape, grown to single and three buds on a plant. Begonia Gloire de Lorraine is well grown here, proving that it does not require a specialist to handle it successfully. In carnations, Queen Louise is the best white; plants have made a strong growth outside, fully equal to Lawson and Marquis, which are immense. Marie Louise violets are the best in this locality.

Hornellsville, N. Y.—W. A. Wettlin lost his entire stock of carnations by the late floods, and instead of having a large number of plants to sell, was a purchaser. His loss ran up into the thousands. He has some consolation in the fact that the question of coal will not worry him. He burns natural gas at 29 cents per 1,000 feet. What a bonanza!

Olean, N. Y.—Mrs. F. H. Johnson has had her snug little plant thoroughly overhauled and put in shape for big business, which the enterprising lady predicts for us all winter in spite of the coal famine. D. R. Herron has completed two houses, each 46x120 feet, for carnations. This with his other plant gives him a place large enough to supply local demand.

HARD BUYING Makes Easy Selling.

Two Million Bulbs Consisting of Lilium Harrisii, Lilium Longiflorum, Hyacinths, French and Dutch, Tulips, Narcissus, Callas, Freesias, etc. The time to buy such things is when owners want to sell. We are the owners —you the prospective buyers. Of course, we always want to sell, but just now unusual conditions make us extra anxious. So anxious are we to reduce our enormous surplus, our prices are worth studying.

The quality of our bulbs has such a well-known standard of genuineness that emphasizing the fact is unnecessary. Yet, if you carry this truth in mind when reading our Catalogue and Special Offers, you will fully understand the values we give. If you can use a quantity, we will gladly make you a special quotation. Otherwise, see our Fall Bulb Catalogue. It is well worth having near-by.

Mention The Review when you write.

Bradford, Pa.—With characteristic grit George L. Graham has raised from the ruins caused by the disastrous explosion in the summer a plant which far eclipses the old range. It is but temporary, as he intends building a thoroughly up-to-date block of houses down in the valley close by, where he has a fine piece of land. Chrysanthemums are looking first-class. Mr. Valentine, the genial clerk in the store says it's a pleasure to handle the Col. Appleton, Timothy Eaton and Mrs. Robinson, with other leading kinds grown here.

Jamestown, N. Y.—"Mum's the word" here just now. They are the first that greet the eye on approaching the mammoth establishment of the Lake View (or, more properly speaking, Broad View,) Rose Gardens. I looked for Mr. Roney, but he was lost in the forest comprising Merry Monarch, Ed Parr, Willowbrook, Glory of the Pacific, Bonaffon, etc. I could just see the form of Alec. Scott in the distance, and those who are acquainted with him know he is no midget by any means. I mention this to give some idea of the height and growth of this popular, though short-lived, flower. "Solid beds are the thing," remarked the busy Mr. Roney when finally I landed him. No more benches. What a change! Not a small thing to convert almost the whole plant from benches to beds in one season, but it has been done. Destruction is far more rapid than construction, and it has taken all the resources of the resourceful Mr. Broadhead to get things in shape for fall, but it is almost completed. The specter of the coal fiend has no terrors with the immense coal bins restocked. The vast cellar built for mushroom culture will be utilized in addition. We have seen Beauties grown here from year to year, but certainly never saw them looking more promising than at time of writing. Brides and Maids are also in a healthy state; but little mildew, and by the way, we shall doubtless see more mildewed stock around this season than for many past, owing chiefly to the cost of fuel, which will compel many to hold off until the last moment before firing up. Carnations are looking well and are fast growing out of their summer set-back. Causperleptha is found to be a great insecticide and fungicide, but sulpho-tobacco soap is the most up-to-date palm wash. The effect is seen in the clean, healthy condition of the stock. There may be other insecticides just as good. I noted shipments of palms and ferns going out at a lively pace.

Elmira, N. Y.—John Rudy, gardener to the Hon. J. Sloate Fassett, is the fortunate possessor of a seedling scarlet carnation (Jubilee x Bon Ton) which will, when distributed, be an acquisition to the small list of profitable scarlets. Placed amidst Adonis it is difficult to distinguish it from that grand flower, and it has points that will prove its claim to be a first-class commercial scarlet. Mr. Rudy has a fine batch of mums and may exhibit at Kansas City in November. Grove P. Rawson is at the front as usual with chrysanthemums. Chadwick is one of the finest and most profitable varieties. At Hoffman's can be seen a splendid lot of carnations. Lawson, Marquis and Triumph are considered the "big three." Dorothy is a strong favorite through this section, and deservedly so.

Binghamton, N. Y.—Mrs. M. L. Barnes has made considerable improvement in her plant, which under the care of Henry Wilbur, is in a flourishing condition. We never saw stock looking healthier than this season. Gilbert & Moore is the name of a new firm. Both have been in the business here for several years and are well known. The combination should work profitably.

Allentown, Pa.—Ernest Ashley reports a busy season, especially with funeral work. He is well pleased with the change recently made of retiring from the road. Stock is in excellent condition and prospects for fall business bright.

New York City.—I took a run into the great metropolis and called on several of the big importers. The rush is over and they have time to talk. Some commented on the lily report published in a contemporary recently, and remarked that such information was misleading, as the crop is full and bulbs are quite up to usual size. The only bulb that is scarce is the Chinese sacred lily, supplies of which are late in arriving this year. One house filled its contracts and crowned itself with glory. Early forcing tulips are rather scarce. The crop of cabbage and cauliflower growing on Long Island promises to be a good one, with a full seed harvest.

Albany, N. Y.—John Dingwall has given up the raising of bedding stock, for which he has held the banner so many years, and will grow carnations more extensively, owing to an increasing retail demand. Stock is in excellent condition. Fred Goldring will be in the market early with chrysanthemums. Bergmann is an old favorite, and deservedly so. Eyres and Danker each have a range of glass to supply their respective stores. Eyres has the old Davidson place in town nicely fitted up. Danker has just built four houses, Lord & Burnham construction, upon a fine site a short distance from the city. Both report a good summer business.

Amsterdam, N. Y.—J. C. Hatcher was just on the eve of departing for Washington to witness the gathering of the G. A. R. veterans—grizzled old warriors, of whom we have a few in our profession. Son George reports an excellent season, unusually so for summer, managing to spare enough time to renovate the handsome store, which is one of the finest in the Empire State.

Little Falls, N. Y.—J. O. Graham has returned from an extended European trip, loaded down with purchases made on the other side, and with a store of information gained at the same time. It is several years since he made a visit and was surprised to see so many changes. He will not rest until he secures a market here on the order of the Glasgow, or noted Covent Garden places. I met here the genial F. Creighton, who succeeded Walter Mott at Dreer's. He reports good business. All speak of a busy fall with the specter of a coal famine removed. W. M.

SPRINGFIELD, MASS.

After a siege of nearly two weeks of rain, the sun finally broke out Friday. This spell of cloudy weather, with the help of the coal famine, has brought business to a standstill.

Asters are about gone, and pinks are not coming in very plentifully. There is a scarcity of flowers, but a scarcity of flowers and a lack of business travel well together: we complain of both. Ino.

PIPING.

Please tell me the best way to pipe my greenhouse for hot water heating. I have an upright flue boiler and the bottom of boiler is two feet below floor of greenhouse. Can I use 1-inch pipe for hot water heating? House is 20x20 ft., and 7 ft. 4 in. to ridge. Two feet of the sides are glass. Rafters are 6 ft. long.

A. R.

In reply to A. R., to heat the ridge and furrow greenhouse 20x20, as described, by hot water, take a 2-inch flow from the top of the boiler, branching into two 1½-inch, then run 1½-inch down the grade in each ridge to the far end, taking off one 1¼-inch connection at the far end of the center bench and continuing 1¼-inch to the doorway, then drop and then connect to the coils under the side benches. For coils, use 1¼-inch pipe, six 1¼-inch pipes under each of the side benches and four 1¼-inch pipes under each side of the center bench, making twenty 1¼-inch pipes in all.

Make return connections at the boiler end of the house of same sizes as the flow, and return to the boiler at the bottom; make a connection from the return pipe near the boiler to the expansion tank, which must be placed at a higher level than the ridge of the greenhouse, providing air vent at the top of the rising flow main over the boiler, as this would be the highest point in the apparatus, all pipes grading downward from here back to the boiler. Probably, the most convenient form of air vent would be to make an 1¼-inch pipe connection from the top of the flow main into the top of the tank.

Mr. David E. Geddis, who lately bought out Mrs. E. A. Williams' South Side store in Pittsburg, Pa., surprised his many friends on Wednesday last, October 1st, by quietly marrying Miss Alma Dorathy Klein, and slipping away to Philadelphia on their wedding trip, where they had a very pleasant time amongst their many friends. Mr. Geddis is to be congratulated on his good fortune, in winning a wife so amiable and pleasant as Mrs. Geddis, as everyone who had the pleasure of meeting her, have nothing but praise for her. We extend to the young couple our heartiest congratulations and best wishes for their future happiness.

BOILER AND PIPING.

I have a 25-horse power horizontal return tubular boiler with 28 2-inch tubes. Can it be used economically to heat these five greenhouses with hot water? Four houses cover 54x80 feet, no partition, 10 feet to ridge, south wall 3 feet of glass, north wall double boarded. One house is 20x75 and 12 feet to ridge.

How should these houses be piped to maintain a temperature of 55 to 60 degrees? Outside temperature never known to fall below zero. Top of boiler even with walks in four houses. Houses raised 2 feet above level of boiler shed. Walk of upper house 6 feet above boiler. Would like to use 2-inch flows and 1½-inch returns. J. H.

In reply to J. H., as he does not give the length of the tubes, the diameter of the boiler nor the size of the grates, we cannot advise as to its capacity, but if it is, as he states, about 25-horse power, it will be amply large enough to heat the houses he describes. For heating with water in 2-inch pipes to maintain a temperature of 55 to 60 degrees in his latitude, at least one lineal foot of pipe must be used to every one and nine-tenths square feet of exposed glass, measuring over sides, roof and end.

I notice that J. H. wishes to use 2-inch and 1½-inch pipes. If he has to buy new pipe, it would be better to use all 2-inch and avoid the greater friction contained within the smaller pipes. If, however, he has 1½-inch pipe on hand which he desires to use, it would be necessary to substitute 1¼ lineal feet of 1½ inch pipe for each foot of 2-inch pipe for which he substitutes smaller pipe.

In order to reach the farther house 20x75 feet, a 3-inch main flow and return should extend from the boiler to the coils in this distant house. All pipes should grade upward from the boiler to the extreme distant ends of the houses, there being provided with air vents. An expansion tank should be connected to the return main near the boiler and placed at an elevation of at least 3 feet above the highest point of the coils.

PIPING.

I have a house 20x104 piped for steam and the system does not give satisfaction. The boiler is 20-horse power and it is below the water line. The flow from the boiler is 2-inch and from it there are two 1¼-inch flows that lead into the house. The three 1¼-inch returns under the north bench are supplied by the 1¼-inch flow near the ridge and the four 1¼-inch returns under the south and center benches are supplied by the 1¼-inch flow near the purlin. Smokestack is 35 feet tall. Temperature desired is 58 degrees. Please tell me what the trouble is. R. J. F.

In reply to R. J. F., I have considered carefully the diagram which he sends with his inquiry, and see no reason why the apparatus he describes does not work satisfactorily. The size of the flow and return mains are ample, the mains and distribution of the pipes in the house are also well arranged. He does not show the location of any air cocks, nor does he indicate clearly the direction of the grade of the pipes. The pipes should all grade downward from the highest point, which I understand is where the 2-inch branches at the ridge to the two 1¼-inch mains; from this point they should grade downward back to the boiler, having a fall of not less than 5 inches in 100 feet and as much more as can be conveniently given. Air cocks should be provided on each pipe in each coil about one foot before branching into the return main.

The boiler which he describes as 20-horse-power would have a capacity for heating another house one-half the size of the present one.

Henry W. Gibbons.

New York

WILMINGTON, O.

A call on the Wilmington Floral Co. found Bro. Henderson finishing two houses 20x54. They are well built of cypress material. Harry is a gentleman and his stock looks well.

Leo Weltz's Sons have four houses of old style and have just filled one with carnations. The plants were the finest we have ever seen, short and stocky. All their plants look well and healthy. They have also a complete nursery, where everything in the fruit and ornamental line is healthy and well grown. The Weltz boys are heavy weights in the community and we believe any of them would pull down the scales to over 200 pounds.

Both firms report business good and both are pushing out for trade.

The two small houses at Loveland are out of use since the death of the proprietor, and his widow has moved to Epworth Heights. Henry Conklin.

THE RETAIL FLORIST.....

Carnations.

We present herewith the first illustrations in our series of floral arrangements. We start with the simplest forms of funeral bunches of carnations, and shall later take up more elaborate forms, also other flowers and arrangements for other purposes, aiming to, in the course of time, cover thoroughly the entire field of floral arrangement.

In each of the bunches of fifty shown in this issue the same lot of flowers was used, one bunch being made up and photographed, then taken to pieces and the same flowers used again in a different way. In the bunches of seventy-five the addition of twenty-five flowers to the original lot was the only change in stock aside from the greens. The idea was to show the different effects that might be obtained by the use of the same flowers.

These bunches were all arranged by Mr. L. P. Walz, Chicago, and we print his remarks regarding same below.

Bunch No. 1 is made up of fifty ordinary sized carnations, with Asparagus plumosus, common ferns for a back ground, and tied with ribbon. It is a so-called careless bunch and quite a favorite style. In making up this bunch it is necessary to wire about half of the flowers so they can be made to stay exactly where you want them. No. 24 wire is probably the best to use. Sprays of Asparagus plumosus make a pretty, graceful and lasting green and a good foundation for the flowers, it being easier to place the flowers with this than any other green. The maker-up should be careful not to place the flowers evenly for there is nothing so distasteful as to see them arranged evenly, so as to present a flat surface. A bunch of fifty carnations should be raised from eight to ten inches at the highest point. Arrange the flowers as nearly as possible in the way in which they grow naturally.

It is desirable to occasionally use carnation foliage and buds as shown in No. 2. This bunch also contains fifty flowers, and is finished with a cluster of Adiantum cuneatum at the base.

Such bunches as No. 1 and No. 2 are usually sold at $3 in Chicago, where 50 cents a dozen is a popular price for fairly good carnations.

No. 3 shows a bunch of seventy-five carnations arranged in the same style as No. 1, and No. 4 contains seventy-five blooms arranged much as in No. 2. These bunches of seventy-five, which is a very popular size, usually sell at $5, with or without ribbon. Ribbons seem to be less used now than in former years.

All these bunches can be made much larger by merely adding more flowers and other material, the selling price often reaching $25. In taking orders we find the best way is to show the customer a made-up bunch if we happen to have one, or a photograph, and name a price for the bunch complete. Do not give the price of the flowers per dozen, unless you are asked. By showing the customer as nearly as possible what he or she will get often a larger and better arrangement can be sold, and you will not only make a larger profit, but the customer will in the end be better satisfied. I do not mean to overcharge the customer, but to get a price that will enable you to give good value.

One thing is certain. You cannot afford to sell your carnations arranged in a handsome bunch at the price of loose flowers. Your time, material and artistic ability are certainly worth something.

L. P. Walz.

Funeral Bunches. No. 1.

Now is the time to prepare advs. for our special Thansgiving number, to be issued Nov. 13.

ROSES.

Feeding.

To aid in the development and maturing of crops, manure in a liquid form is of great benefit. This being ready for immediate absorption by plants, is most effectually employed when the latter are in an active state, and in want of a stimulant for assisting the development of a crop. Being easily assimilated, its action is quick and has the advantage that it can be applied just at the season when stimulants are required, and of such a strength as is best suited to the various stages of growth to insure best results.

The best and safest material to use for this purpose is cow manure, for while possessing all the elements necessary for supplying the wants of the rose, it possesses few of the caustic principles so prevalent in chemical preparations.

For the proper preparation of a liquid from this material, a tank should be built of sufficient capacity to hold at least as much water as will be required for one application, this to be used as a reservoir to distribute from, and which should, if possible, be connected with the water service pipes and pump. Another tank of smaller size should be built on a higher level and connected with the first.

Fill the smaller tank with manure and water, and allow it to stand until fermentation takes place. It should then be drained through a half inch screen into the larger tank, and water added to reduce it to the required strength.

The first application should be rather weak, gradually increasing the strength of after applications as the necessities of the plants require. The best stage at which to begin feeding is when the young flower stems have attained a length of from four to seven inches, feeding once a week if weather permits, four such applications being usually sufficient to perfect a crop. As the days lengthen, with more sunshine and consequently increased root action, the plants will be benefited by increasing the strength and frequency of the feeding.

Plants which show any signs of being in a back going or unhealthy state are in no condition to derive benefit from liquid food. This but accentuates the trouble. Sheep, pigeon or poultry manure are all of a more concentrated and powerful nature than cow manure, and consequently they must be used in more limited quantities, and be much more weakened by dilution. To hasten the development of a crop during the short days, much benefit can be derived from a careful use of sulphate of ammonia.

All chemicals intended for use when dissolved in water should be tried first in a weak solution and the strength gradually increased if results warrant it. For a first application of sulphate of ammonia half an ounce to each gallon of water is sufficient.

In the use of liquid and concentrated foods watchfulness and careful observation play an important part, as an error may result in the absolute ruin of a crop. The grower must put on his thinking cap, and keep it there, and should be guided by a great many circumstances, such as weather conditions, health of plants, stage of crops, etc., in regulating the strength and frequency of their use.

CARNATION NOTES—EAST.

Mulching or Top Dressing.

Which shall it be? This depends on the quality and depth of soil when plants were housed.

With soil deficient in quantity and quality of plant food, no doubt a mulch would be of benefit after the plants are well under way, but it is preferable to have soil of such quality, that no addition need be made before Oct. 15 or Nov. 1 and that in the form of a top dressing, the food elements of which will be carried well down into the soil in two waterings.

My experience leads me to differ with the opinion of many, that the carnation is naturally a surface feeder. At digging time the feeding roots are found well down, performing their work in the manured soil and moisture below, often having particles of manure adhering to them, proving that they seek where they shall find. Mulching, too shallow benches, and careless watering, where the surface only is wet, tend to make the roots seek the surface.

Better defer the mulch until early spring, when it will serve the double purpose of supplying food and keeping the roots moist and cool at a time when the sun is growing stronger instead of weaker. Carnations should not be starved, neither should they be overfed, but of the two extremes the underfed is the easier to remedy, for with too much food in the soil it is a hard matter to remove the surplus.

Our plan is to prepare a mixture of six parts soil, one part bone flour and a sprinkle of air-slacked lime, two weeks in advance under cover, turning the pile over every day or two, keeping it evenly moist. This will give you a top dressing, the fertilizing qualities of which are practically at once available.

Choosing a bright day in which you are to water, apply at the rate of a single handful to a row of five or six plants, following immediately with water, giving enough to satisfy the plants, but allowing none to run through. The next watering will carry practically all the remaining elements where most needed.

Two weeks later a coat of unleached hardwood ashes is applied and watered in the same manner. This will be of great benefit to your Thanksgiving crop, but you must be the judge of the condition of your soil as to its being advisable to top dress again to improve the Christmas supply. Watering having much to do with this operation, it is well to remember always in watering, not to drench the soil to the point of saturation, thereby allowing valuable food to be carried away in solution. It will be some time yet before feeding with liquid manure need be begun, but get your material ready and tank or barrels in order.

Funeral Bunches. No. 2.

Summer Blooms.

Put in a supply of cuttings soon for summer blooming, selecting varieties such as Crane for red, Joost and Avondale for pink, Mrs. Fisher and Queen Louise for white. There may be others you have personal experience with; as mine is limited I can only name a few. When cuttings are rooted, pot into 2¼-in. pots, keep in a cool house, shift to 3 and 4 as necessary. In due time I hope to give you my plan for having a supply of bloom next summer.

Geo. S. Osborn.

LEAF SPOT.

The carnation leaves sent by "A Carnation Grower" are badly affected with what is commonly called leaf spot, and which is caused by a fungus called Septoria dianthi. The cause is too much water and a foul atmosphere.

You have not been giving your carnations enough ventilation and probably watering overhead too much and too late in the day. If you will dust the plants well with air slaked lime or grape dust and water only at the roots for a few weeks the trouble will likely disappear. Open the ventilators wide during fair days and leave them up a couple of inches over night even if you have to leave steam on. This is, of course, taking for granted that you have some coal to fire with. Those of us who use soft coal and happen to have a good supply on hand are indeed fortunate, but we must be careful that we do not waste any of it and firing will often be dispensed with when under ordinary conditions we would like to have a little steam on for a few hours toward morning.

Keeping the ventilators up a couple of inches will do a great deal of good when the days are fair, but if a cold, damp rain sets in you must start the steam. Did you ever see a rain that was not damp? Perhaps not, but you have seen many a rain that seemed to merely water and freshen up all vegetation thoroughly and after it was over the atmosphere seemed bracing and healthy. You have also experienced those chilly, drizzling rains that chill you clear to the bone. That kind of a rain is particularly hard on your carnations, and although the rain does not come into your houses the atmosphere becomes charged with dampness and that is just as bad.

To keep the air moving is the best way to dry it and a steam pipe in each house will do that. You can make it still more effective by painting the pipe with a mixture of sulphur, lime and water. Use one part sulphur to three parts of lime and mix about as thick as paint, and paint a streak about an inch wide the full length of the house. If this is made too strong it will take the color out of the colored blooms and half open buds, so be careful. Some growers use sulphur and linseed oil, making a stiff paste and smearing a little on the pipe here and there and it seems to answer the purpose.

The greater part of this article does not deal directly with the eradication of the spot disease, and yet it tells you just exactly what you should do to prevent it from making its appearance. Fumigating with tobacco will not check the spot in the least. A. F. J. Baur.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS.

Packing and Shipping.

When the crop is ready for market, the question of getting it to market in good condition becomes the point at issue. The chrysanthemum is a bulky flower and the cost of shipping considerable, and when one has gone to considerable trouble to get his flowers packed as he thinks just about right, it is aggravating to receive word from one's wholesaler to say that flowers arrived in bad condition, or something to that effect. It is very funny, and sometimes pathetic, to see the different kinds of boxes that different kinds of growers ship their flowers in. It is a great mistake to use a deep box, and pile layer on layer, for by the time such a box gets to its destination the bottom layers are crushed into a shapeless mass, and the flowers often spoiled. After considerable trouble over our shipping we finally figured out a box that answers very well, and now our troubles are reduced to a minimum.

We use a box about 5½ feet long, 20 inches wide and 10 inches deep. This box will hold from 18 to 24 flowers of extra special grade, and of course more if the flowers are smaller. Such a box is easily made. You can buy the pieces already cut at a less price than you can buy the lumber and cut it yourself. Use white pine boards 10 inches wide, and then six boards will make bottom, sides and lid. Nail your box together and put angle irons on the corners, and it will be found that the lid is better if entirely separate from the box, because if you hinge it on the box you will have to fix it about every time you ship. Half-inch lumber is plenty strong enough if you reinforce the box in the center with another light piece of wood across the bottom and up the sides, nailed, of course, inside the box. If you use heavier lumber you will find that a box will only last just about so long, anyway, and you will have to pay more expressage on a heavier box, to say nothing of the anathemas you will receive and the abuse your box will receive at the hands of the gentle expressman.

In packing your flowers, always put a roll of paper under the neck of the flowers in the bottom layer. Have the roll thick enough so that the flowers can rest in the box without crushing. Put the second layer just back from the first, so that the second row of heads are not resting on the bottom row and so on. We always put a small piece of tissue paper between each flower to keep them from rubbing, and this is important in the case of Japanese varieties, as the petals are apt to interlace, and the flower liable to be pulled to pieces when unpacking.

When the box is full the foliage is generally thick enough to keep the flowers from moving, but where this is not the case a couple of slats can be nailed across to keep down the flowers. Pack from each end of the box to the center, and then if you need slats put them on each side just after the last layer of flowers. I don't believe in packing chrysanthemum flowers too tight, but they must be sufficiently tight so that they cannot move up and down every time the box is in motion. It is perhaps unnecessary to say that the flowers should always be placed in water over night, so that the stems can fill up with water to keep the flower fresh until the journey is completed.

Always have a couple of cords around the box, one a foot or so from each end, then the box can be picked up conveniently by one man and is not so likely to be stood on end or be otherwise abused.

Cannas.

A biting frost occurred a few days ago. Hope you had nothing tender outside. It usually comes with us from the 5th to the 10th and there is no excuse for being caught. Cannas will now want to be lifted and stored for the winter. They are killed down to within a foot or so of the ground. That has not hurt them in the least, but don't leave them out to be frozen down to the surface of the ground, for that will hurt. Dig them up, shake off most of the soil, and if a fine, sunny day, and mild, they will suffer no harm to dry out a little in the sun, or even a day or two if you are quite sure there will be no frost. Cut off the tops, leaving seven or eight inches above the roots.

We don't lose any roots nowadays, because we know where to keep them. Beneath a carnation bench does nicely. It's seldom after this time, or again till you water heavily in April and May, that you would ever soak the beds so heavily that they would drip through, but beneath a bench of plants where there was a thin layer of sand or ashes you always have lots of water falling through and that is just what would rot the canna roots. They want no drip on them. Don't put the roots on the moist ground or they will take hold of it, send out roots and begin to grow long before you want them to start. So lay down some old inch boards to keep the clumps of earth off the ground, and be particular that you label them correctly and keep varieties separate, or you will be planting mixed beds next spring. Or you will have Grover Cleveland flirting with Madame Crozy, or J. D. Eisele making goo-goo eyes at Florence Vaughan, which is entirely out of place in a well regulated flower garden.

Caladiums.

Caladium esculentum bulbs keep perfectly well about the same way if it pays. They can be bought in the spring so cheaply that it scarcely pays to bother. Cut the big stem off above the bulb and place them on boards beneath a rose bench. It's better to keep the caladiums a little warmer than the cannas.

Hydrangeas.

Hydrangeas are not hurt by a little frost. Even those that are wanted for Easter forcing are benefited by a slight frost; it ripens the wood. The frost we have had has not hurt them, but be careful to get them under cover when 5 or 6 degrees are expected. It is rather difficult to find a place just suited for wintering large tubs of hydrangeas (not so difficult farther south). Mr. Pierson, of Tarrytown, or rather in this case, Scarboro, digs a trench four or five feet deep and six feet wide, puts the tubs down there, and before very cold weather makes a roof of boards on which can be put mats or leaves or evergreen boughs. No place could be better, for they can be uncovered early, or partially uncovered, and still left dormant.

Few of us have root houses, such as nurserymen have, and in the ordinary basement it is too warm or too dry. Last year we built a shed, but built it substantially, and put in a very small hot water apparatus with a few 1¼-inch pipes running around the walls and a few big windows on each side. The pipes will keep the place about 35 degrees when a zero zephyr is blowing through your whiskers, and that's all you want, and a few degrees of frost outside necessitates no fire at all. We have crowded this place with sweet bays and hydrangeas, and it's just the place for them.

Bay Trees.

Those young men who never saw the sweet bay growing as a hardy evergreen shrub in Europe may not know what a hardy tree it is. That depends on how it has been treated. I have seen it come through a winter in the south of England unharmed by 20 degrees of frost, and saw many beautiful specimens killed to the ground in '61 because it went down close to zero. You will think by quoting so ancient a case that I am old. Not at all; I merely observed these climatic effects when an infant. If coddled up in a greenhouse all winter and suddenly exposed to 10 degrees of frost in April, it would likely hurt them, but in the fall they are much better left out of doors for another month, and 10 degrees of frost will not hurt them in the least.

A Storage Shed.

I would just say that this $300 shed has been an excellent investment, and I cannot see how we could now dispense with it. It could, however, be improved on. In place of the floor being on the level of surrounding ground, or a few inches above it, it could have been excavated six or seven feet. The cellar part could have been utilized for storing many roots, dahlias, etc., and the upper part for the sweet bays, etc. The warmth from the excavated part would also have helped much to resist the cold. This is a most useful structure on any florist's place, but the excavation, drainage, stone or cement walls, etc., would easily have doubled the first cost. My little shanty is about 50x20, and that will hold a lot of sweet bays.

Just let me remind you that you must not let the sweet bays get dust dry. The cooler the place the less moisture they will need, but they are evergreens and must not be dust dry. If very little fire heat is used and the shed feels moist, the hydrangeas will want but little water, just enough to keep the wood from shriveling.

Lilies.

The Japanese longiflorum lilies are arriving, and I am glad to say what we have received have a good, deep yellow color, denoting a ripened bulb. Pot them at once. A 7 to 9 wants a 6-inch pot. We pot an inch lower than we would an ordinary plant when shifting, and fill up that inch with good soil when we bring them into the houses about the first of December. We are not trying any Bermuda longiflorum. The last 1,000 we had died of paresis at a promising age. As I have once stated before this fall, if you have the heat at your command after New Years, there is no advantage in putting these Japan bulbs into the houses now. They are doing in a cold frame all you want them to do for the next six or eight weeks or more, viz., making roots. In case of heavy rains or a very hard frost be prepared to cover them with sash or boards.

THE ASHEVILLE CONVENTION FROM A COMMISSION MAN'S STANDPOINT.

BY SAMUEL S. PENNOCK.

[Read before the Florists' Club of Philadelphia, Oct. 7.]

Mr. President and Gentlemen:—It has been something like two years since I have enjoyed the honor of addressing you. It seemed to us at that time that we had attained a large measure of success in the promotion of the interests of floriculture. Now, looking over the succeeding months and their accomplishments, we may well conclude that we had then laid a basis for present attainments, which in their turn are to become the means to larger ends.

In the assignment of the question which I have to discuss I am prone to wander into other, though kindred, subjects rather than keep to the road laid out for me, because, while the wholesaler always has his own particular business at heart, yet because of its very nature he takes a deep interest in that of his associates, the retailer and grower. So you will pardon me if I take, or seem to take, an interest in things out of the direct line which our subject indicates.

The Asheville convention will be remembered by all who were there as a most successful and pleasant one. It took us to a section of the country never before visited by our society, and brought a great many of our southern friends in as members who in all probability would never have joined had the society not met in a southern city, thus bringing us in closer touch with the South.

The surroundings of Asheville are unrivaled by those of any city that our body has ever visited, situated, as it is, right in the heart of the Allegheny mountains of Western North Carolina at an elevaton of some 2,200 feet, with a number of mountain peaks 6,000 feet or over within a radius of ten to twenty miles, thus affording drives and climbs of unrivaled magnificence, and those who took advantage of them will have something long to remember.

Biltmore, with its thousands of acres surrounded by lofty mountains, must be seen to be appreciated. Jaunts to Overlook mountain and many other interesting points, not omitting the climb by some eleven members to the summit of Mt. Mitchell, were all most enjoyable affairs.

The convention in itself was of inestimable value to those attending, valuable information having been derived therefrom, and new and better ways of conducting business indicated by the lessons taught. These advantages could not have been acquired in any other way, and with so little time and expense.

The essays were very instructive and deserve careful consideration by all who read the reports. The subjects were admirably handled by the writers, who showed an accurate knowledge of the subjects in hand. In addition one was particularly impressed with the extemporaneous addresses, which were full of useful information, coming, as they did, from some of the brightest members of the floricultural world.

Taking it all in all the convention was a most decided success for everyone concerned. The full purpose of it was accomplished. The florist came to meet and to discuss, to interchange thoughts, and to take away that which his associate had to give, returning therefor value received. The other phase of the convention, and a most important one, was the advertising end, where were new and elaborate displays of greenhouse improvements, flowers, plants, novelties and supplies; and it must be that everyone who viewed them and made a study of their make-up and arrangement, as well as of their merits and uses, must have left better fitted for his own particular line of business.

And now, to recur to our especial subject, it is in order for us to note in considering the commission man's view point, that any movement or action which benefits any branch of the trade must needs be helpful to him, for it is by the very success and advancement of others that he is enabled to put forth his best effort; and on the other hand, his effectiveness in accomplishing his ends is his best assurance of attaining a progressive and helpful position, both with respect to himself and the ultimate consumer. Thus we find that in no other business is the underlying principle of the convention better shown than that more is to be accomplished by concerted endeavor than by individual effort.

To this end did the convention direct its efforts, and in this purpose will the influence be found to have its result. I am sure that every wholesaler there present was constantly impressed with the great good that the convention was accomplishing, and felt that his future interest depended to a considerable degree on the continuance of an institution at once so beneficial and necessary. I consider it a great privilege to have attended the convention, and I trust that I, with many of you, shall in the future be enabled to take part in the work.

AN EUROPEAN TRIP.

BY HENRY F. MICHELL.

[Read before the Philadelphia Florists' Club October 7.]

Mr. President and Members of the Philadelphia Florists' Club:—It gives me great pleasure to comply with your request to make some remarks about my recent European trip, and hope that you may pardon the rambling sketch which I have jotted down from my memory since returning. Had I known before I started on my journey that I would be called upon by this honorable body to give it some notes about my trip, I should have prepared myself with a more interesting paper for you. As my trip was, as you know, partly pleasure and recreation, I shall, with your permission, not talk shop or horticultural topics exclusively.

All the Americans who have traveled abroad will confess that they need not have gone to Europe to see more beautiful scenery than is to be found in our own grand country. Visit the lands between the Atlantic and Pacific, our own glistening lakes, the Rocky Mountains and other places of American scenery, and I feel sure that they compare most favorably with, if not exceed, the much talked of places in Europe. Certainly the customs, languages, etc., are a complete change to Americans, which is a great recreation indeed.

After a journey of very pleasant weather on the ocean we reached London, where we expected to see the much talked of coronation of King Edward and the Queen. The English people, as well as all the visitors, were so disappointed when the news was announced of the postponement that hardly a pleasant face or a smile was visible on the millions of people for two or three days.

London, especially on Regent and Oxford streets, Pall Mall, Strand and other avenues where the great processions were to pass, was in a grand holiday attire. The decorations on the great business and government buildings were massive and superb. The floral part was certainly effective. Nearly all of the balconies, windows and grand stands were a mass of bloom. The principal combinations, however, were red geraniums, white daisies and blue lobelias, which must have been grown especially for this celebration, judging by the great quantities used.

My trips around London were principally to the famous Kew Gardens, Hyde Park, Hampton Court, Kensington Gardens, Crystal Palace and St. James Park. All these grand parks are kept up in the very best manner, especially the lawns were carefully taken care of. One of my most interesting visits was the day spent at an extensive mushroom spawn establishment near London. The greatest care is taken there in the selection of spawn, which in addition to growing mushrooms for the London market is the proprietor's only business. I was made very welcome indeed by the gentleman, who on my visit ordered his new United States flag to be hoisted on the great flag staff in my honor, which was quite patriotic indeed. I asked him for the best remedy for the disastrous maggots and flies, and he informed me that the following was the best method to avoid or destroy the pests: Two ounces of salt in a gallon of water; sprinkle this over the beds once a week. A covering of salt sea sand is also a preventive. He also advised preparing the manure one month before spawning. He also advised never to sprinkle the mushroom beds until the mushrooms are nearly due.

From England we went to France. Paris, the gay and beautiful city, is well worth a visit. The grand buildings, the beautiful and very clean streets, the broad boulevards with well trained and well kept trees are great objects of interest. France has a tremendous sized seed establishment, where I spent three days to inspect the trial grounds and warehouses. I was greatly impressed by their perfect system of handling seeds, their elaborate and expensive seed testing apparatus and facilities. I certainly obtained some very valuable information at this place. I must also not fail to speak in the highest terms of the grand entertainment accorded us by our host and hostess.

Paris has some of the finest public parks in the world, for instance, the Bois de Boulogne, the Versailles parks and a large number of others, all laid out in beautiful walks, which radiate principally from circles. By standing in any of these circles you have a view as far as the eye can reach of about six avenues of trees from each circle (very much resembling spokes of a wheel), a grand sight indeed.

After our stay in France our next place was Switzerland, which happens to be my native country. I naturally felt very much at home during our whole stay in this beautiful country, noted for its natural scenery, with mountains nearly reaching the skies, and lakes by the score, one more beautiful and fascinating than the other. In Zurich is located the most complete station in the world for testing seeds. A number of professors are engaged in this very important work, which is a state institution. The principal places we visited were Berne, the capital of Switzerland; Interlaken and Luzerne, two of the grandest places on this earth.

Our trip then took us into Germany. Munich was the first large city for us to visit. The grounds of the king's palace were handsomely laid out with carpet bedding designs, fountains and grand immense lawns carefully kept in order. Another great attraction in Munich is the immense breweries, some of which have very large gardens attached to them. These gardens are filled every evening with the population, rich and poor, all enjoying the large steins filled with the purest quality of beer. One garden has a seating capacity of 8,000. I was informed that it was filled every evening during the summer. I would have liked to have you all with me on the evening I spent there. Not one disorderly or intoxicated person is seen in these popular places. Fathers bring their wives and children to hear the military bands, which perform up-to-date music for the entertainment of guests.

Among the other places in Germany we visited Frankfort, Wisbaden, Cologne and Erfurt. The last named place is one of the greatest seed growing districts abroad. I spent considerable time posting myself in the varieties, methods and crops. It really does us seedsmen good to freshen up our records and knowledge by occasional visits. These seed farms are so large that it takes a long while to go over them and take notes of interest.

A few specials of note are: Gladiolus Queen Wilhelmina, pure white with richly marked bright red throat resembling a Maltese cross. This, I think, will become a leader.

Gilia Dichotoma, a choice annual, for pot plants and for use as cut flowers.

Tropæolums, ivy leaved foliage, promises to become very popular; fine seed.

Scabiosa Metaxa, white, very large, should prove a valuable addition as cut flowers, indoor or outdoor.

Strawberry "Four Seasons," from seed, excellent flavor berry.

And many others which lack of time prevents me from mentioning.

Vienna, one of the grandest of all European cities, was our next point, and we were well repaid for this long journey. The Imperial grounds and buildings are a sight never to be forgotten. The Prater park is immense in size and is patronized by nearly the whole population. The day we spent at this park there must have been over 100,000 people enjoying it, and no doubt the same occurs nearly every clear day. In the Emperor's Palace Gardens, Shoenbrun, the bedding was on an immense scale. Principally carpet bedding is done here, although a large number of beds were made of the yellow daisy, Chrysanthemum Segetum "Gloria" (which is the largest flowering yellow daisy in the market), and bordered with beautiful blue Browallia speciosa major. These two plants made a handsome effect indeed. In the first-class florists' show windows I especially noticed several strikingly handsome effects made of six long stalks of pink hollyhocks placed in pink crepe paper baskets, tied with same colored broad ribbons, and all delicately intertwined with Asparagus plumosus. These window displays were greatly admired by the public.

Our next destination was Belgium and Holland, both countries noted for their production of bulbs, etc., the first named for gloxianias, which thrive luxuriantly and develop perfect bulbs. Holland is a most interesting country to us. I was pleased to hear that the hyacinths had turned out so well, which will partly make up for the past unfavorable seasons. One of the items of especial value was to hear the splendid reports from the new spiraea, Gladstone, which won all the first prizes for spiraea wherever they were exhibited.

This wound up our trip in Europe, and we were well repaid for the time consumed. I thank you all for your close attention to these rambling remarks, and hope I have not taken up too much of your valuable time, which you could probably have spent more interestingly on the club bowling alleys, billiard tables and shuffle boards.

VENTILATION.

L. S. writes: "Will Mr. William Scott kindly give his reasons for placing ventilators on the east side of a greenhouse running north and south when opened at ridge? Would not the cold west winds be troublesome when open?"

I don't remember where or when I did give that advice, and have not the opportunity for reference at this moment. The evolution of greenhouse construction has been very rapid the past four or five years, and without defending or apologizing for that opinion, if I am the author of it, it would be more to the point to tell you what is my present opinion on this important question, and this opinion is the result of looking at a good many modern ranges of glass, both large and small. We will take it for granted that in the great majority of locations the west, northwest, north and northeast are the cold winds, and the east and south and southwest are usually mild or warm. That's about how things are in western New York. All houses in our northern states built for growing cut flowers, roses and carnations particularly, should run east and west, or, what is better still, several points east of south, so that the sun will warm up the houses before it would if the houses faced due south.

These houses, in my opinion, should have the ventilators on the north side and open at the ridge, so when the wind blows from the northwest or north the draught would not be rushing down on the plants, but would pass over. If there is a cap on the ventilators, closing down and covering the ridge, no ice will ever bother you. If the warm south winds blow it will be felt in the houses, and that you don't mind. There is no doubt about the ridge being the place for the opening, for there is where the heated air will be, and you want it to escape. Another point is that it is one-third the strain or work for your ventilating apparatus. A house with continuous ventilation hinged at the ridge would want at least two, yes, almost three, machines to do the work of one if hinged on a header and opening at the ridge.

A house running north and south is, I presume, built for growing, perhaps palms, smilax or many other plants not requiring every possible ray of sunshine that can be gathered in. If the correct way to ventilate is at the ridge, then it is as good for these houses as for the others, and I would most assuredly put the ventilators on the west side. If you hinged at the ridge in a north and south house, then by all means the east side is the place for the ventilators, because there would be many frosty, bright mornings in February and March that a little ventilation would be very necessary, but the sash would be frozen down.

There are several advantages in ventilators opening at the ridge, and I know of only one disadvantage. If caught in a sudden shower and you had a foot of ventilation there would be some wetting of the plants, but vigilance can overcome that, and you can always have two or three inches of ventilation in wet weather if the ventilator has the necessary cap, which closes over the edge. I think I have answered the question and a little more. William Scott.

CORRECTION.

The Review's proofreader is n. g. No, he is a good one—it is my horrible scribble and I will take all the blame.

In last week's Review I was made to say three things that must have sounded absurd to those who favored me with a perusal. In the description of the cement edges to the beds on the Dale Estate it read about 1½ inches high and 1½ thick. It should, of course, be 4½ inches high.

The boxes of valley when put out of doors for the winter should be covered with two or three "feet" of soil. Holy farmer, where would one get all the soil? Two or three inches sounds better.

Then I made the startling statement that when the eucharis was started into active growth and had made some new leaves they would be mature in two weeks. My good friends, you know I meant two months.

BOSTON.

A Two Days' Visit at the Hub.

One may crowd into a couple of days many interesting hortieultural investigations and experiences if he "keeps busy;" especially if he has the good fortune to run into the unexpected privilege of a banquet "on the side," and this feast of reason "was a bird." The "old guard" and many of the "new" ones were there, and the Boston Society "did itself proud" in thus honoring the twenty-fifth anniversary of the founding of the cut flower commission business in Boston by Mr. Patrick Welch. The menu was faultless, and the poetical garnishing most creditable to its authors.

A Banquet.

In the chair, as master of ceremonies, sat the ponderous concentration of geniality, Fred Mathison, whose introductory address was an able effort. He said of Mr. Welch many complimentary things that the company unanimously indorsed, and gave a sketch of his career that would make any man proud, of the wonderful increase in shipments of cut flowers from Boston in the twenty-five years of progress, and characterized his activity as illustrative of perpetual motion. Mr. Mathison then appointed Mr. Edward Hatch as toast-master, a position the gentleman filled in his usual able, humorous and tactful way.

Mr. George Moore, of Quebec, assistant editor of the Journal of Horticulture, first employer of Mr. Welch in this country, was the first speaker. His carefully prepared and read address was frequently applauded. He considered Mr. Welch an inventor, being the original commission man and the father of the wholesale cut flower commission business. In 1877 Mr. Moore had charge of the Waban Conservatories, when Bon Silene, La France and M. Niel were in their glory, and Edmond Wood began the enterprising career that did so much for horticulture in New England, and the "hustler," P. Welch, was then his salesman. He spoke of Mr. Welch's honest dealings, his critical division of stock according to real value and time of cutting, of the partnership formed with his brothers, David and Edward, and of the weekly price list system, which he was the first to inaugurate. His references to the pleasant relations existing between Canada and the United States, his plea for reciprocity, and his good advice as to the desirability of larger families in American homes were appropriate and humorous.

Following Mr. Moore's address were letters of regret and congratulations from Patrick O'Mara, Robert T. McGorum, John Young, Walter Sheridan, Carl Jurgens, Frank Barnard and others who were unable to accept the invitation to be present.

Prof. Elson, of Boston, then read an original poem, with Mr. Welch for his subject, written for the occasion; and he followed this with a song, both of which were heartily applauded.

The best speech of the evening followed, and Attorney Blair demonstrated that he was not only an orator, but an elocutionist, by his superb rendering of "John Anderson, My Joe," and other poems. His speech was a masterpiece of eloquence.

William E. Doyle had only complimentary things to say of his twenty-five years' dealings with the Welch Bros., of their shipments to other large cities, of their other facilities and their reliability, closing with a brilliant prophecy as to their future success.

Lawrence Cotter's congratulations, and his peroration on the absorption of Canada, were in his best vein, and Frank Barnard's letter which followed expressed the wish that "the best days of the Welch Bros. in the past might be their poorest days in the future."

Judge Hoyt, from the rocky country of New Hampshire, was the wit of the evening, and his stories and repartee kept the banqueters in good humor until midnight. He called Mr. Welch "Our Sweet P," and seemed to be afraid that Lawson might want to absorb him.

Warren Ewell was the next speaker, and I regret I cannot give his oration exactly as it was delivered. Those who know Warren and have heard him speak will also regret it. Mr. Ewell's voice is still resonant and vibratory and there was no difficulty in hearing every word. Warren's reminiscences reached back to 1874, and included the suburb of Boston and its foundations, systems, taxes, horses and vegetables, a bay horse with a silver mane and tail receiving honorable mention. He spoke of experiences with the plow in his early days, and of the suburbs of New Jersey "where the glorious moon is beaming." Warren is a little difficult to follow, and it requires some care to grasp the intricate thoughts that surge through him, but the applause that followed his effort showed that he has lost none of his magnetic oratorical ability.

Michael Norton, the father of the flock, remembered Mr. Welch when he was a boy, and traced his career through all the years to the present in a most kind and complimentary way, speaking of his ability as one of the executive committee of the S. A. F. when he was president of the society, and of his methodicity and sagacity.

Mr. P. Welch then gave his response to the addresses made, in an eloquent and modest effort that was vociferously applauded. He toasted the memory of E. M. Wood, to which the gathering responded silently, paying a beautiful tribute to that gentleman's character and generosity, complimented his growers and retail customers in the most cordial and complimentary way, and closed his address with many appreciative words for his friends, who had honored him with the banquet.

A good orchestra dispensed fine music throughout the evening, and in many of the popular melodies which they gave the whole company joined. Other addresses were given by Messrs. Stewart, Jackson Dawson, George Anderson, John B. Dorr, W. W. Edgar, and William Martin, all of them full of pleasant personal recollections. About fifty participated in the festivities, and joined hands at midnight in rendering "Auld Lang Syne." It was a delightful evening and will always be a happy memory.

Items.

A visit to the home of the Anna Foster fern at Dorchester found all hands busy packing and shipping this handsome nephrolepis to every part of the country. Mr. Foster has found a great demand for his beautiful discovery and is much pleased with its reception. In addition to the small plants for the growers he has a large stock of the Anna Foster in 6, 7 and 8-inch pots ready for the retailer, and is sending these to the bon ton stores of Boston and New York. Mr. Foster anticipates a much greater demand for the fern in 1903, when its merits are more universally realized.

The sympathy of the trade everywhere is extended to Mr. Foster in the great sorrow that has befallen him in the loss of his wife last week, and those who knew this estimable lady can realize how greatly he is afflicted.

I found Mr. A. H. Hews, of North Cambridge, a little under the weather, an unusual condition for him, but his pottery business was as well as it could be, orders far ahead of shipments, and both travelers at home and not soliciting trade, because there was "not enough to go around," a most healthy state of affairs from a manufacturer's standpoint. This, too, is the oldest establishment of the kind in the country, reaching away back through several generations, and into the years when the witches were a Salem reality, and Bunker Hill and the tea episode only a few miles away.

The Boston Cut Flower Market is sadly cramped for room, and after January expects to be located in more expansive quarters with double the present space. One hundred and thirty-seven stalls at present and an average of 200 growers daily, with a spurt to 400 on holiday occasions, gives you some idea of the rush and hustle to be found there at 6 in the morning, an early hour for observation after a midnight banquet.

The manager here is certainly an adept, and a perfect and harmonious system prevails. No undue noise is heard, no smoking is allowed, and altogether it's a model market, as becometh the staid and venerable city. The display of cut flowers was fine and abundant. Alex. Montgomery was there with some fine Willowbrook mums that sold rapidly at $2.50 a dozen.

Mr. Elliott, the Asparagus King, ran in from his new place at Madbury, N. H., where his immense house, 810 feet long by 54 feet wide, with its 45,000 square feet of glass, is the wonder of New England and a veritable "sea of glass." Here he has over 20,000 plants of the American Beauty, and you can figure out what that means in the way of daily shipments, not only to the wholesale market, but all over New England. His asparagus houses at the old stand in Brighton are doing their duty, as usual, and no signs of cessation in the demand for "cut strings" appear.

Pierce & Son, of Waltham, had a fine display of mums Saturday in the market, and are cutting 200 dozen a day already. They have 125,000 square feet of glass, one new house with 10,000 square feet entirely devoted to carnations, of which they plant annually 50,000. They have six houses of mums and expect to cut 200,000 flowers. Polly Rose, Glory of the Pacific, Bergmann and Fitzwygram constitute their present cutting, and Monrovia, the new yellow, which commands $2.50 to $3 a dozen. Mr. Pierce calls this an extra good mum year, with no diseased plants and a wonderful supply. This firm will have 175,000 lilies this season. Their shipments to the New York market are handled by Mr. John Young.

The Boston Fall Show occurs the week after the New York Madison Square exhibition.

A. T. Stearns & Co., of Neponset, is the pioneer cypress house of the north, and the largest, handling 15,000,000 feet a season. Mr. Stearns, Sr. at 82 is still hale and active in the management of the immense business of this house, which, in its greenhouse department, built in the east already this year 125 houses from 100 to 800 feet in length.

Mr. McCarthy has a clear field in the auction department of the business in Boston, and has had many very satisfactory sales this season.

Mr. Sutherland's wholesale cut flower and supply trade is booming, and his neat new store is a busy mart all the time.

A new wholesale house is called the Milk Street Cut Flower Company, and is managed by Mr. T. E. Waters, whose location and facilities promise success.

In the retail stores of Boston, which I had too little time to visit, I found a most healthful and hopeful atmosphere. At Galvin's the rush was constant, and the store handsomer than ever, as unusual care is taken daily to make the window decorations novel and attractive. Nine weddings in four days was the record last week, and great expectations as to the coming season prevail.

Houghton & Clark have a fine store on Boylston street, and report a good season with increased facilities.

Julius Zinn's store on Beacon street is as neat and prosperous as ever. McMulkin's big establishment has evidently had a share of the Boston trade and a prosperous year.

Norton Bros., Newman & Sons, William Doyle, Bunker, Carbonne and all the uptown stores demonstrate taste, enterprise and prosperity in the handsome window decorations, and illustrate their faith in the coming season by abundant preparation for the good times that are to be.

The coal question here amongst the growers is serious and absorbing, and anxious groups were discussing with a Standard Oil man at the market on Saturday the feasibility of a change of fuel and the necessity of immediate action to get their boilers ready for oil heating, which seems to be contemplated everywhere, and which if acted upon at once, may solve the serious problem of the hour.

J. Austin Shaw.

Erie, Pa.—S. Alfred Baur has completed rebuilding seven houses and his place is now in good shape for the winter season.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Flower Market.

This report, written too early to describe the first annual meeting, is necessarily meager. Secretary Rust reports encouraging support from the growers. Among the additions to subscribers are such well known firms as Myers & Samtman, M. Rice & Co., Geo. Anderson and Chas. D. Ball. Manager Meehan finds many of the small growers not heretofore heard from, favorably disposed towards the new project.

Notes.

Richard C. Lange sold the plants and fixtures at his old place on Ontario street last Tuesday, preparatory to moving to Morristown.

Chas. E. Meehan, Alfred Burton and Wm. Stevens went over to New York on Monday night, spending Tuesday in that city and Wednesday in Boston. Their object was to see the workings of the plant markets in those two cities.

The palm growers are having a very active season. Their two trials, and they are trials, are the uncertainty of getting coal and the delayed plant shipments, the railroads being less reliable than usual in forwarding freight.

S. S. Pennock is receiving some fine mignonette.

Leo Neissen is receiving some fine Beauties and valley. He finds business far ahead of last season.

Edward Reid has been doing a good shipping business. The quality of his carnations is famous.

Eugene Bernheimer has returned from a trip south. He finds the stock of his consignors in excellent condition, and predicts a prosperous season, with plenty of chrysanthemums.

Myers & Samtman are fortunate in receiving two cars of hard coal each week.

The Germantown Horticultural Society held its October meeting on Monday evening. Autumn leaves from Meehan & Sons, gladioli from Cowee and dahlias from Peacock were the features of the exhibition.

Chas. Mecky sent in the first pot chrysanthemums on the 10th. They were pink and white Pacific, very fine, in 7-inch pots.

S. S. Pennock has been receiving some very fine Ivory from Edwin Lonsdale. They bring 6 and 8 cents.

J. J. Habermehl's Sons have been very busy decorating department store openings. They have used great quantities of dahlias and other outdoor flowers in this work.

John Turnbull, with M. Rice & Co., has returned from a very successful three weeks' business trip. He reports an excellent demand for ribbon.

C. F. Knorr and Burton are sending in some very fine Brides and Maids, especially noteworthy, as the dark weather brings in much poor stock from many growers. Their place is interesting as one where Souvenir de Wootton is still grown successfully. Good soil and water in abundance favor these Fox Chase growers, while the best of fertilizers come from their own farms.

Julius Kohler & Son have built three new houses this season intended for azaleas and hardy roses. Their Clothilde Souperts are very promising. This firm has great quantities of fine stock. Their carnations are very fine. Scott especially so. Victor is also done well. A batch of longiflorum lilies kept in cold storage is just coming in flower.

Hugh Graham is cutting some fine chrysanthemums from his place at Logan, which are sold in his store.

James Verner, Garrettsford has four houses of Brides and Maids that are equal to any near this city. They are grown in benches. He also has Kaiserins in nice shape.

August Gontram, who was florist and gardener at Sacred Heart Academy, Torresdale, is about to start in business for himself on Rowland avenue, Holmesburg, having completed two houses, each about 25 feet by 150 feet, one for violets and one for carnations. The houses will be heated by hot water.

The coke supply at Holmesburg House of Correction is cut short; no more to be sold. It will be reserved for the guards, etc. Bad outlook for many small florists who have for years depended upon it.

BOSTON.

Trade Conditions.

Owing to rather poor weather there has not been a heavy cut of first-class material for this time of year. During the past week and until Saturday about everything of all qualities was licked up by the quite steady demand, Saturday being the day of atonement, or Yom Kippur, the Hebrew element was largely eliminated, and as there was a much heavier cut than usual there was a heavy surplus to carry over Sunday.

I do not know that I ever saw the supply of material coming in more irregularly than at present, both as regards quality and quantity, from day to day. A prospective buyer needs to be in early and keep his weather eye open for the goods he can use.

Chrysanthemums now come the nearest to being plentiful, carnations next, then roses, violets, small white flowers, mignonette, lilies and odds and ends in the order named.

There seems to be quite an October crop of weddings coming on making a much better call for smilax and other green material than has existed since June, but there seems to be enough to supply the call.

Many pink and white roses are yet badly mildewed, much enhancing the value of the clean ones.

Oil.

Several agencies have opened business in the city offering burners for use of oil in ranges and furnaces, some even going as far as to pretend to cater to heavy boiler business. Now, I took pains, preparatory to installing something of the kind, to write each of two insurance companies interested in my roof and what lies under it and asked them their opinions of such action on my part. I got word that my policies will be vitiated unless I wait until the New England Insurance Exchange takes favorable action in the matter.

Coal.

We are still "waiting till the shadows are a little longer grown," but they are getting pretty long now! The difference in the length of the night seems more noticeable than the corresponding decrease in the day to a man who arises about on the line that divides the two. Daily papers say that about 100,000 tons of soft coal are landing here per week, but I know florists who are trying to obtain some of it with poor results for their efforts.

A full account of the banquet given in honor of Mr. P. Welch on the twenty-fifth anniversary of his start in the cut flower commission business, will be found elsewhere in this issue.

A DECORATED AUTO.

The accompanying engraving is from a photograph of an automobile decorated by A. Gude & Brother, Washington, and which took first prize, a handsome silver loving cup, in the parade of motor carriages during the Grand Army Encampment in the national capital last week. The two gentlemen in the automobile are Col. C. E. Wood, the owner, on the right in the picture, and William F. Gude, president of the Business Men's Association, and member of the firm of A. Gude & Brother, on the left.

The auto was a bower of roses, chrysanthemums and carnations. The front was a mass of Kaiserin and American Beauty roses, the sides were tastefully festooned with Asparagus Sprengeri interspersed with pink carnations, and huge bows and flowing streamers of pink satin ribbon. The rear of the carriage was a bank of deep red roses and white chrysanthemums, and the wheels were decorated with pink roses.

NEW YORK.

Club Meeting.

Nearly fifty members were present at the meeting of the New York Florists' Club on Monday evening. The exhibition committee, through Mr. O'Mara, reported preparations for the great exhibition as progressing finely and everything indicating a grand display.

Mr. Lager, of Lager & Hurrell, read a paper on "Collecting Orchids in the Jungles of South America," giving many thrilling experiences with floods and reptiles, hunger and hardship. He considers Colombia the greatest place in the world for orchid gathering, there being a greater number of species there than in any other locality. He was given the thanks of the club for his essay.

A resolution by Mr. O'Mara regarding the menace of the coal strike to every one in the trade was adopted and ordered sent to the Governor of New York.

Robert Craig was present and gave a humorous address on flower show matters, suggesting the introduction of athletic sports as an incentive to attendance and intimating that a boxing match between Julius Roehrs and John N. May would prove a drawing card.

Short addresses were also made by Mr. Sander, Jr., of London, and Mr. Dimmock.

Among the Growers.

Mr. A. J. Clarke, of Clarke Bros., Portland, Ore., prolonged his visit East and "took in" several of the large establishments around New York last week. He is a native of Springfield, Ohio, and landed in Portland thirteen years ago with less than a dollar capital. Now the firm has fine greenhouse plants in 'Frisco and Portland and retail stores and nursery interests that promise, and have already materialized, a supply of "velvet" that would encourage any young man of enterprise to listen to the admonition of Horace Greeley. H. J. Millatt, formerly of Kansas City, is manager of the Portland retail department.

Out at Carlton Hill at Julius Roehrs' everything is about ready for the winter. Rebuilding has been in progress all summer and the big plant is now thoroughly in shape for the season. Sixteen of the old houses have been replaced by twelve enlarged ones. The change to heating by crude oil is in progress and all will be ready for any emergency. Burners are being put in all the furnaces and cold weather begins to lose its terrors.

Mr. Roehrs has a grand stock of everything this season, his Christmas novelties being already booked nearly to the limit. His orchid department is almost unlimited, and an exhibition in itself. The bay tree stock is much depleted but plenty of all sizes still remain. Mr. Roehrs will have a fine exhibit at the New York Club's show this fall.

Across the way Bobbink & Atkins are "booming" in all their departments. Their 60 acres of nursery and ornamental stock is a surprise to the visitor from afar, and their development of the business in the last five years indicates wonderful growth in the future. They are constantly adding to their acres, building new greenhouses and immense packing sheds and cellars, and there seems to be no limit to their ambition.

They imported in one shipment this year fourteen cars of bay trees, a veritable forest in May, now much reduced, as their sales have been constant during the summer. Their care of this stock, careful trimming in the spring and late in the fall, and constant attention, are apparent in their handsome shape and excellent condition now. Mr. Bobbink thinks: "If it were not for the labor question bays could be grown as profitably in this country as in Belgium, the growth being twice as strong here." Their collection of evergreens is large and varied, many of them fine specimens, and in twenty-five to thirty varieties, among them some grand stock of grafted Colorado blue spruce, Irish yews, golden arbor vitæ, concolor spruce, Nordmann's fir, sciadopitys and retinospora. The plants of standard, pyramid and globular buxus are apparently the better for a year of American growth.

Items.

There are whispers of an exodus of some of the wholesalers from Twenty-seventh to Thirtieth streets, to the third floor of the Coogan building, but they still lack confirmation.

Chas. Millang, of Twenty-ninth street, is building a 20 ft. sq. conservatory back of his wholesale store, intending to handle palms and plants from some of the best growers, and for the trade only.

Hicks & Crawbuck have "settled down" rapidly in their new quarters on the New York side, and are satisfied with their venture already. They are handling some excellent stock, their "special" Maids and Brides being "as good as they make 'em."

John I. Raynor has been handling some grand fancy carnations this last week and has all arrangements completed for a constant supply daily during the season.

The Millang family form a quartette now of wholesalers, Mr. August having just put out his shingle in the Coogan building.

Anton Then, of Chicago, and his wife have been visiting their boy at John May's, Summit, N. J., and taking in the sights of the metropolis on the side.

Mr. and Mrs. Murdock, of Pittsburg, have also been "in gay New York."

Next Friday, Sander & Son's annual orchid sale takes place at Cleary's.

Ford Bros.' new store is brilliant with paint, carpets, lights and a grand stock of Lager, Pacific, Henderson and Robinson chrysanthemums.

J. V. Phillips, Jr., of Brooklyn, has accepted a position as manager of the fine new retail store of Evans, of Colorado Springs, and seems much pleased with the change of scene and climate. Those glorious mountains would make any man ambitious and successful.

The Bowling Club met on Monday afternoon and organized for the season, with Will Siebrecht, president; W. Mansfield, secretary; L. Hafner, treasurer; Theo. Lang, captain. Mr. Traendly is "master of ceremonies," with vocal privileges added, and everything promises an interesting season. The monthly dues were placed at $1, as usual, and a special clause added to the by-laws reads: "All visitors will be made heartily welcome, and will pay 50 cents a night for bowling privileges"—which proviso makes it possible for all who love the sport to come when they please and feel independent.

Mr. C. F. Bertanzel, gardener to W. L. Stow, of Roslyn, L. I., has returned from a two months' trip to France, Germany and his old home, Berne, Switzerland, where he was born. He studied Italian gardening while away and expects to illustrate many of its features in his work on the big estate at Roslyn, where he presides.

J. A. Millang has been connected with the "Cut Flower Co." since its commencement, and manager nearly four years. He reports a constant increase in the volume of his trade and refers proudly to some extra Brides, Maids and Mrs. Oliver Ames which have for the last six weeks come in large numbers from the houses of John N. May, Summit, N. J.

Wm. Plumb came up from Oyster Bay Monday in greatly improved health to attend the club meeting in New York.

Samuel McClements, of Pittsburg, is in the city, and Robert Craig and Mr. Fancourt, of Philadelphia.

J. Austin Shaw.

BUFFALO.

The agony is over and the mums are here in abundance and are taking well. The first we cut was Polly Rose on Oct. 5th. There are several sports of Glory of the Pacific, but Polly Rose is the best. I believe it originated with Mr. David Rose, and no doubt a Polly could be found in the family. We thought Willowbrook was going to supersede Polly, but in our opinion it will not. And soon flowers of every shade can be cut, and to blend with the yellow and bronze we have the glorious tints of the autumn foliage, of which the maple is the most beautiful. I see that the most cultivated English admire our word "fall" as so much prettier than the awkward sounding autumn. It is certainly easier said and descriptive of the tragedy of the vegetable kingdom.

Hereafter we will forget that we ever used the awkward word when speaking of the most beautiful season, for although it is said by the poet that "In the spring a young man's fancy gently turns to soft boiled eggs," it is so short, so muddy and we are in such a hurry that we do not enjoy spring. But many weeks of fall are given us, and if you are not satisfied with the glorious treat of the fields and forests, the pumpkin in the corn stubble and the meadow lark in the clover, the Baldwin and Northern Spy bending the branches, and many sweet sounds and sights, you ought to be confined to the house and the only recreation granted to be a two hours interview a day with your wife, and the subject to be strictly confined to the faults, failings and eccentricities of the hired girl. But that is too great a punishment even for a criminal, and we should have mercy and say just let it be solitary confinement.

I am glad to know, from what I hear of business, that it is first-class, and promises to be even better. With peace and industry restored, which must come soon, the florist can look forward to a fine winter's trade. The people who spend money with us are all feeling well off, and let us hope that all industrious classes will have a dollar to spare for the refining luxuries of life. Work is plenty in every line.

Mr. John Thorpe, of Chicago and Kansas City, sent me the preliminary schedule of the Kansas City flower show. It came in two flat cars and I borrowed the use of my neighbor's barn to unroll it. It's prodigious; it's pluck. No one but sincerely hopes that Uncle John will again score a great success. Any city of 200,000 people can make this big venture a success, if you can only make the people think it's the thing to attend. And as for a city of a million, if one in twenty of its people patronized the show it would be a success. I have heard on the best of authority that at the Edinburg, Scotland, chrysanthemum show, 42,000 people have attended in one day, and "Auld Reekie" has but something like 300,000. There will be something doing also in New York and Chicago, and we hope to see some of them. My address from the 30th to Nov. 5th will be Suite A, Waldorf Astoria, New York City.

CHICAGO.

At a meeting of the executive committee of the Horticultural Society, held last Monday afternoon, the various sub-committees reported. Mr. E. A. Kanst was selected as superintendent of the show to be held at the Art Institute November 11 to 15. The society contributed $50 to the Florists' Club's fund for entertaining visitors at the annual banquet during the exhibition. It was announced that some interesting special prizes would be offered by the Foley Mfg. Co., of Chicago, the manufacturers of greenhouse material. They offer three prizes of $25 each for the best chrysanthemum plant, the best vase of American Beauty roses and the best vase of carnations. These are sweepstake prizes, and may be won by exhibits entered for other prizes, so double prizes may be won in each case.

The vases of Enchantress, Lillian Pond and Murphy's White carnations shown at the last meeting of the Florists' Club won much favorable comment from those who saw them.

J. A. Budlong has begun the erection of two more new houses, each 27x100. These are for young stock. He is also installing three 85-horse-power boilers to heat the range of ten new houses erected this summer, each 27x200.

Mr. Eli Hobbs has transferred his business to a corporation known as the E. Hobbs Co., recently incorporated with a capital stock of $2,500.

Asked if frequent shipments by growers were as essential this week as last, Mr. E. E. Pieser, of Kennicott Bros. Co., replied emphatically "Yes," and pointing to a lot of callas said: "The shipper of that stock usually sends in Mondays and two other days in the week. This week he waited till Tuesday. On Monday we had to chase all over for callas and couldn't fill a shipping order satisfactorily for lack of callas. Tuesday there was no call and we couldn't force a sale on what we were hungry for the day before. If consignors would keep the dealers better posted as to what to expect in the way of stock they could always do much better for them. The dealers are frequently deluged with stock today that they have been obliged to decline advance orders for the day before."

Peter Reinberg is cutting some fine white chrysanthemums that have brought as high as $3.50 per dozen.

E. H. Hunt is receiving blooms of the new pink rose Helen Gould and they find considerable favor with buyers.

Recent visitors: Wm. Murphy, Cincinnati; L. F. Darnell, Cleveland; Henry Smith, Grand Rapids, Iowa; Mrs. A. L. Glaser, Dubuque, Iowa; Mr. Rice, of Rice Bros., Minneapolis.

McKellar & Winterson have raised a fine crop of metal flowers and designs of same.

Peter Reinberg is interested in the new Columbus Brewery and has been elected vice-president of the company.

Brant & Noe's large range of glass at Forest Glen, eighteen houses in all, most of which are 300 feet long, are all planted entirely to roses, and the stock looks well.

Although Meteors are their stronghold, they have the middle benches of nine houses, also north benches of three others, planted to Beauties, and this is the first year they have run any Beauties over. Beginning June 1 the benches in one house were gradually dried off until July 1, when the plants were severely pruned and tied down to induce breaks from the bottom and sides of stems. As much of the soil was removed as could be done without injury to the roots, and the remaining soil was given a coating of air-slacked lime, the benches thoroughly watered and then refilled with a compost of cow manure, sod and bone meal; again thoroughly wetted, after which regular watering was gradually resumed as the weather permitted. The plants threw a good quantity of bud-producing stems and have given a large proportion of medium-length stems, with some fancies and firsts.

Of the nine houses planted to Meteors, three have been run over for the second year. Two of these were pruned quite generously, tied down and treated as the Beauties were, and produced heavily during the entire summer.

Their experience with Liberty is limited, having but a few plants. These have been carried over one year and give promise of doing well. They have been cutting from them for about six weeks, but as the number of plants is small, they are not able to compare it with Meteor, grown on a large scale. So far they do not feel like displacing Meteor for it, as Meteor produces so much more heavily.

Their Brides and Maids, all from young stock, look exceedingly well, as does everything about the place, which shows the care and attention devoted to it.

Mr. A. J. Clark, of Portland, Ore., passed through this city Wednesday on his way home from the east.

Edgar Sanders is still improving, though not able to move himself yet. He enjoys seeing his friends, which helps to pass away the time.

Attention Bowlers.

A meeting of all the bowlers in the trade is called for Thursday, October 23, at 8 p. m., at McKellar & Winterson's, 45 Wabash avenue, to formulate plans for a winter campaign that will result in the selection of a winning team at the national tournament at Milwaukee next year. The presence of all interested in the game is requested, whether club members or not.

Prepare advs. now for our special Thanksgiving number, to be issued Nov. 13.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

The week just passed was fair week in our city, which brought in a lot of strangers to see the sights, but this did not help the florists much. For the Veiled Prophet's ball on Tuesday night the trade was about the same as last year. Long Beauties seemed to have the preference over all other flowers worn at the ball. Meteors and Liberties had second call. The Merchants' Exchange Hall, where the ball was held, was handsomely decorated as in former years, and due credit must be given the Riessen Floral Co. for the way they did the work.

Trade in cut flower lines was very good the past week, mostly funeral work. The first part of the week stock was scarce and nearly everything sold out early, but the latter part of the week it became more plentiful. Chrysanthemums, such as Fitzwygrams, Glory of the Pacific, Mme. Bergmann and a few Sunderbruch, are coming in better each day and are selling in the stores at $3 per dozen.

In roses there was a full supply of choice Meteors, Brides, Maids, Gates, Carnots and Perles. Beauties in all classes seem more plentiful. All of the above are of good quality and very little mildew is seen.

Carnations, too, were more plentiful and are coming in with longer stems. Flora Hill, Scott and Crane are among the best. The demand for them the past week was great and hardly enough came in to supply it.

Violets are very much better in color and size, and California is the only variety in the market. Cosmos, outdoor-grown, are being offered in large quantities and sell well. Valley sent to this market by George & Allan, of Cincinnati, is of very fine quality.

The dealers report the cut flower trade as being very satisfactory.

The St. Louis Fair.

At the forty-second annual fair, held last week by the St. Louis Agricultural and Mechanical Association, $500 was offered in premiums for plants, cut flowers and floral designs. The only exhibitors were W. M. Schray & Sons, Ellison & Tesson and C. Young & Sons Co. In the exhibition of plants Wm. Schray & Sons captured $248 in prizes, and C. Young & Sons Co. came in second with $140 in prizes. In the exhibition of floral designs, cut flowers and table decorations Ellison & Tesson came in for $56, and C. Young & Sons Co. for the same amount. The displays were not so large as in former years. The warm day had a bad effect on the cut flowers and designs, which looked bad before the judge made his rounds. The attendance on big Thursday, the day of the floral exhibit, was 50,000, and a goodly crowd was in Floral Hall all day long.

Visitors.

Miss Alice Winans and Martha D. Foote, of the Summit Greenhouses, Eureka Springs, Ark., were visitors the past week, attending the fair and calling on the trade.

A Check Swindler.

Several South St. Louis florists were victims of the fraudulent check scheme the past week. At the Eggling Floral Co.'s the swindler ordered a wreath for $9.75 and tendered a check for $22.50. He departed after receiving $12.75 in change. The Deimer Floral Co. had the same experience, the swindler receiving $10 in change for a worthless $16.50 check. And Miss Rose Arata, on Lafayette avenue, is out $4.85 that she gave in change for a $9.85 check. The swindler is described as about thirty-five years old, tall and well dressed and a fine talker. His dealings are with the lady florists only. The police have a good description of the fellow, and should he be caught the ladies say they will make it hot for him.

Belleville Notes.

Dr. A. S. Halstedt and E. W. Guy, of Belleville, called on the trade the past week. Dr. Halstedt has bought all of Mr. Hueke's Lawson carnations and contemplates leasing the Hucke place for a number of years to grow stock for the trade. He reports that business has been very satisfactory with him and that he is now living in his newly fitted-up home.

Mr. Guy is cutting some fine mums, Maids and Gates. He says that trade so far this season has been very good with him, having had all he could do. Mr. Guy's father, an old-time florist of Kimmswick, Mo., and now living on his farm at St. James, Mo., is running for probate judge on the Republican ticket.

Hail Storm.

A hail and thunder storm visited St. Louis and vicinity at 9:25 Tuesday night. Hail stones of unusual size played havoc with some of the florists. Among those sustaining damages were Chas. J. Juengel, Eggling Floral Co., Michel Plant and Bulb Co., Missouri Botanical Garden, Mrs. M. M. Ayers and Mary Ostertag. It is also reported that most of the Kirkwood florists lost more or less glass. Nearly all the large establishments in the southern and western parts of the city escaped the storm and the proprietors consider themselves very lucky. J. J. B.

CINCINNATI.

The Market.

Bad weather during the early part of last week cut down the stock to such an extent that there was scarcely anything with which to fill orders. Several days of sunshine has changed all of this and there is now a plentiful supply of both roses and carnations. Trade also improved with the advent of a better supply and now it is all that could be desired.

Chrysanthemums are now the flowers: hundreds of them are coming in and the demand for them is good. Twenty cents is the top figure so far obtained for them in this market, the variety being Lady Harriet. Other mums coming in at present are Merry Monarch, Willowbrook and Polly Rose. Bergmann are mostly small in size and sell as low as $4 per 100. As yet there is no good yellow and a good one is needed badly. Mrs. Robinson is beginning to be cut, but it is scarcely ready.

There were no seedling mums before the chrysanthemum committee to be passed upon on Saturday.

The rose market is in good condition, and prospects are that the quality of stock will rapidly improve from now on. Liberties are coming in in large quantities and the quality is much better. Brides also are in better supply. From what little I see of the new rose Ivory, it strikes me that it is going to make good.

Carnations are improving in quality and the supply is ample.

Dahlias and cosmos are still in the market in large quantities and sell well. A few violets are to be had, but they sell slowly. There is plenty of smilax and asparagus.

Meeting of the Florists' Society.

The Cincinnati Florists' Society held its regular meeting on last Saturday evening. The principal business was the chrysanthemum show that is to be held in the club rooms on November 8. The schedule is: Best vase mums, 12 blooms each—white, pink, yellow—first prize, each, $6; second, each, $4; third, each, $3. Best vase 25 Bonnaffon, first, $10; second, $8; third, $6. Best general display, $10.

Besides this there are the S. A. F. O. H. medals, one silver and one bronze, offered for a new and meritorious plant or flower of American origin. The medals may be competed for at this and subsequent shows, not less than twelve blooms of any cut flowers to be staged in competition. Medals will be awarded at the March exhibition. The rules of the Cincinnati Florists' Society will apply to the above, which may be obtained by addressing the secretary, F. W. Ball.

There was considerable talk of combining our rose and carnation shows into one big show, to be held early in March. The majority of the members seemed highly in favor of the plan.

A vase of the new carnation, Enchantress, was on exhibition during the meeting.

Notes.

Mr. W. K. Partridge is about to erect a range of six new houses. He intends to build them during the winter, so as to have them for early spring planting.

H. D. Edwards has discontinued his Vine street store and will devote his entire time to his Newport, Ky., establishment, where he has worked up a good paying business.

George & Allan are greatly troubled with grub worms. Their destructive work is beginning to assume very serious proportions, their loss already amounting to nearly $1,000 in Beauty and other rose plants destroyed. It seems as if they can find nothing that will destroy these pests.

R. A. Murphy is cutting some fine dahlias, many of them being as large as chrysanthemums.

William Murphy was in Chicago during the past week.

E. G. Gillett and J. A. Peterson were in Dayton, Ohio, attending the Masonic Conclave.

Visitors were J. J. Lampert, Xenia, Ohio, and Herbert Heller, New Castle, Ind. C. J. Ohmer.

Olean, N. Y.—Dana R. Herron has just completed two new houses.

If you have anything to offer the trade you are cordially invited to the business banquet, to be spread in our special Thanksgiving number, to be issued Nov. 13.

Allegheny, Pa.—Messrs. G. and J. W. Ludwig recently made for the funeral of a gentleman interested in the East Liverpool potteries, a potter's kiln in flowers, for which they received $150.

BEGONIA LORRAINE.

It is better to run this begonia rather cool than too warm. If kept warm the plants will bloom early and are apt to drop their flowers about the time they are most needed to make the plants salable. As it will then be some time before they get into good bloom again disappointment will result.

Plants kept for propagating must have their vitality conserved. A shaded house at 40 to 50 degrees is to be preferred, and of course under these conditions the plants must be watered sparingly.

Stock is more plentiful this week and prices a shade easier. Beauties are in very active demand and sell better than any other rose. Chrysanthemums are increasing in quantity. Lady Harriet is the best pink and white variety. These came from H. Weber & Sons to S. S. Pennock and bring $2.50 a dozen. Kalb, Pacific and Bergmann bring $1.00 to $2.50 a dozen. Dahlias do not sell as well as a week ago. Violets are increasing in quantity and improving in quality. Leo Niessen has some very nice pansies and is also receiving some L. longiflorum. Taken all in all business is very satisfactory for the season. Phil.

At time of writing prices show a downward tendency. The specials are not numerous and they have to be extra fine to command the prices quoted.

The chrysanthemum has taken possession and the largest blooms have reached the high water mark of $4.00 a dozen, but they are few. There is a great deal of inferior stock in the market and there are indications of an oversupply before the week is out. The best varieties now being received are Lager, Willowbrook, Pacific, Kalb, Polly Rose and Yellow Monarch.

Violets are rapidly improving in quality, but the supply exceeds the demand and the prices are low, the pick of the stock seldom reaching 75 cents.

The best valley reaches $5.00, but most of it goes at $3.00. Asters and gladioli have passed but the dahlia still reigns. Lilies come in slowly and bring good prices.

The fair weather continued during most of the past week and the supply has so increased that prices have eased all through the list. There is now no shortage except in white carnations. The quality of stock coming in has improved in spots, but an unpleasantly large proportion of the increase in supply is in roses of poor grade. There is considerable mildew, and soft, flabby, short-stemmed stock is much in evidence. The "specials" are still few and far between, there is a fair supply of "firsts," a goodly lot of "seconds," and altogether too many "culls." Cull Brides bring a little more than Maids of same grade, probably on account of the shortage of white carnations.

A hard killing frost last Monday night put a period to the cut of carnations from outside plants, and the indoor stock is not yet producing freely enough to meet all demands. Few of the sorts usually termed fancy are yet producing and our quotations on this grade are only occasionally realized. For all practical purposes $3.00 is the top and really good stock can be had for that price. Culls are sold at as low as $1.00, but there are few so poor as to get to that notch. More are sold at $1.50.

In chrysanthemums, Fitzwygram is passing out and the supply of Kalb and Bergmann is increasing, while October Sunshine and Willowbrook are adding tone to the stock. Pacific is also in evidence, but its color is against it and it lags. Sunshine and Willowbrook are the varieties that command the top figure, large yellow flowers seeming to be in best demand. A very good flower can be had for $2.00 a dozen and they have to be very select to get the top.

The supply of violets has largely increased and prices have weakened. Roman hyacinths are a new item in the list. Cosmos have appeared.

There was a great call for American Beauty last week, thousands being used by the stores. Roses are improving, both in stem and color, and very little mildew noticeable. Mums are coming in more freely and are a great help in easing up on roses and carnations. Carnations are still short in supply and shipments are cleaned up as soon as they appear on the counter. Violets are good and prices are most satisfactory, but there are not enough good ones to go around. With colder weather and a little more sunshine they will improve wonderfully. Dilger.

BALTIMORE.

Various Items.

August was a month of great dryness in this section, but since there has been a great precipitation, the total rainfall for September reaching nearly seven inches. Since October came in we have also had heavy rains and the water courses are full to their brims. There have been no general frosts, and outdoor vegetation continues fresh and green.

The trade in cut flowers is good. Carnations are coming in and are earlier and better flowers than ordinarily. A few violets, not of the highest grade, are coming to market. Roses are improving in quality and increasing in supply, while outside stuff, dahlias and cosmos excepted, are declining in quantity.

A good many fall weddings are taking place; the customary demand for funeral purposes never fails; social observances begin to influence the demand and a very fair all-round business is apparent.

The fuel question is uppermost in the minds of most of the members of the trade. The coal supply is utterly demoralized and few of our growers have their stock in. A number have purchased coal oil burners, of which several varieties are being pushed on this market, but their efficiency as applied to heating greenhouses remains to be demonstrated. Several growers have changed their boilers when those in use were not adapted to soft coal, but this last material is almost as difficult to secure in ample quantities as anthracite. R.

INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

At the meeting of the State Florists' Association, which was held on the 5th, it was decided to hold a free flower show. John Hartje, A. F. J. Baur and I. Berterman were appointed to arrange for the show. There will be no competition and no premiums, but the society always stands ready to pass upon and certificate anything new of real merit, and those have seedling mums or carnations will find it profitable to send some blooms to this show, which will be held on November 5. Address all packages to J. Hartje, Horticultural rooms, State House, Indianapolis, Ind., unless you intend to come yourself to set up your exhibit. All exhibits sent in care of the committee will be well taken care of and staged to the best advantage. At the last meeting Baur & Smith showed a vase full of their several fine seedlings which will no doubt be seen at some of the shows this winter.

Business has been very good of late and fair stock is finding ready sale at good figures, although we do not hear of many carnations being sold at 6 cents; 2 to 3 cents is the ruling figure around here. The quality is getting better all around. Mums are coming in in quantity now and find ready sale. The fall festival and horse show are calling for many flowers and this is proving a busy week for the florists. A. B.

KANSAS CITY, MO.

Uncle John Thorpe and his assistant, Mr. Lindsey, have arrived to remain until after the flower show, and they will devote their attention between now and the opening to completing the final details.

The press of Kansas City should come in for some credit, for the newspapers are giving elaborate accounts of what may be expected. It is in keeping with the Kansas City spirit that nothing but the best will do for Kansas City, and they are "boosting" the flower show.

The most of us growers were given a very bad half-hour Sunday morning in the shape of a hail storm, and while little damage was done a few extra gray hairs crept in while it lasted.

The first mums are making their appearance in quantity, and fair quality, but are not moving with desirable rapidity, and prices dropped very quickly from $3 to $1 per dozen.

Miss J. E. Murray has moved her store back to the Midland Hotel.

J. H. Vesey.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICH.

All have their carnations housed except the Grand Rapids Floral Co., which has not quite completed the rebuilding of a portion of its establishment.

Mulick Bros. are just getting through planting carnations.

Henry Smith says that a month's work with painters and decorators has put his store in first-class condition for business.

Mums are appearing in the store windows. In a few days they will be very plentiful. The principal variety is Kalb, the earliest and best white.

Carnations are scarce, although more plentiful than for the past two months, in which a perfect famine existed. In fact, an outside florist, on being told that his order could not be filled, replied: "It looks like the flower market is as bad as the coal market."

Roses are scarce and then plentiful by streaks. Local demand is good and shipping brisk.

Violets are blooming, and the flowers at this writing are of better quality than at this time last year.

Roses are $1 per dozen; American Beauties, $1.50 for shorts to $3 per dozen for longs. Carnations have already gone up 5 cents per dozen on common and 25 cents on fancy stock. Lilies are $2 per dozen; violets, 20 cents per dozen.

Recent visitors: Mrs. Cohn, of Manistee, Mich., and E. Ford, representing Siebrecht & Son, New Rochelle, N. Y.

LONDON, ONT.

The weather has been mild but dull, with an abnormal amount of rain. October 9 was the first severe frost of the season. Prior to that all kinds of bedding plants continued their summer appearance. Notwithstanding that the weather has been mild there has been a shortage of all kinds of flowers, and the demand has far exceeded the supply. Roses are coming in a little more plentifully and of better quality. Carnations are still below the demand but the quality is daily improving, and with the relief brought by the daily increased supply of chrysanthemums it is thought that the quantity will soon be sufficient to go around.

Coal, the all absorbing topic, is about as scarce as the proverbial hens' teeth, and none of the craft have a supply worth mentioning. To some who burn hard coal it is a serious question, serious enough to all, for even those who burn slack cannot get their supply in. The price has advanced to, slack, $4 to $5 on cars; lump, $8 to $10; smokeless, $12, and a very little hard has been sold lately at $15, and considered a great favor to get it at that.

Messrs. Gammage & Sons report a large demand for general stock and an unprecedented retail demand for all kinds of bulbs, which they have gone into extensively.

Mr. William Gammage has recovered from his severe attack of bronchitis and is now able to give his whole attention to business.

The London Horticultural Society is making its fall delivery of bulbs, giving each member six hyacinth bulbs.

DES MOINES, IA.

Trade is looking up a bit since the cooler weather set in and the number of weddings makes a brisk demand for roses and carnations, as mums have only just appeared, and they are small and not extra in quality.

There has been some enlarging of greenhouse room in the city this fall, W. L. Morris has built three houses and I. W. Lozier is building on his ten-acre tract east of the city. As I have not had time to call on him, I cannot say how many houses he is putting up. He is going to open a new store on the west side of the river in the very near future. This will give him two greenhouse plants and two stores.

Mr. Peter Lambert has moved into the new cottage built for the park keeper at Greenwood Park, and his son, John D., has taken the greenhouses and the old residence. Mr. John D. was married on October 1 to Miss Anna K. Kuhlman, of this city. "May their days glide smoothly on and trouble never assail them."

Fulmer has recently moved to Union Park, the house in which he lives being one of the early landmarks of the city. He has been busy enlarging the park greenhouse and in taking in his stock. The early frost of September spoiled some of the more tender plants.

We have heard of some of the craft who are already dropping their pennies into a paint keg in order to be able to take the trip to Milwaukee next August. Here's success to them.

Eucharis Grandiflora

It is a mistake to associate this flower with Eucharis Amazonica. The free-blooming qualities of the grandiflora are so much superior that the other cannot be brought in comparison at all except through its similar beautiful flowers. Eucharis Grandiflora will give five crops of bloom, properly handled, to one of Amazonica. It is one of the most profitable and successful flowers for florists to grow who wish something fine for funeral and wedding work.

A stock of bulbs once secured and let alone will produce from time to time through the season a beautiful show of flowers that can be compared to no other white flower for beauty and fragrance. It is both delicate in texture and fragrance, and its lasting qualities are superior to most of the white flowers of this class. It only needs a warm, shady corner of the house and very little care and the blooms will come in at seasons when white flowers are very scarce.

We still have a supply left and prices are offered the same as in former advertisement, $2.50 for large clumps of 15 to 20 bulbs, which are in bloom at the present time, and $10.00 per 100 for single flowering bulbs. The clumps will bloom again for the holidays with proper handling.

Sample flowers, with full instructions for growing will accompany all purchases.

PITTSBURG.

Trade the past week was very good and all stock found a ready market. Prices have advanced a few points since last week's report. The demand for good Maids and Brides was heavy; the inferior grades were over-plentiful. Carnations are arriving in large quantities; the quality is good. American Beauty roses are not so plentiful. Chrysanthemums are increasing in supply; among the varieties in the market at present are some very fine Glory of Pacific, Mme. F. Bergmann, Amelia Henderson, Polly Rose and Marquis de Montmort. Dahlias are still coming in in fine shape. Mr. H. P. Joslin is cutting some very good single varieties and a good double pink; also exceptionally good cosmos.

The visitors last week were: Messrs. J. M. Gasser, of Cleveland, Ohio; Mr. J. Florey, of Media, N. Y.; Mr. S. S. Skidelsky.

Over in the Allegheny market they all report business exceptionally good. Mr. J. W. Ludwig is much pleased with the outlook for a good fall trade. Mr. E. C. Ludwig is doing a fine business. He had considerable funeral work last Saturday which amounted to hundreds of dollars. Mr. Chas. Ehrhardt is Mr. Ludwig's head artist.

Pittsburg and the vicinity will have to depend mainly upon the supply of coal from river mines, as all railroad mines are sending their product east to take the place of anthracite. If winter sets in early and the rivers become icebound, prices will begin to soar. The current rate per bushel now is 10½ cents, 1½ cents above the price of last winter. The president of one of the largest coal companies said he did not predict anything serious in the winter's supply. Their mines are working full time and consignments are coming in regularly. This company alone has 20 million bushels ready to go south via the river route.

Hoo Hoo.

WOMEN FLORISTS.

In an article under the above heading the Pittsburg Dispatch pays high tribute to the artistic abilities of Mrs. E. A. Williams, the florist of that city. It says:

Mrs. E. A. Williams, who has a flower store on Penn avenue, near Sixth street, enjoys the distinction of being Pittsburg's only woman florist, and one of the very few professional women floral decorators in this country. She possesses in a marked degree that particular attribute which goes to make a design artistic, impressive and attractive. She employs a large corps of skilled florists, who are able to impart their marked originality to the finished products of their designs. Great care is given by Mrs. Williams to the selection of her assistants; as to her other qualifications she adds that of being a good business woman, and realizes that her extensive and exacting patronage can only be retained through meritorious work.

SYRACUSE, N. Y.

Those who have not been successful in growing the Marquis, and those who have, should, if possible, make a trip to see this grand carnation. At this time of writing (October 5) the plants are loaded with bud and bloom of large size and perfect color, thus disproving the assertion made that this is a late bloomer. Mr. Marquisee is of the opinion that wherever proper conditions prevail this variety cannot fail to give satisfaction. A good, stiff rose soil is best suited for it, cannot be too heavy, night temperature 48 to 50 degrees. It can be asserted with every kind of confidence that there is not a grander pink on the market today, and to see half a dozen houses filled with vigorous stock, averaging eighteen flowering shoots to each plant, should make us feel like looking further into the subject before discarding this valuable variety. William Matthews, of Utica, and Alfred Patrick, of Auburn, are amongst those nearby who are equally successful. We are emphatic in making this note, as so many have spoken disparagingly of a variety which it is very evident is a most profitable one when properly handled. It is a grand consort to the beautiful Lawson.

The new white, Empire State, is looking in splendid shape, full of promise. Plants have all been pinched back for stock purposes. There will be one or two seedlings shown at the forthcoming carnation convention that will make the name of our genial friend yet more famous.

W. M.

PACKING AND SHIPPING LETTUCE.

Referring to the question of No. 404, would say we raise and ship Grand Rapids lettuce in quantity for the Cincinnati market. We raise it in solid beds. We pack it in sugar barrels in the manner advised by Mr. Totty, except that we cut it close to the ground, not leaving any roots on. We pack from 75 to 90 lbs. in a barrel and cover with clean burlap, and never fail to get the top of the market.

Geo. R. McNeil.

Manchester, O.

CARNATION LILLIAN POND.

Some blooms of this new white carnation recently shown in Chicago for Mr. Reuter, the introducer, by Mr. A. T. Boddington, made a very favorable impression. The blooms are of extra good size, fine, clear white, very fragrant and with good long stems. Such fancy blooms thus early in the season certainly speak well for the variety.

Stillwater, Minn.—Frank Berry, the florist, has added a nursery department to his business. He has purchased ten acres of land, which will be planted with a stock of fruit and ornamental trees and shrubs.

PIPING.

Would it be practicable to heat a house 22 ft. wide, 100 ft. long, side walls 5 ft. high, with six runs of 1-inch steam pipe on each wall, using three runs for flows and three for returns on each side, so that all the valves would be at the shed end of the house? This it seems to us would be quite a saving of time if practicable. If not, why not? Especially if pipes have a good fall to drain all condensation. L. S.

Replying to L. S., as far as the heating of the greenhouse is concerned, there is no objection to placing the pipes as he describes them, but as the direct radiation from six lines of 1-inch pipe reaches a considerable distance, the plants nearest the coils would be warmer and drier than those in the center of the house, and will consequently require more attention in the matter of watering, and if the plants in the greenhouse are at all subject to the attacks of red spider they would be liable to suffer, as the intense heat in the spaces behind the coils of six 1-inch pipes placed vertically on the side wall furnishes splendid breeding places for such pests, which it would be difficult to reach under ordinary conditions with a hose.

In the house 100 ft. long, where the benches have 18 inches of clear space underneath and the boiler cellar is sufficiently deep to let the steam main enter the greenhouse below the floor line, it is possible to make complete circulation spread out below the benches and so keep valves all at one end, as L. S. describes. For this system, however, the house should stand level.

THE RETAIL FLORIST.....

A BOUQUET OF CARNATIONS.

The accompanying engraving is from a photograph of a bouquet of light pink carnations, arranged so it may be used either as a vase or a hand bouquet. It contains fifty carnations, some wired, the rest tied loosely, with Asparagus plumosus and a few common ferns used as a foundation. This bouquet is made round and is alike on each side, but it can be made one sided if to be used against a wall or an altar in a church, where that form would appear to better advantage and there would also be a saving in flowers. A one-sided bouquet can be arranged with a little more than one-half as many flowers as are required for a round bouquet and will give the same effect where only one side is to be seen.

These vase bouquets are used a good deal in decorating rooms for weddings, receptions, etc., and it is as simple and effective a way to display the flowers as any we know of. L. P. Walz.

A BANQUET DECORATION.

We present in this issue a full page engraving from an excellent photograph of the very elaborate decoration arranged by Mr. Geo. M. Stumpp, New York, for the banquet of the Millionaires' Club of that city.

It is very rarely that such an excellent photograph of an elaborate decoration can be obtained and we feel it a great privilege to give our readers such a good view of a decoration that can be classed among the best work done by a leader among the artists of the great metropolis.

The picture has such excellent detail that a description seems unnecessary. Over 10,000 American Beauties were used.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS.

Notes on Varieties.

Cutting has commenced in earnest and there are several varieties now in excellent shape. Chief of these is Mrs. Robinson, cutting of which commenced on the 16th. We cannot yet find a white to come near this variety in its particular season, which is with us from the 18th to the end of the month. Alice Byron is as good as Robinson in every way, but it can be got in ahead of Robinson and will not conflict with it in any particular.

A white that was sent out as a good variety to immediately precede Robinson is with us a complete failure. This variety is C. Holst. Why it has done so poorly I cannot say, but the plants became hard and never grew right. Holst may be all right in certain sections of the country, and with other growers, but we have no use for it whatever.

Two other varieties that have made a very indifferent showing are two French kinds, Nouvelle Vie and M. X. Rey Jouvin. Many of the buds of Nouvelle Vie rotted, and the ones that have produced flowers are decidedly poor. Rey Jouvin is producing a fair sized flower but it is showing a center and the color is away off. It could not be classed with either the whites or pinks. Another variety that is a wretched failure is the imported Vicar of Leatherhead. It is said to be a seedling from Madame Carnot, and such an aristocratic mother would lead one to look for a good son. Unfortunately the flower only shows a double row of petals surrounding an immense disk, or center, and is the poorest variety that I have seen for a long time. I understand it is a magnificent variety in England; it must be in fact to be spoken of so highly, but it only bears out previous experience that varieties which are excellent in one country may be worthless in another.

Importing varieties is a good deal of a lottery, though one can generally find an odd prize in the batch. Just such a prize is Mrs. Coombes. No words of praise are too warm for this variety. It is a wonderful pink. Its only fault from an exhibition standpoint is that it is a little too early. This year it was in good shape by the 11th and at present writing (Oct. 18) is a glorious flower over twenty inches in circumference. It is a duplicate of Morel in shape, a shade lighter in color and one of the strongest and easiest of growers. Coombes must undoubtedly rank first as a second early pink. To get the finest flowers get the crown bud about August 18 to 20 and the result will gratify you. It will stand feeding without damping its petals and will perfect every flower. On the late bud the color is a little better, but the flower is lacking in size and finish. I would always recommend the early bud.

Nellie Pockett is coming on very well and will produce some very fine flowers from crown buds. Its chief value is of course as an exhibition variety.

Princess Bassarabu de Brancona has made good wood but the flower shows a large eye and it will be discarded. If a mum could only speak what would it say to being burdened with such a name as this. One can imagine it saying with poor Wolsey: "Too much honor. Oh, 'tis a burden, Cromwell, 'tis a burden, too heavy for a mum like me to bear." No wonder it shows an eye, and if that eye had a tear in it one could hardly be surprised.

A Round Bouquet of Carnations.

Robert Halliday was ready for cutting by the 16th. It is a neat flower, very clean looking in color and may safely be classed as a very useful variety.

Henry Hurrell is earlier this year and cutting commenced by the 16th. This variety is by no means a novelty but it might be grown more with advantage by many growers. It is a very vigorous grower and a splendid keeper, a fine color but a trifle too small for an exhibition flower.

Australian Novelties

are becoming very prominent in our lists nowadays, with the probability that they will be largely increased in the near future. Possibly the climate of Australia resembles the climate of this country so far as its effect on the mum is concerned. Certain it is that many of our best varieties today are of Australian origin. Nellie Pockett, T. Carrington, Australie and others. Mr. Pockett seems to be the most prominent raiser as is shown by the number of varieties bearing that name, and some of his latest novelties are really startling. Mrs. T. W. Pockett is, I think, the most beautiful chrysanthemum I have ever seen. It is a Japanese as large as the largest flowers of Carnot and somewhat on the style of a good flower of that variety. The color is a deep clear yellow and the general appearance of the flower intensely fascinating. The habit of the plant is ideal—dwarf and exceedingly robust.

C. J. Salter, another of Pockett's giants, is truly a monster. It is the largest incurved I have ever seen—nine inches across—and canary yellow in color. Appleton is dwarfed in size by this new arrival. It is also exceedingly robust in growth and I believe such varieties as these when they are exhibited will place the mum on a more popular plane than it has ever been.

Charles Longley is another immense thing, rosy purple in color and very striking. It would be interesting to know what varieties Mr. Pockett used to cross with to obtain this race of giants.

Millicent Richardson is another variety on the rosy purple order, but much brighter in color than the last named. It will possibly be more popular than Longley, but either one is a great advance.

I know not gentle reader whether any of these varieties will be for sale next year or not. Possibly some of them may, but these notes are not intended to help the sale of any variety. I write of varieties as I find them, and having nothing for sale write sometimes perhaps critically, but always, I hope, truthfully so far as my own experience with varieties is concerned. These Australian novelties I do not possess but I am in a good position to observe them closely and they are putting our own varieties completely in the shade.

Brian Boru.

MISCELLANEOUS SEASONABLE HINTS.

Azaleas.

Some weeks ago I had occasion to speak of newly imported azaleas. They will be arriving in a few days. Perhaps you have yours. Let me remind you once more that it is very essential to dip the ball of roots in a tub of water for a minute or so or until the ball is thoroughly saturated. Some lots may not need this as much as others, but it won't hurt any of them. Do this after you have cut the ball down with a sharp knife or hatchet to the desired size. That does not hurt them and you don't have to use a pot that looks two sizes too big for them, or as I would look if wearing an old hat that once belonged to Mr. Gladstone. Any cool house will do and in more favored climes a cold frame will do for another month, but no frost.

After being potted a week or so you should select the plants you want for flowering at Christmas, and the freshly imported plants are the ones for that purpose, not the summered over plants, as would most likely be supposed to be best adapted for that purpose. Leave those for Easter for they are better at that time than the fall imported plants. They are not so inclined to make these young growths at base of flower bud which if allowed to grow soon rob the flower buds of their strength, and you have a flowerless plant. Some varieties should never be flowered the first season but have one summer under your care and then they are magnificent. Notably that fine variety, Bernard Andreas, which is a fine, bright, rosy pink, superior to the much-in-demand Mme. Van der Cruyssen. The latter, however, forces finely the first winter after importing, while Bernard Andreas is about useless the first year, but the second it puts Van der Cruyssen in the shade. For Christmas sales there is nothing in white that equals Deutsche Perle. Simon Mardner is the best deep pink we know of and Vervaeneana is the fine variegated or mottled pink and white. Azaleas sell well at the holidays.

Rhododendrons, Etc.

Along with the azaleas will come rhododendrons, Azalea mollis and perhaps deutzias and other hardy shrubs for forcing. In our soil the ericaceous plants make little or no roots and what rhododendrons and Azalea mollis are not sold we dump on the rubbish heap as it would be an imposition to donate them to friend or foe. So it is not necessary to pot them or the shrubs till New Year's. A deep cold frame with some nice friable soil or leaf-mold and the plants heeled in will keep them very well till New Year's, but before they are heeled in the roots should be thoroughly wet. Perhaps I may be a little clearer in this by saying that rhododendrons should be potted and in the greenhouse by New Year's as they take some time to start and expand their flower buds.

The deciduous azaleas will want only seven or eight weeks in the heat while the deciduous shrubs will vary in time and that of course will depend somewhat on the amount of heat you give them. In 60 degrees at night a Deutzia gracilis will want seven or eight weeks, a lilac four weeks. It is a long while yet before you are handling them and what concerns you now is to take care of them at this busy time, for it is a busy time.

Don't think because a lilac and spiraea or Viburnum is a hardy shrub when well established in our gardens that you can expose them to zero after coming out of a warm box in the hold of a steamer. They really get slightly stimulated into growth during the journey and are in no condition for a severe freeze. Let them be protected from cold cutting winds with sash or boards and later they will endure a freeze without any harm.

Spiraea.

That weighty article, the spiræa or astilbe, will soon be along. This pretty feathery flower will stand more abuse when dormant than a tom-cat, but the latter is seldom dormant till dead. Many people leave the case of three or four hundred roots out of doors just as they arrived. If we get a warm spell the roots start to grow and they get matted together. They may not be much the worse for this harsh treatment yet I prefer to unpack and place the roots in boxes with a little earth between the clumps and a few inches over the crowns, wetting the roots before putting them away. In this condition they are safe till you want to force them after New Year's.

Bulbs.

We will hope that you boxed up a good many of each variety of early single tulips for your January and February forcing. If you have them out of doors covered with three inches of soil they will not have needed any artificial watering, at least not with us as rains have been copious; but if in your locality it has been dry you must soak the beds once a week or root growth will not be going on as it should and without roots they won't force.

We are now potting our named hyacinths in 4-inch pots. These we prefer to put in a cold frame, standing the pots on old boards or a few inches of coal ashes. After a good soaking cover with two or three inches of loam or leaf-mold or decayed refuse hops. This will do till hard winter comes when we cover again with six or seven inches of stable litter and then with sash or frames. Hard freezing would not hurt the bulbs or their prospect of flowering, but it is hard work and a nuisance to be chopping them out of a frozen mass in the months of February and March.

We grow a good many pans of hyacinths for Easter, all one color in a pan. They can be planted now in the pan or you can grow the hyacinths in a 3-inch flat, forty bulbs in a flat 2 feet by 1 foot. When they are about in full flower they can be transferred into the pans and will make finer pans than those planted in the fall. There is no fraud about this. The flower will last just as long. They are as lasting and pretty as if grown there all winter. You need not lose a root in taking them out of the flat because the soil can be washed off but that is of no consequence. The loss of some roots will make no difference. By this method you will save room in the frame, save breaking of pots and pans and have no blanks in your pans. We take up tulips from flats when in flower and make into pans to please customers, but tulips do not lend themselves to this treatment and always look floppy and pulled about. Not so with hyacinths.

Get all your forcing tulips and hyacinths in flats as soon as possible. But don't hurry about planting in beds out of doors. After trying all dates from early October to a January thaw, I am convinced that the middle of November, or even later, if weather is open, is the best time to plant. It may be wet and muddy, that makes no difference. The winter will put all that to rights. Plant deep, five or six inches is not too deep for tulips. A blunt stick and a hole with the tulip at the bottom of it is all the science there is about it.. Why this late planting gives better results than early, is, I venture to say, accounted for as follows: If planted early and there is two months' mild weather before a freeze-up the bulbs make about all the roots they ever will make and in the spring the roots are hard and do not supply much nourishment to the leaves and flowers. If planted late the roots are in the most active state after spring releases the frost from the ground and the flower is more abundantly supplied from the active roots. The flowers are larger, a better color, and better than all, they last longer.

I will conclude by telling you from observation how not to do it. As you all know the Pan-American company had so much money that ordinary methods of construction and cultivation did not dispense it with the desired rapidity. A large bill of A No. 1 bulbs (supposed to be) was bought by the landscape department. The beds and borders were first excavated six inches deep, then an inch or two of sand was spread on the surface, then the hyacinths and tulips were set on the sand in geometrical lines and figures. A gang of civil engineers and helpers did the geometry part of it. Then the earth that was excavated was thrown over the bulbs and beautifully leveled off and later covered with straw, and then, unfortunately, it was the poorest lot of flowers we have ever had the misfortune to see. And many such little narratives could be told of waste, extravagance and impudent ignorance accompanied by "loafer's gall."

I meant in speaking of the astilbe to say that last fall a few dozen clumps of a variety called "Washington" was sent us by a New York firm. It proved a grand thing, much finer in every way than compacta or the old type.

William Scott.

ROSES.

Seasonable Hints.

Now that we are at the beginning of the season of steady firing a few reminders as to the care of the houses under these conditions may not be out of place.

The burning questions for some time to come will be the supply of coal, and how to economize on that item, and this question requires most careful consideration. Merely keeping the temperature at a fixed figure at night or during the day with the smallest amount of coal possible is hardly the kind of economy that pays. There are days and nights, too, when the temperature can be kept to the normal by simply closing the ventilators, and no doubt many will be tempted to try this plan to save a few dollars, but the quality of the cut will soon deteriorate and the injury to the general health of the stock will be more than an offset to the few dollars saved.

This method of treating roses is one of the most fruitful sources of trouble. The air becomes close and stagnant, causing the foliage to become soft, the young growth will lose that vigor and robustness so necessary to carry a well finished bud, and the plants will acquire that condition of impaired vitality that will make them susceptible to the ravages of any disease by which they may be attacked.

In order to keep the plants in a vigorous and healthy condition it is essential to keep the air fresh and sweet. This can only be done by keeping up a good circulation without creating a direct draught, and the best means to attain this is to use heat and ventilation.

In such a season as the past summer it has been a hard matter to keep stock from growing soft and spongy, and in many places no doubt it is in a very unfit condition to enter on the winter with, and care should be taken to use every means to harden it up before dark weather begins. To do this successfully the houses should have as much air on every favorable opportunity as it is possible to give with safety.

During close and muggy weather the ventilators should be left partly open at night, and as many pipes left on as will keep the thermometer at the required mark, and even through the day it is better to keep some of the pipes on so that a greater amount of ventilation can be given. Watering also will require special care at this time, as the roots are beginning to lose a great part of their activity, and consequently will be less able to use so much as heretofore. A careful examination of the benches every morning will be necessary as this will reveal many dry spots that will require attention.

During the hurry and bustle of getting ready for winter, boxing and storing bulbs, lilies, etc., tying will be apt to receive less attention than it should. Any neglect in this matter at this season will later on result in crooked and weak stems, which will detract very much from the value of even the best developed buds. The eyes will also break weak by reason of want of light and air, and a growth of blind wood will be encouraged which is undesirable at this season. Each stem should be tied up neatly and separately, and in such a manner as to allow free circulation of air among the leaves, so that they may dry quickly after syringing; this also facilitates syringing.

Keep the benches clear of all ripe and decaying leaves, especially in Beauty, Liberty and Meteor houses. Apart from the untidy appearance these create they are also a source of disease and trouble, affording a nursery for fungous growths and shelter for troublesome insects.

Precautions against mildew are still in order. Keep the pipes painted with the sulphur mixture at least once a week, and also use the blower frequently, always selecting a bright day for this work.

Greenfly will begin to give some trouble, but a light fumigation once a week will hold this in check. Thrips will also put in an appearance and it may be better to fumigate twice a week in Beauty and Kaiserin houses.

Disbudding and removing of laterals should receive frequent attention. If these are allowed to remain on too long they spoil the appearance of the finest stems and reduce them in grades.

From now on during the winter the floors and paths should be kept as dry as possible, there being usually moisture sufficient and to spare in the atmosphere during the next four months. By economizing on water it is easier to economize on coal.

It is only by carefully attending to details, and keeping a vigilant eye on attending conditions that we are able to circumvent our enemies and induce those conditions so necessary to the welfare of the plants, and the proper development of a crop of perfect buds.

Ribes.

EEL-WORMS IN ROSES.

Please tell what to do for eel-worms. I have been using lime water and tobacco stems soaked in water over night. It seems to hold them back for a week. The leaves turn yellow and die.

I had a great deal of trouble last spring with bedding plants. They had sufficient air, water and heat. The water in this section contains more or less salt and mineral matter. The soil is a light black loam and seems to lose its strength after watering it a few months. M. F. C.

The specimens of roses received were very badly infested with eel-worms. The plants seem never to have made any vigorous growth, and of course infested as they are they never will. So far I have been unable to learn of anything that will destroy the worms, without also destroying the plants. They perish in solutions of acids, and of most metallic compounds, but these unfortunately are most destructive to plant life. It seems a pity, but the best thing to do is to destroy every affected plant, renew the soil and replant with healthy stock. The sample of soil sent seems suitable for rose culture if composted properly.

Anent the trouble with bedding stock. This same soil would in my opinion be the ideal soil for such. The fault may be in the water, and M. F. C. should have some one in the locality examine the source of supply. Ribes.

TOBACCO ASHES—MANURE.

Are tobacco-stem ashes all right to use as a top dressing on rose or carnation benches? And would well rotted horse manure do if no cow manure can be had? Or is fresh cow manure from last spring that is not rotted yet all right to use? Or should it be rotted first? J. B.

Ashes from vegetable growth consist of such elements as are always required for their perfect maturity, and it is evident they must furnish one of the best manures which can be supplied for their growth. They contain in fact every element and generally in the right proportion for insuring a full and rapid growth.

At the same time great care must be taken not to give too much by way of top dressing. One bushel of such ashes will be sufficient for 150 square yards of bench surface for a first application. If the results are satisfactory a slight increase in the quantity at the next application may be of benefit. If the plants are showing any signs of unhealthiness they will be better without it; in any case be cautious.

Well rotted horse manure mixed in the same proportions as recommended for cow manure is a good substitute.

Cow manure collected during last spring should now be sufficiently decomposed for this purpose. By mixing it with soil in the right proportions, and turning it over once a week it will be quite fit for a mulch in three weeks. One inch thick will be heavy enough.

CARNATION NOTES—EAST.

Handling the Product.

This important branch of our business brings us to the point where it is a question of value or price. Flowers have no intrinsic value; it is only when passing from you to the buyer that you can say for value received, so then you must place your product before him in the most attractive form. This can be accomplished only by intelligent, careful and systematic handling with strict attention to every detail.

As we retail practically all our output, there may be more detail and varied conditions under which we are compelled to work, but the principal features can be carried out by the wholesaler as well.

Late in the afternoon we go over the benches, cutting those which are to go out on order the next morning, immediately placing the stems in vases deep enough to cover at least one-half the stems with moderately cool water, standing the vases for the night in a temperture not above 50 degrees or below 45 degrees.

Early next morning all blooms sufficiently developed are cut and treated in the same manner, being used through the day as occasion demands. Carnations are sometimes cut too soon, but oftener left on the plants too long. The happy medium may perhaps be hard to regulate in order that there shall be no loss, especially with the grower who retails. It is better to err on the side of cutting too soon, at least with varieties liable to fade in strong sunlight, such as Daybreak and Lawson.

I could never see the sense in allowing blooms to develop to their utmost before cutting, for they are then almost sure to be in a condition to self pollenize easily and with the handling they must be subjected to it is more than likely that they will be on their last legs when they reach the consumer.

Store cut blooms where there are no direct draughts or strong lights, but in a shady place where the air is constantly changing. Do not try to see how many blooms can be gotten into a vase; a vase crammed full of stems must of necessity contain little water, besides the petals get bruised and have that tired look, so quickly noticed by a critical buyer.

Change the water in the vases daily; once a week have them thoroughly washed, using a few drops of ammonia in the water.

Sleepy Blooms.

Last season there was much complaint about sleepy flowers, largely among those retailers who depend on the grower or commission man for their supply. I believe all parties concerned contributed to the trouble. The grower may allow blooms to stand too long on the plants or allow cut bloom to lie around some time before placing in water. Blooms picked from plants suffering for water soon wither.

Strong applications of chemical fertilizers and maintaining too high temperature produce only inferior stock. Rough handling as I would apply to cordwood, by both grower and commission man, would almost put a dried cape flower to sleep. You will see store men at closing up time clipping the ends of stems on left over stock with scissors; this mangles the tissues of the stem, blocking the passage of water.

Crowding vases too full, using stagnant water, allowing blooms to stand in a draughty window under strong sun and permitting customers to paw over stock as seen on bargain day at dry goods counters, all help to induce sleepiness.

My endeavors being intended for the grower, would advise him to keep his eyes open abroad as well as at home, suggesting a few pointers down along the line.

MISREPRESENTATION.

BY GEO. S. OSBORN.

[Read before the Hartford Florists' Club Tuesday evening, October 14, 1902.]

It is the purpose of this article to place before you a few circumstances that have actually occurred at the expense of the writer or in his presence, not in any spirit of revenge nor as a matter to be treated as a joke, but rather to point out to you as men of business how short-sighted it is to place your worthy occupation in any other light than an honest one. To be sure, there is a vein of humor running through some of these occurrences, but there is a deeper and more lasting tendency to carry one to the belief that every one is a rascal until proven an honest man, a condition of mind to be deplored.

Misrepresentation is defined in the Standard dictionary as the act of giving intentionally or unintentionally an incorrect report or giving a wrong impression. The same authority defines prevarication as the act of giving a wrong color to facts in speaking or answering or misrepresentation by shape or turn of statement. Thus it will be seen that these two words have practically a common meaning.

The plain, unvarnished truth will assert itself in spite of all attempts to conceal it, especially in the florist's trade, where sight is the chief sense to be gratified, not only at the moment of sale, but later when the articles are sent to their destination to be admired under new surroundings and perhaps by another and more critical eye. With food stuffs, chemicals and coloring matter can be employed, one to deceive the taste, the other the eye, so adulteration may go unnoticed; not so in the plant, shrub and flower trade, for Dame Nature quickly resents any deviation from her ways, allowing the true conditions to come to light.

First let me state that the personal pronouns "we" and "us" are to be taken as applying to the florist, nurseryman and seedsman alike, from the fact that these branches of trade are closely allied.

Second, allow me to say that if the chips fall in unpleasant places I can only answer with the proof of my statements.

One great trouble is that we are human, and it is not human nature to depreciate one's wares in whatever line, still it is not necessary to tell a cus-

THE GEO. WITTBOLD CO.

We present herewith several views from photographs of the new range of houses recently built by the Geo. Wittbold Co., at Edgebrook, Ill., which is just outside the city limits of Chicago, on the C. M. & St. P. Ry. It is 11 miles from the Chicago Union station.

This establishment is intended to supplement that in the city, there being no more room available at the city place. The new houses are three in number, each 27 ft. 4 in. by 300 feet, and contain 30,000 feet of glass. The company has here 30 acres of land, which gives them ample room for further expansion. Part of the land has been planted with nursery stock.

One of the pictures gives a view in a house of palms and another shows a house of Boston ferns. The houses are of Garland iron gutter and post construction, and are built to stay.

tomer that Adiantum Farleyense can be grown with success in an ordinary dwelling house; however, I have heard such a statement made.

I have seen vegetables and flower seeds exposed for sale when the fly specks of years' accumulation on the envelope containing them would indicate anything but fresh seed, still they were represented as such.

Sample palms have been shown me in July, then in 4-inch pots, to be shifted soon to 5-inch and delivered during September and October at a certain price. This stock was represented to be on the grower's place in a certain state. When the goods arrived some time after promised they were still in 4-inch pots, needed no shift, were smaller than sample shown and came from an entirely different grower, situated in another state; a case of selling short.

Having seen violets offered for sale a sample was sent for, which, proving good, induced me to order a quantity. The quantity came, but the quality was all in the sample plant. Two and sometimes three old stumps or stools, some of which had no roots, had been bunched together and stuffed with soil into a pot. Several times geranium cuttings have been ordered of one distinct variety; at blooming time they proved to be a motley array.

Most of us know the character and source of supply of department store roses, sold at 10 cents each. They are as a rule offered by the importer, bought and sold by the retailer as they really are. What would be your opinion of a nurseryman seen coming from one of these stores laden with several bunches of these roses going in the direction of his place of business? I saw this several years ago, but never forgot it or changed my opinion.

It is a matter of record that a few years ago a certain variety of carnation was offered for sale as being a sport from a well known and profitable sort. Quite a controversy was carried on through the trade papers as to its really being a sport from the variety named. At last a committee was appointed or asked to investigate and report. The committee reported that it believed the sport to be a true one and recommended any florist having $10 to spare to send for a hundred cuttings. Evidently there was a nigger in the wood pile, for the so-called sport failed to show any $10 a hundred qualities, but is now practically forgotten, while the old standard is still in cultivation.

Now to reverse things somewhat, placing the wholesaler or grower at the mercy of the retailer or store man. It is a most despicable practice to misrepresent one's needs to a grower of cut flowers who has stock, perishable as it is, to offer; this is commonly called shrewd buying. Not so; it is the downright, selfish grinding accomplishment of obtaining goods under practically false pretenses.

Another practice which in some places seems to be growing, is that of obtaining the over supply from public and private establishments by a favored few, thus placing a premium on begging at the expense of the whole community, at the same time placing the parties implicated in a dangerous position, for "murder will out."

Our special Thanksgiving number will be issued November 13. Prepare advs. for same now.

PAINTING HEATING PIPES.

Mr. Gibbons says in the Review that red lead and linseed oil is the best preventive of rust, and if the color is an objection add some lamp black, which I suppose will make the pipes black. Beneath benches and side walls this is doubtless the best thing you can do, and something should be put on them wherever they are, for rust they will. This very day we have had to replace several lengths of 1¼-inch pipe that were eaten through with rust, and that were put in seven years ago. There was a drip on this coil and it rusted badly. Mr. Gibbons also adds that the lead and oil will make no difference in radiation of heat given out through the coils. In that I think he is very sound.

Now white is a very much better color (if color it can be called) for the interior of a greenhouse, and in the new system of building, where a whole block of houses has no partitions in it, it is often convenient to have part of the steam pipes supported or hung on the iron posts that support the gutters. To paint those pipes, which are perhaps two or three feet from the ground, either red or black, would, I think, be a detriment and not nearly so pleasant to the eye or conducive to a light house as painting them white. It is light we are after, no matter whether it comes from the north, south, east or west.

Notice the difference between a house where the bars have recently had a coat of white lead and a house that has not had an interior coat for three or four years. I have several houses heated by hot water where the flow is a 2-inch pipe running near the wall plate. I gave them two coats of white lead and linseed oil directly after they were put up. After seven or eight years they are clean and bright, with not the slightest trace of rust, and as for radiation, I am sure they get as hot as it is possible to make them with the heater and fuel behind them.

Now I am out to learn from Mr. Gibbons, and I want to know why white lead and oil will not do for all pipes that are seen. I have 18,000 feet of 1-inch pipe waiting for Mr. Gibbons' advice, but I don't want them either red or black. If not white, then I would rather paint them the color of grass when covered with snow, which is "invisible green." W. S.

Replying to W. S., there is no very serious objection to painting the pipes which are not exposed to the drip from the benches or other excessive moisture with white lead. The white lead will, of course, retard radiation slightly, but the loss in this respect is probably counteracted by the gain of reflection. If the pipes are subject to corrosion they should first have a coat of red lead, then a coat of white for appearance's sake. Henry W. Gibbons.

NATURAL GAS FOR FUEL.

Which would you consider the most economical fuel—Pittsburg bituminous coal at $3 per ton, or natural gas at 25 cents per 1,000 feet? My place contains about 7,000 square feet of glass and is heated by two Hitchings No. 17 hot water heaters. B. F. E.

The bituminous coal at the price mentioned equals natural gas at about 21 cents per 1,000 feet. We would think it desirable from every point of view for your correspondent to use the gas. With gas there is no stoking, no soot, no ashes, and it saves practically three-fourths the time ordinarily required where soft coal is used.

Natural gas is a luxury and at price named would certainly advise its use. Would advise consulting some gas expert as to best type of burner, for it makes a great difference in the bills where a scientific burner is used. E. G. H.

BUSINESS METHODS FOR BUSY FLORISTS.

XI.

Expansion.

This is something we heard a great deal of a few years since in a political way. In reality a new word was coined in the heat of political discussion, or a broader, larger meaning given to an old word. It obtained a national meaning and in a measure set every one thinking about expanding his business, his income or his expenditures.

Those who are older in the florist business than the writer have seen a wonderful expansion in the business during the past twenty-five years. Even during the last decade business has doubled, and still there seems room for much more. At what rate can this expansion go on and when should a halt be called. That is one of the hardest questions confronting the trade today. For the most part local conditions will determine the answer to each individual in the business, but a few cardinal rules should be observed before plunging into new projects too hastily.

If you are a grower and your business is prosperous, as we have a right to suppose, and your annual profits amount to 10 per cent of your invested capital, you should not hesitate to invest more in your chosen vocation. If your trade is growing in proportion to your income all of your yearly profits over your living expenses can be safely used in expansion by building more houses.

Right here the question of borrowing money to conduct your business comes in. When business is prosperous and times are good money is easy to obtain and rates of interest are usually lower. Oftentimes money can be borrowed and used to good advantage. But if you are out of debt don't borrow more than 10 per cent of your invested capital. This will enable you to pay it all within a year. If you are in debt, rather try to decrease it than to increase it. If your business has not been profitable or has not paid you 10 per cent, don't borrow more money, for if you can't make a profit on your own capital it isn't likely that you can on some one else's.

Keep within the limit, don't expand more rapidly than your business will warrant. I know that many large firms have built up a big business on borrowed capital, but unless your profits are unusually large don't attempt it. It is too risky for yourself as well as the other fellow. A business built from the ground up on your own money and brains is much more likely to stay by you than if you built it upon borrowed capital. The man with money can always make money during times of depression, and the man who borrows will lose during such times.

You can expand your trade by advertising judiciously, which as I stated in a former article means more than simply writing an advertisement for a newspaper. To be effective it must be followed up by good goods and close and careful attention to orders. I would not discourage or deter any young man from engaging in business without capital, but be on the safe side at all times and do not borrow more than you can repay in a year's time.

Nearly all large concerns have built up their business from small beginnings, and what they have done you can do by perseverance, pluck and industry. We often hear that "it takes money to make money." This is true in a restricted sense only. Brains make money, brawn will make as much as brute strength can command in the market, but brains will organize labor and capital and make more, many times over, than either one could alone.

I would lay down these rules for all in the business or about to engage in the business to follow:

Expand your business in proportion to your profits.

Never borrow money to expand your business unless your annual profits are at least double the rate of interest you have to pay.

Never expand your business unless it shows a good annual profit.

Never borrow more than 10 per cent. of the amount invested in the business.

If for any reason you cannot comply with these rules you had better go out of business. Any business that shows an annual increase of 10 per cent. or more is prosperous.

Expansion is the keynote to modern business, but conservatism is the balance wheel that carries it over the hard places. SYSTEM.

CORRESPONDENTS, please note that a quotation "per bunch" does not convey any information unless it is specified how many the bunch contains. It is better to make all such quotations by the hundred as bunches vary so in size in the different markets.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Flower Market.

The first annual meeting was held on Thursday evening, October 16, in Horticultural Hall, President Lonsdale in the chair. The by-laws were taken up first and gone over with care. One amendment and some changes were proposed, but after discussion it was decided that no changes or additions be made, the whole being adopted as presented. The charter, handsomely engraved, was exhibited with the seal of the commonwealth and the signature of the governor attached.

The election of directors resulted in the choice of David Bearn, W. P. Craig, H. C. Geiger, W. K. Harris, Joseph Heacock, Edwin Lonsdale, R. G. Palmer, H. G. Tull and J. W. Young. The tellers were Robert Craig and George Anderson. It was a great pleasure to see the former again looking well and hearty. It was decided to let the directors themselves draw lots for their terms of office, and to hold an opening reception on ladies' night in the new market.

Next day the directors' terms were decided as follows: To serve for three years, H. C. Geiger, W. K. Harris, Joseph Heacock; for two years, David Bearn, Herbert G. Tull, J. W. Young; for one year, W. P. Craig, Edwin Lonsdale, R. G. Palmer. The officers chosen for the ensuing year were: President, Joseph Heacock; vice-president, William K. Harris; secretary, Edwin Lonsdale. The treasurer will be elected later.

Arrangements will rapidly be made to have everything in shape by Thursday evening, October 30, when every florist is expected to come to the third floor of 1224 Cherry street, and to bring his family or his sweetheart with him to the great party. If by any accident you don't get an invitation, just buttonhole W. K. Harris, W. P. Craig or C. E. Meehan before the day arrives and they will make it all right.

The President.

Joseph Heacock, who has been elected market president for the first year, is one of our foremost growers, a man whose ability and integrity have won him respect everywhere and whose bright, cheery nature has won him a host of friends. He is an earnest worker, having put an amount of hard work on this enterprise that few men who are as busy as he is could or would have done.

Mr. Heacock started in business as a florist about fifteen years ago, making carnations a specialty. Later he added roses, and a few years ago palms. Today his specialties are Beauties and palms and his place is famous as one of the best and most prosperous near this city. Under such a president the market's success is assured.

The Manager's Trip.

Charles E. Meehan, the manager of the new flower market, who spent a couple of days last week looking at the flower markets of New York and Boston, was greatly pleased with his trip. He was especially enthusiastic about Boston. He and his friends were so kindly received by all the Boston growers that they felt at home at once. Business in the Boston market was rushing and stuff pretty well cleaned up and the growers away by 8:30 a. m. Many features of interest were noted.

The rest of the day was spent among the growers. At the Waban Conservatories a great house, 700 feet long, or more, full of superb Brides and Maids, was admired. At W. H. Elliott's the lofty asparagus house, 40 feet high, and a Liberty house, 140x30 feet, just cut back, which has proved a little mint during the past season, were objects of especial interest. The last place visited was William Nicholson's, at Framingham, where fine carnations were a feature. The glad hand and good stuff go a long way toward making a trip pleasant.

The Coal Question.

The florists of this section of the country owe to President Roosevelt a deep debt of gratitude for his efforts, which have finally ended the great anthracite coal strike, that, as nearly all the resolutions passed by the S. A. F. O. H. put it, threatened the very life of our business.

Coal will come down to us slowly, with the strong probability of many vexatious delays, but there is every reason to believe that the coal can be had at but little advance over last season's rates.

It is confidently predicted that some of our growers will not return to anthracite coal. It is understood that the Dreer place, at Riverton, will give bituminous coal a full years' trial and test.

Notes.

S. S. Pennock received some fine Mrs. Robinson chrysanthemums this week. Weber, Halliday and DeWitt are all sending him fine October Sunshine.

The Pennsylvania Horticultural Society meeting was held on Tuesday. Preparations for next month's show are being actively pushed.

Adolph Fahrenwald is sending in some special Beauties and Liberties to Leo Niessen.

Eugene Bernheimer is handling a handsome yellow chrysanthemum called "October Sunrise." Also fancy Edgelys and Beauties.

Wm. J. Baker is receiving some fine chrysanthemums in variety. Also smilax in quantity, extra heavy strings.

The election of Joseph Heacock as president of the Flower Market was a fitting recognition of three months' earnest work bringing the growers together.

A. J. Pennock is sending some very fine valley to his brother, S. S. Pennock.

Leo Niessen is receiving some fine valley from the greenhouses of Walter P. Sloan, C. G. Papsch, manager, Moorestown, N. J.

The genial Robert Lockerbie is now on the road for G. C. Watson. PHIL.

BUFFALO.

The weather keeps mild and that's a blessing for all of us. The great struggle seems temporarily patched up but that does not heal the wounds that have been made, and it must be weeks before we can buy fuel at even a high normal price. Still the fact that there is a distant prospect of fuel feels as if a two-ton weight was taken off our heads.

Demand for flowers of all kinds is good. Plenty of white and pink chrysanthemums, but a really good yellow is much needed. J. K. Shaw is a fine pink just about in; Glory of the Pacific is very early but the buyers don't like its dull, heavy color. If Robert Halliday could be brought in by the 10th it would be a great acquisition. The 20th of this month is about as early as we can cut it. Like the man it is named after, it is grand in every way except that it has not the elongation, and "Bob" has none of the rich yellow color in his makeup. Ten times as many carnations could be sold were they to be had. Lawson and Dorothy have produced the best flowers up to date and Marquis is giving us fine flowers. Violets are asked for continually and the supply is short and quality poor.

Mrs. C. Schoenhut (nee Nusbaum) has added to her establishment and erected two houses adjacent to her store on the corner of William and Jefferson streets. This is the heart of the east side business district and Mrs. Schoenhut does a very large business among the Americanized continental Europeans. The houses will be in charge of Carl Reish, famous as a good worker and expert left-handed bowler.

We were dreadfully disappointed on returning to civilization last night to hear that Mr. and Mrs. Anton Then of Chicago had called on us and we had missed them. Now then, that's too bad. Then is when we missed you. Then, when shall we see you? Perhaps at Milwaukee. I hope then, but then you can't tell. But if then, then there will be a glorious time.

I will never forget the hour (more or less) spent with Mr. Anton Then and Mr. Fritz Bahr at Indianapolis. It was just after the banquet. We were at peace with all the world. The coal strike had not begun and the time table was not of particular interest and our better halves were far, far away and outside telephone communication. The subject of our animated conversation was the close affinity of the higher horticultural minds with the beauties of human nature. "Toot, toot."

Chicago lays claim to both these jolly men but they should travel. When well wound up and in good nature, as I believe they only can be, Weber and Fields is tiresome and insipid in comparison. As a cure for the blues or dyspepsia they are better than all the medicine or mineral springs in the world, and their humor is honestly natural, and that's what makes it so enjoyable. I shall be glad again to hear that musical "toot, toot" for "Then" I will be happy.

The first annual convention of the Chrysanthemum Society of America at Chicago should be an unqualified success. This land is big enough and broad enough and the gorgeous autumn queen is admired by millions of our people and specialized by hundreds of expert growers. As with the carnation this continent (for that word includes Timothy Eaton and Mr. Miller) since the awakening to popular favor of the chrysanthemum some fifteen years ago, has raised more really good varieties in the same time than the experts of Europe—that is the varieties possessing more first class qualities. I think our October weather is better than they have in the British Isles. Ivory has immortalized Mr. W. K. Harris more even than his crack marksmanship, and a dozen American varieties could be mentioned that stand now as the ideal in their colors and season.

The Chrysanthemum Society has dragged out a precarious existence, being sorely afflicted with somnia most of the time, and all because there was not a national exhibition. What would our Carnation Society be without its annual exhibition—nothing worth talking about. I fancy the Chrysanthemum Society has launched out in just the right channel. This year at Chicago, next year at New York, next year at—but there, I had better stop. There are, however, twenty cities that should be too glad to have the convention, for it would be the making of their local exhibitions. Whether this glorious consummation will be realized will largely depend on the degree of patronage both with exhibits and personal attendance of members at Chicago.

The convention does not clash with Madison Square, and whatever may be contemporary in time should not be any excuse for the non-attendance of those who grow and love the bounteous, curly headed beauties that so gladden our hearts at this lovely season of the year. The officers of the Chrysanthemum Society of America have worked hard and earnestly to bring out a great exhibition and they have been more than liberally supported by the Horticultural Society of Chicago, which has come forward handsomely with its proverbial open-hearted hospitality and enterprise. Let us all go and give this great exhibit a fitting send-off and gladden the hearts of the men who have shouldered a lot of hard work and responsibility.

PITTSBURG.

We have had a week of very fair weather, consequently the supply has increased very much. Prices have slid down a few points. Roses are of better quality, especially Maids, which are exceptionally good. The supply of Beauties has not increased and prices have advanced on them a little.

Varieties in chrysanthemums are increasing. Merry Monarch, Amelia Henderson, Robinson, October Sunshine, Robt. Halliday, G. S. Kalb, Lady Harriet and Mme. F. Bergmann, are arriving in quantities. The very best blooms sell at $15.00 per 100 and as low as $6.00 for the smaller ones; culls are not salable at any figure. Smilax, Sprengeri and asparagus have all been much in demand.

The supply of carnations in pink exceeds the demand and lots of 1,000 were sold at $10.00, while white are still short in supply and the lower class of white roses are used as a substitute. Some good Crocker and Prosperity are in evidence; these are bought up quickly.

The best roses the writer has seen so far this season were shipped by Fred Burki from his Bakerstown plant. The Maids and Brides are worthy of mention. Mr. Burki says he consigns all his cut to the Pittsburg Cut Flower Co.

Charles T. Siebert, the carnation specialist, is sending in quantities of chrysanthemums.

A. W. Smith, the Sixth avenue florist, is doing considerable decorating. Mr. Smith, Jr., reports business good and a long list of advance orders.

At L. I. Neff's Sixth street store one can always find Mr. L. I. busy. A general collection of beautiful ferns and small plants grown at his Aspinwall houses adorn his windows. He reports business good and says his branch stores (of which he has four) are all doing good business.

The new florists in Allegheny, Struff & Neigel, are well pleased with their business.

The Pittsburg Cut Flower Co. has sent out a very neat catalogue of florists' supplies.

C. K. Hoffmeyer, of Carnegie, met with a very painful accident last week. While cutting down a canna he struck his foot with the scythe. He is badly disabled.

Mr. Jacob Beckert, of the old firm of Beckert Bros., the early pioncers of the seed and plant business in this city, died last week at his home, Mount Troy.

Hoo-Hoo.

SAN FRANCISCO.

Business is very good at this date and has been for some time past with the outlook very bright for the coming holidays. The queen of autumn, the chrysanthemum, is with us in all her glory, every store in town making a most beautiful display of this stately flower. The Chinese growers are bringing in large quantities of outside chrysanthemums that go at 10 to 50 cents per dozen. Fine Queens, S. Sievers and Bonnaffons, inside grown, are selling at $1 to $2 per dozen. Violets are very fine in quality and plentiful, and are bought up eagerly. Carnations have been very scarce for some time past but are now coming in more plentifully. Roses are only middling in quality but no doubt will improve as the season advances. Cosmos and dahlias are in abundant supply and are taking the place of asters as a cheap flower. The weather continues as usual —delightful. Our first rain came on October 11 and merely laid the dust.

Mr. Charles Kruse, Piedmont, Cal., has returned from the Klondike after an absence of four years. At one time Mr. Kruse was reported to have died while up north, but Charlie's sudden appearance in town a few weeks ago has knocked that rumor right in the head. A partnership has been formed between Mr. Kruse and the present caretaker, Mr. Hugh B. MacGowan. They will grow roses and maidenhair fern.

Sievers & Boland have opened a branch store in the Palace Hotel building under the able management of Mr. L. Costa.

The Pacific Coast Horticultural So-

ciety held its annual election of officers October 11 at the Mission Opera House. The officers elected are as follows: President, Hans Plath; vice president, Thomas A. Monro; recording secretary, Charles Mitchell; financial secretary, Milton Borkheim; treasurer, Fred Elias; librarian, Hugo H. Lilienthal; ushers, M. Waddington and L. Mayer; trustee for three year term, W. A. H. Krabbenhoft. The society will give a complimentary chrysanthemum show Saturday evening, November 1, in the Mission Opera House. All applications for space should be made to Thomas A. Monro, 1701 Oak street, San Francisco.

The florist clerks of San Francisco have formed a union under the title of the "San Francisco Florists' Protective Union," with headquarters at Pythian Castle, 909 Market street, San Francisco. The union has received its charter from the Federation of Labor. It is about time the clerks banded together for a betterment of their condition in life; $1.50 to $2 per day for a day's labor of fourteen to fifteen hours seems to me to be the rankest kind of slavery. It may not be out of place to mention right here that the street sweepers of San Francisco are receiving $2.50 per day of eight hours. I can't see where there is much art in street sweeping unless it be sweeping around the lamp posts.

Mrs. L. Matrica, wife of Mr. V. Matrica, the Powell street florist, committed suicide on October 13 by drinking carbolic acid. J. N.

ST. LOUIS.

Florist Club Meeting.

A very pleasant, interesting and well-attended meeting of the St. Louis Florists' Club was held last Thursday afternoon, October 16, in the Odd Fellows' building.

President Dunford was in the chair and fourteen members were present when the meeting was called to order at 3 o'clock.

Mr. Jablonsky offered a resolution changing the time of meeting from 3 to 2 o'clock, which was read for the first time.

The trustees outlined the yearly programme of essays. The members proposed some changes in the programme, which, after completion, will be given to the press before the next meeting of the club.

It was proposed that at the next meeting the club should hold its annual chrysanthemum exhibition in the club rooms. Ten dollars in prizes is offered for the best three vases—$5 for the first, $3 for the second and $2 for the third. This is open for all. Any grower who has anything new to offer in this line would do well to send a few blooms for exhibition. The date of the exhibition is Thursday, November 13, at 3 o'clock p. m.

The St. Louis Carnation Co. exhibited a vase of well-grown new carnations, among which were Governor Wolcott, Dorothy, Higinbotham, Dorothy Whitney, Roosevelt, Melba, Enquirer, Apollo, Prosperity, Stella, Alba and Queen Louise. They were very fine and attracted much attention. A vase of the new carnation, Enchantress, was much admired.

Dr. A. S. Halstedt showed a few well-grown blooms of Queen of Edgely roses, also a few American Beauties, illustrating that these roses can be grown successfully in Belleville. Fred Ammann and Otto Koenig were the judges.

After reading the questions from the box the meeting adjourned until Thursday afternoon, November 13, at 3 o'clock.

Retail Trade.

Trade for the past week has been good as far as funeral work is concerned, but rather dull in other branches and does not show any marked improvement on the week previous.

Chrysanthemums are coming in more freely each day, and the prices on roses and carnations have taken a drop. It seems that everybody wants chrysanthemums for his show windows and will hardly look at roses and carnations, except when he has an order for them.

There are plenty of first-class roses in the market just now, such as Brides, Maids, Meteors, Gates, Perles and Wootton, which are all of good quality, but are selling slowly. Chrysanthemums are also beginning to take a drop in prices and are selling cheap in 100 lots. Carnations, too, are feeling the effects of the mums. Plenty of them of fine quality are in the market, white and light pink being the best sellers.

The florists' windows are making a great show of fine cosmos, which are a great glut and many of them are dumped.

Violets and valley had a good call the past week. Should this warm, pleasant weather continue the cut flower market will suffer from the effects of it.

As we will have no show this year there is a plan on foot for a dozen or more florists to make a trip to Chicago and Kansas City during the shows at those places. Mr. Ellis has the trip in charge and anyone wishing to go can make application to him. The trip will be a pleasant one and all those who can should go as a certain number of passengers are required in order to get low rates.

Mrs. Palagie Saucier, a descendant of one of the oldest French families, died last Thursday. She was the mother-in-law of Alexander Waldbart, the florist. The funeral services were held Sunday at Mr. Waldbart's residence, 3542 Lawton avenue. Many beautiful floral offerings were sent.

Table Decorations.

On Monday four florists competed for prizes to be given for the best table decorations, at Simmons Hardware Co.'s retail store, using the company's china and crystal ware.

Ostertag Bros.' table was made up with electrical effect and pink was the prevailing color.

Chas. L. Connon's table was called the "Golden Wedding." Nothing but yellow chrysanthemums were used.

Ellison & Tesson's was made up mostly of orchids and crystal vases were used to good effect.

Mrs. M. M. Ayers used mostly roses and orchids, with electrical effect, which was much admired by the large crowd in attendance.

World's Fair.

Mrs. H. McCall Travis, of Kalamazoo, Mich., is in town to meet the board of lady managers in regards to a floral spectacle during the World's Fair. Mrs. Travis has letters of recommendation from the presidents and officers of the Pan-American, Charleston, Atlanta, Nashville and California Expositions. No expense of any kind to be incurred by the exposition or board of lady managers. The matter will be placed before the board at its meeting, to be held on November 17, at the residence of Miss Helen Gould, in New York. J. J. B.

CINCINNATI.

The Market.

The bright weather has swelled the supply of stock, especially roses, which at the present time are very near a glut. There are more Beauties now than at any time so far this season, but even yet there are but few long-stemmed ones, the majority being below twenty inches in length. Brides and Bridesmaids are still mostly confined to the first and second classes, there being only a few that can be called extras or select.

Liberties and Meteors sell well and are in good supply. The Liberties are much improved in quality, and with the advent of colder weather, better prices will be obtained for them. A great many short-stemmed and medium Golden Gates are coming in, and as they are fine to use in design work, they sell very well.

Of course chrysanthemums take the lead at present and they are doing very well in this market this season. The prices obtained for them are fully equal to those of last year, and more are being handled. Some of poor quality have to be sacrificed in order to move them, but quality counts here as in everything else in the florists' trade. The mid-season varieties are just beginning to be cut. Many of the mums that are being cut at present are scarcely ready, but as there is a demand for them, prices are the same as for fully matured flowers.

There is a demand for violets now, but only a few are coming in and the quality is poor. Good violets would now bring a good price.

There was a chrysanthemum before the Chrysanthemum committee on Saturday, which originated with Harry Altick, of Dayton, O. It is a white sport of Glory of the Pacific, very similar to Polly Rose, but more built up in the center and the foliage is more evenly distributed along the stem. It scored high enough to secure a certificate. It is named "Estelle."

Two new wholesale cut flower houses will be opened for business next Monday morning. One will be conducted by Wm. Murphy, who, owing to the large increase in his business the past season, has been obliged to seek more commodious quarters, and hereafter will be found at 130 East Third street, where he will have better facilities for handling his shipping trade. The other will be under the management of Louis Kysk, who is at present the manager of the cut flower business of J. M. McCullough's Sons. Al. Heckmann, of Covington, Ky., will succeed Mr. Kysk at McCullough's.

A recent visit to Mr. B. P. Critchell's establishment showed some of the finest mums I have seen this season. Although not yet ready to cut, the blooms of the mid-season varieties were very large, and with a few days' time will make A1 blooms. Glory of the Pacific, Robinson, Henderson and O. P. Bassett were all in equally fine condition. In later varieties Murdock and Appleton are showing up fine. Mr. Critchell also grows much small stock for bedding, besides palms, ferns, etc. Mr. Wm. Dailey is the grower, and the fine condition of the stock is a tribute to his ability.

Mr. H. M. Altick, Dayton, O., was a visitor.

NEW YORK.

Among the Retailers.

David Clark's Sons are now fully settled in their new home, 2139 Broadway, and room and facilities for retail work are unequalled. There is room for everything now, including a handsome suite of offices. The appointments are all perfect, the electric effects striking, and the space for inside decoration well employed. The greenhouses further up the avenue will be retained another year. Mr. Marshall Clark is about as well as ever after his severe fight with appendicitis.

Jas. McGarrett, for the last ten years with John N. Hauser, of Madison avenue and Fifty-sixth street, and formerly with Alex. McConnell, Chas. Thorley and Walter Reid, has resigned his position on account of ill health. His son George has been with Mr. McConnell for fourteen years. The decoration of All Souls church was made by this house for the wedding of Miss Maud Furness, the actress, to Alex. Dow, the millionaire, last Wednesday morning.

Hanft Bros., of 615 Madison avenue, have done some very effective decorative work lately. At the Post-Gallatin wedding at Bayport, L. I., a carload of palms and flowers was used. The church was beautiful with white roses. The bride's shower bouquet was made of Kaiserin and lily of the valley; the bridesmaids' bouquets of Testout roses. On the 15th they had the Brooks-Sawyer wedding at South Nyack, the flowers used being Bridesmaid roses and white chrysanthemums, and on November 18 they have an elaborate affair, the wedding of the daughter of A. P. Fitch, ex-Comptroller and president of the American Trust Company. For the Colonel Dupont funeral at Mont Chain, Del., they sent a handsome casket cover of violets and orchids, a cross of white roses and lily of the valley and a 36-inch wreath of valley and orchids.

H. Warrendorff, of 635 Madison avenue, will open his new store in the Ausonia Apartment Hotel on December 1, Seventy-fourth street and Broadway. There will be two palm gardens in this greatest of apartment hostelries, one on the ground floor and one on the sixteenth floor, under his care, and the store is to be he says, "the most elegantly appointed shop in the city."

The "Fernery," on Thirty-third street, west, opposite the Waldorf-Astoria, is owned and managed by two young ladies who have made a wonderful success. They have some of the first families of the city among their patrons. They have added an "afternoon tea" department to their store, which is unique and remunerative, and their prosperity is a demonstration of the possibilities of the "woman in floriculture" that is more than creditable.

The two great weddings during the last few days by Thorley have been the Norton wedding on Staten Island and the Gager-Strong wedding. At the latter over 7,000 American Beauties were used in the decoration.

Scallen's new store at 1259 Broadway is now entirely devoted to the business and the change from the other side of the street seems to have been a wise move. The window decorations here are always striking and novel.

McIntosh, of 1192 Broadway, had the Hageman-Hunting wedding last week at the Church of the Heavenly Rest and the breakfast and reception decorations at the Victoria Hotel. An immense automobile of orchids and valley in his window was very attractive, and at all times his windows are artistic.

Small's electric window effects are again in evidence. Farleyense and purple cosmos made a beautiful window last week. Cibotium and Boston ferns are lavishly used here and autumn leaves and eulalia are utilized in producing charming effects.

Thos. Young, Jr., has his retail stores on Sixth avenue and Fifty-eighth street, and on West Twenty-eighth street in full swing and both elaborately lighted and stocked with the best in the market. Louis Rossow, formerly manager and secretary of the Fleishmann Co., and prior to that bookkeeper for Thorley, is manager of the Fifty-eighth street store, and William Hanft is associated with him.

At George Stumpp's I found everything in grand order for an anticipated season of the usual success, and a fine stock of palms and ferns of recent importation and purchase from the best home markets. The illustration of the banquet given to Prince Henry in your issue of this date indicates the class of work done by Mr. Stumpp and his efficient staff, the original designer being Mr. Frank Schlotzhaver, who has been thirteen years in Mr. Stumpp's service.

The Auctions.

The auction season is in full blast, but the "congregations" are hardly up to those of other years, nor the prices equal to the old time average. Sanders' orchid sale was fairly well attended and good prices were realized.

Elliott has been disposing of a lot of palms and ficuses and other plants, and some rare bargains have been picked up. His sale of Scott's stock in Brooklyn Monday was a sacrifice. Buyers were few and largely from Brooklyn, Mallon, Phillips and Tielman being the principal retailers present. Mr. Scott had some fine Bostons, pandanus, kentias and ferns "on tap," but the sale was characterized by Mr. Elliott as "the worst of the season" in the way of realized values.

Brooklyn Horticultural Society.

Monday night at 502 Fulton street the regular meeting of the Brooklyn Horticultural Society was held, and an attendance of about forty members attested the interest already being taken in the February carnation convention. Mr. C. W. Ward, the president, was in the chair.

The membership now numbers fifty-four, and the subscriptions amount to nearly $1,200. A very fine exhibition of over seventy-five varieties of dahlias was made by H. Beaulieu, of Woodhaven, and a committee, composed of Messrs. Hicks, Crawbuck and Langjahr, reported the exhibit "a most creditable one, especially the seedlings," and suggested a vote of thanks, which was unanimously carried.

Mr. Bunyard, manager of the New York exhibition, presented its claim to the society and received assurance of its practical interest.

Mr. W. H. Barnes, secretary of the Kansas State Horticultural Society, and a veteran of the civil war, on his way home from Washington, was present and gave a very interesting address. He spoke of the forty local county horticultural societies of Kansas, and the great work they were doing in every part of that wonderful state. He was born in Brooklyn and has many prominent relatives in the city. Has lived in Kansas twenty-two years.

The Germania Club was suggested for the convention banquet, with 300 diners as the basis, and no limit as to the number who would be expected and welcome.

Members were appointed by the president for the ways and means, membership, exhibition, entertainment and finance committees, and the monthly meetings provided for.

Much unanimity was evident in the general desire to make the convention a brilliant success, and about every prominent member of the society accepted a place on the committees.

Items.

Ernst Asmus has fully recovered from his hunting experience with the moose, in which his arm and hand were injured. The rumor that the injury came from lifting a plebeian box of bulbs is therefore without foundation.

Today a few of Mr. Asmus' friends will inspect his new and wonderful house of Beauties, 350 by 54 feet, and next week we will try to tell you more about it.

The catalogue title page of the exhibition is a gem and the whole show gives premise of results that will cause it to excel anything of the kind every attempted in this country, Kansas City not excepted. The 30th of this month will see everything in readiness for the opening and next week we can tell you more about it.

B. S. Slinn, Jr., in the Coogan building, is handling 10,000 violets daily already and will soon increase this to an average of 20,000. In addition to this, 5,000 single violets daily, and swainsona as a specialty, of which in its season he probably handles the largest quantity in the market.

J. K. Allen is handling daily a grand stock of Maids and Brides. His store has been brightened up for the anticipated rush, which cannot be long delayed.

Ghormley's store was so crowded with mums on Saturday there was hardly room for customers. Violets are coming in, 20,000 a day. Cowee's gladioli are spoken for already for 1903.

Bradshaw & Hartman report a glut of out door grown mums and carnations, with short smilax abundant, but plant trade is booming and prospects encouraging in their new holly enterprise. The "street" wondered at the procession of strangers here all day Saturday, until the fact appeared that "registration" of the political strata was going on.

Ed. Horan moves this week to his new store at 55 West Twenty-eighth street.

Stumpp & Walter Co. show a grand assortment of all the standard varieties of apples from the nursery of Stephen Hoyt's Sons, of Connecticut, at their Barclay street store this week. This firm is developing an extensive nursery trade, in addition to its other lines. Their bulb shipments have been immense this season.

J. & W. Leach, of Astoria, grow about 30,000 mums and 40,000 lilies yearly, the entire output of their houses being handled by James McManus, of West Thirtieth street. Wesley B. Leach, of the firm, is now with Mr. McManus.

Window boxes of evergreens have become immensely popular here, and they may be seen on every prominent street. The effect is excellent, and the general use of this method of winter decoration of houses is commended to all the large cities.

The "comfortable feeling" among the growers is increasing since the culmination of the coal strike has been announced. Already the prices have fallen to almost respectable figures, and another week will doubtless find the condition of things normal. With oil burners, peat and "many inventions" which must result from the ordeal through which the long suffering florist has just passed, it is doubtful if ever the trade will be caught napping again.

Dunne & Co. have a factory now "up the state," where they manufacture the immense quantities of rustic work for which they are already famous. Mr. Dunne is a designer of great experience and merit. The increase in trade necessitates an added store house in the city, which will soon be occupied.

S. Jacobs & Sons, of 1365 Flushing avenue, Brooklyn, have had a phenomenal sale of greenhouse glass this fall.

Chas. Millang's greenhouse is about completed. It is "built to stay," by the looks of it, and Mr. Millang expects to do a fine wholesale plant business this winter.

Jas. B. Kidd, who has been with Elliott during the past two years, has accepted a position as traveling representative of the Cox Seed Co., of San Francisco.

Papa Zeller is not as well as usual this fall and is obliged to conserve his strength, but manages to visit the "alleys" occasionally and gives a little time to his favorite "budding" every day.

Bowling.

The bowlers have not yet awakened for the season, and only four were on hand on the regular night. The scores follow:

Lang	174	171	160	505
Hansen	149	151	173	473

Seed Trade News.

The outlook for supplies for next season is certainly not very encouraging. Referring to the situation, Messrs. W. Atlee Burpee & Co., Philadelphia, say: "It now looks as if wax beans are going to be very short, while green pods will not be in much better supply. All early sweet corn is very short and there is a perfect famine in cucumber seed. There is certainly not going to be sufficient cucumber seed to see the trade through the season. Onion seed of some varieties is only half a crop. Many varieties of peas are less than half a crop and in some cases the growers will not get back their seed stock. All vine seeds are exceedingly scarce, especially muskmelons. While watermelons are in better supply, there is still quite a scarcity on some varieties. Squash and pumpkins are both going to be very scarce, especially the winter varieties of squashes."

J. J. Bell, of Deposit, N. Y., reports under date of Oct. 18: "Last season was exceptionally good for seed trade. The coming season seems to promise well. Yield of all flower seed here is about an average crop. Pansies produced scarcely no seed till September; since then they are seeding well. Asters are producing a better crop than usual. Verbenas and many others will be short with us this season. Europe has been the main source for flower seed, yet it seems that this industry might be developed in this country, as all common flowers seed well in this and many other localities. Flowers look well throughout the country, and the displays at fairs are much better than usual. Never saw dahlias as good as this season; they seem to enjoy the wet."

Boston.—Mr. W. W. Rawson, who has carried on a seed business in this city for many years, under the firm name of W. W. Rawson & Co., has admitted to partnership his son, Herbert W. Rawson, who has been actively interested in the business for the past five years, and Harry E. Fiske, who has been with the firm fourteen years and has been manager for the past nine years. Mr. Rawson continues the market gardening business at Arlington as before. The flowers, plants, shrubs and hardy perennials are now to be handled in connection with the seed store.

The Alfred J. Brown Seed Co., Grand Rapids, Mich., says that the bad weather during the bean harvest will cut the crop short to a large extent. They believe that in their section one-third, and possibly more, of the acreage was entirely lost. Only early maturing crops were saved. All others were more or less damaged, while in many cases the fields will never be harvested at all. The incessant downpour of rain night and day for nearly two weeks simply rotted the beans in the field. All the growers could do was to wait for better weather, which did not come till it was too late and the crops were ruined.

The seed business conducted by H. L. Holmes at Harrisburg, Pa., has been succeeded by the Holmes Seed Co., incorporated Sept. 19, 1902, under the laws of Pennsylvania, with a capital of $50,000. Officers: George A. Gorgas, president; H. L. Holmes, vice president and general manager; E. E. Beidleman, secretary; E. Z. Gross, treasurer; Chas. S. Boll, R. C. Neal, Sr., and B. F. Myers, directors. The new firm expects to increase its business largely, both wholesale and retail.

St. Paul.—L. L. May & Co. have placed new cleaning machinery in their warehouse, put up additional elevators and erected a two-hundred-bushel bin on the roof of their Como avenue warehouse.

Goodrich, Me.—The Baylis Seed Co. has purchased the Turner farm and will make a number of improvements. They will also build an addition to their already commodious potato house.

Salt Lake City.—Bailey & Sons say the crop of alfalfa is very short here this year, and that wheat is being rapidly shipped to Colorado and Texas.

Mr. Robert Buist, the Philadelphia seedsman, has been ill with typhoid fever at the Marlborough Hotel, Atlantic City, N. J., since Aug. 28, but is now convalescent.

Columbus, Fla.—The Columbus Seed & Implement Company has been incorporated with a capital stock of $10,000. J. T. Davis, Jr., is president.

Santa Clara, Cal.—The Morse Seed Co. has leased 800 acres of the Martin estate near Gilroy to extend their seed production.

There is a heavy and increased demand for raffia, both natural and colored. It is used to make baskets and other fancy articles, and even ladies' hats are made of it. The fad seems to have taken root over the entire country, to judge by the widely separated localities from which the orders come.

CHICAGO.

At the annual meeting of the Florists' Club held Wednesday night officers for the ensuing year were elected as follows: J. D. Thompson, president; J. S. Wilson, vice president; G. W. Wienhoeber, secretary; Alex Henderson, financial secretary; Edgar Sanders, treasurer; F. F. Benthey, George Woodward, J. P. Risch, P. Foley and W. Kreitling, trustees. The treasurer's report showed a balance of $247.50.

The conclusion of the coal strike is certainly something to be thankful for. And the prediction that prices will be down to the old time level within a few weeks ought to be based upon fact.

The chrysanthemum growers are having a few troubles of their own this year. Prices are considerably lower than at same date last year. It has been customary to charge the chrysanthemum with being the cause of low prices for other flowers at this season. Now it is held that the great abundance of other flowers in the market is lessening the call for the mum. But probably the real reason is the unusually warm October weather. The large flower buyers are still playing golf or automobiling. As soon as the coal supply and prices are normal some winter weather would be a big help to trade.

We are fond of the perfume of violets. Seeing some on a wholesaler's counter this week we took a whiff. We didn't want any more. The odor was vile. It was so characteristic we knew at once what had happened. The blooms had been packed in boxes that had contained those moth balls that smell so villainously. It seems incredible that anyone would use such a box for packing violets in but the flowers could hardly have acquired such an odor in any other way. The blooms were worthless, of course.

A meeting of the executive committee of the Horticultural Society was held at the Union League Club last Monday evening to perfect arrangements for the fall exhibition at the Art Institute, Nov. 11 to 15.

Are you going to make a display at the coming exhibition? You ought to be represented, for the credit of the city, if not for your own benefit, and the direct benefit to you is worth consideration.

Mr. C. L. Washburn is now at the city store occasionally though still far from being in his usual health.

Peter Reinberg has a pink sport from Golden Gate. It is a very attractive flower and there should be a place for it as a commercial sort.

The wife of J. H. Biggs, the Rush St. caterer and florist, died last Sunday.

The bowlers have braced up. They won three games from the Veterans last Monday evening. A general meeting of all the bowlers in the trade will be held at McKellar & Winterson's, 45 Wabash avenue, at 8 p. m. this Thursday, Oct. 23.

Edgar Sanders continues to improve and sits up longer each day. He is pleased to receive calls from his friends.

The tone of the market is rather dull. Outdoor stuff, such as cosmos, dahlias and hardy chrysanthemums, very abundant. Good chrysanthemums not yet much in request, but offering in great quantities. Weather warm—much too warm for the season. Many prospective weddings promise a livelier trade.

Business is steadily improving. A good judge estimated that fully one-half more flowers are daily coming into town than were received any day a fortnight ago. Much of the stock is very fine, but unfortunately there are many poor flowers that are useless.

Prices have not advanced. Roses are plentiful and sell pretty well. Some of the Beauties and Edgelys are as fine as in midwinter. Carnations are too plentiful, especially pink. This color is also overdone in chrysanthemums, good yellows and whites being far more popular. Violets are improving. Valley is very fine and sells well. Dahlias are about over. Cosmos are plentiful and popular with all classes of buyers.

Wm. J. Baker is receiving some nice daisies, yellow and white.

Liberties show marked improvement in quality. Chrysanthemums are this week in full supply and can be had in great variety at all the commission houses. PHIL.

THE COAL STRIKE.

At last the great coal miners' strike has been settled and a host of florists will feel more certain as to the future. If coal is now supplied the consumer as rapidly as promised all will be well. The weather has on the whole favored the trade in this emergency and we should be truly thankful.

How much the strike has cost the florists of the country, indirectly as well as directly, will never be known but it must be a considerable sum. Some have already gone to considerable expense to provide apparatus that will make other fuel available and the general disturbance of business has injured all indirectly.

The downward tendency suggested in ours of last Wednesday materialized very decidedly the closing days of the week and continues up to this writing. The market is simply flooded with chrysanthemums and these with the remarkably warm weather have about demoralized the market. The loss involved reached fully 25 per cent from last week's quotations, this being particularly felt in the Bride and Maid section.

Violets again show the effect of the unseasonable weather and have depreciated in quality. Few command the top price of 75 cents per 100. Cosmos is fine and abundant. Dahlias maintain their value and with the other outdoor flowers assist in depressing prices on other stock.

Orchids are plentiful and some of the best retail stores are making them the leading feature in their window decorations. J. A. S.

A full week of bright weather and moderate temperature has brought a heavy cut to the market, and there has also been a lessening of the call from outside points. As a result prices have become "weak in the neck" all through the list. It is likely that many who were ordering from this market of late are now cutting stock themselves.

In Beauties the quality shows material improvement, and though quotations show no change the buyer can get more for his money. Other roses show better quality here and there, but the great bulk of the increase in supply has to go in the class for culls, and a good many are very poor culls at that. Prices show a decline of a dollar a hundred on nearly all grades, and rates are weakest on the lower grades, as usual. On many shipments the dealers are kept busy picking over a thousand roses to get out a hundred firsts, but the quantity is so large there is no trouble getting enough of all grades. The great problem is to move the culls.

In carnations $3.00 is practically the top for the best, though a few good fancy, such as Prosperity, etc., reach $4.00. Really good flowers can be had for $1.50 to $2.00, and by some dealers the latter figure is named as the top of the market. It has got to be a pretty fair flower to bring the cull price, $1.00, and job lot sales are no doubt made at a lower figure. White remains in best demand, but there are enough whites for all now.

Chrysanthemums show further improvement in quality, but prices are weaker. Only the very extra fancy reach $2.50 a dozen, while very fine flowers can be had for $2.00 and really good stock at $1.00 to $1.50. Common stuff sells at as low as $5.00 per 100 and "aster sizes" go by the armful at any old price. The varieties that now cut a figure in the market are Robinson, Bergmann, Kalb, October Sunshine, Whilldin, Monrovia, etc. Willowbrook and Pacific are passing out. Some Ivory are beginning to appear and Morel is expected daily. The chrysanthemum situation is not at all satisfactory to the growers. Prices rule considerably lower than at same time last year.

CHRYSANTHEMUM SOCIETY.

The Chrysanthemum Society of America has appropriated the sum of $150.00 to be used in defraying the expense of transportation of fine specimen plants of chrysanthemums to the exhibition at Chicago, November 11 to 15. By paying the express charges the society will make it comparatively inexpensive for growers of fine plants to compete at the national exhibition even when remote from the city where it is to be held.

A Hail Storm.

On October 16 this city was visited by a very heavy hail storm and considerable greenhouse glass was broken. The heaviest sufferer was Henry W. Rieman, whose loss will be several hundred dollars when the loss on stock is reckoned in. Henry had just finished building a new house and overhauling his old ones and had finished up a hard season's work when the hail came and smashed enough glass to keep his force busy for another couple of weeks.

At E. Huckreide & Sons' place the damage was not so heavy, but it will take several boxes of glass and several days' time to repair it.

Bertermann Floral Co. report about $10 loss in glass broken.

At A. Wiegand & Son's it did more damage, and perhaps $50 will cover the loss.

All the growers in the north end escaped without a single pane being broken, although it looked pretty serious for a while.

The weather has been very favorable ever since the storm to those who suffered and repairs are well under way.

KANSAS CITY, MO.

Prospects for the All-American Flower Show to be held here, as you all know, from Nov. 3 to 8, are fine. Last year we had the arena floor only for exhibition space. This year we have nearly doubled our space by the addition of the roof garden, and still this will not be enough. Director General Taggart suggests a hanging garden, but it can't be done in time, so it will have to be cut out. I am greatly encouraged at the positive assurance that at Kansas City the All-American Flower Show will be what it is intended to make it, and I shall not be surprised if my sanguineness is eclipsed. For instance, regarding the class for ninety-six chrysanthemums in variety, to be shown on our Mossed Banks, an exhibitor of importance wrote me saying that nobody could expect to show even seventy-two varieties, but this morning I have a letter stating that he already has one hundred and forty varieties in sight, so there you are. You all want to see our poster and you all want to hear our music. I'll tell you more next week.

Uncle John.

Colorado Springs, Colo.—Mr. Wm. Henry Evans, of the Farm Greenhouses, and Geo. Wright, of the Broadmoor Floral Co., have combined their interests into one concern, to be known as the Colorado Springs Floral Co. The new firm will open a retail store at 10½ E. Pike's Peak avenue, and are fitting it up in first-class style. There will be a conservatory in the rear. The company has arranged with Mr. J. V. Phillips, of New York, to take charge of the store.

KIND WORDS NEVER DIE.

Bellevue, Pa.

Chas. T. Siebert:—Please book my order for 100 lbs. of Zinc Never Rust Glazing Points. I have used five different kinds in the past 12 years, and none of them gave me satisfaction like yours. They will stay in, are easy to drive, no rights or lefts, will hold the glass in place, and do not rust away like all others I have used. Your Zinc Points are easy to take out when making repairs. I have used about 100 lbs. of your Zinc Points in the last two years, and I am perfectly satisfied with them.

Yours truly, F. BURKI.

Chas. T. Siebert:—In our 25 years' experience with glazing points of all kinds, I can say your zinc points are the best to date.

WASHINGTON.

Mrs. Frederica A. Gude, Sr., died October 15 of heart failure, after a short illness, at the residence of her son, William F. Gude, 3900 New Hampshire avenue, N. W., where the funeral was held, Friday, Oct. 17, and the interment was at Prospect Hill Cemetery.

In respect to her wishes her six sons acted as pallbearers—George A., Henry W., Charles, Adolphus, Alexander and William F. Gude.

Mrs. Gude had been a widow since Jan. 17, 1887, and when her husband died the above six sons acted as pallbearers. She was seventy-five years, two months and twenty-five days old. She leaves six sons and twenty-two grandchildren.

Mrs. Gude was born in Bieblingen, Wurtemberg, Germany, July 20, 1827; came to America in 1852 and was married in Lynchburg, Va., in 1853. She had nine children, seven sons and two daughters; three died in infancy and six sons survive. She had been a resident of this city for only about one year, having lived at Takoma Park, Maryland, for the previous thirty-one years.

BOSTON.

The Market.

The heavy increase in the chrysanthemum department is the only noticeable feature, but high water mark is hardly reached yet. One more week will probably see this point and a longer scale of prices. The remnant of present crops will sell lower, and later crops of larger varieties will extend the list in the other direction. Trade is very good indeed, and there seems to be just about enough material coming in to supply all demands.

"No news is good news" and there is lots of that kind. Bad colds are prevalent and some severe cases are reported. H. M. Robinson, the stocky little fern man, is out after a long siege of sickness and is not quite so stocky. Also M. B. Bunker is up and around after a short lay-up. J. S. Manter.

CHRYSANTHEMUM SOCIETY OF AMERICA.

Following are the reports of the committees judging the seedlings and sports:

Cincinnati, Oct. 18.—Harry M. Altick, Dayton, Ohio, exhibited Estelle, a Japanese reflexed, white variety, which scored 85 2-3 points commercial scale. "It is a white sport of Glory of Pacific, different from Pacific, Polly Rose or White Pacific by being built up in center, one-third deeper and petalage being more irregular than above named. Mr. Altick claims it to be earlier by a week than Pacific grown under same conditions. He began cutting same on Oct. 4, 1902."

Edwin Lonsdale, Secretary.

KANSAS CITY.

With all the vast area of space in Convention Hall it seems from the great number of entries in the different classes that its capacity is going to be taxed to hold them all. Uncle John Thorpe announced today that it was no longer a question of getting the flowers, but rather a question of getting room for them all. Especial attention is being devoted to a pyramid of salvia. This will be twenty-four feet high and capped by a revolving electrical ball. A thousand lineal feet of boxes 10x12 inches is required to make the pyramid, the salvia plants standing about twenty-four inches high. At Director General Taggart's request flowers from the White House greenhouses will be used in the facsimile White House at the show.

Mention of a swindler was made in your St. Louis notes last week. The same swindle was perpetrated here. The man, who is very smooth, would enter a flower store and order a funeral piece, presenting a check for more than the price. In this way Arthur Newell, who is usually hard to beat, was taken in for $10 and John Schneider contributed $4 to the cause. The swindler was caught, however, and his photo will appear next week.

John Schneider says he has bought a ten-acre farm and is going into a summer resort business. He thinks it will pay as well as the florists business, and a fellow don't have to keep such a sharp lookout for those bogus check fellows, you know.

This market is a glut on cheap mums and early in the week plenty of them were sold at $3 per hundred. A few dozen choice Appleton, grown by Vesey, brought $3 per dozen, but they are not far enough advanced to have much quantity.

The closer it gets to show week the more apparent it becomes that chrysanthemums in this locality will not be in on time. While this will not cut much figure as far as the show is concerned, yet as a matter of local pride, we would like to keep a few of those premiums in Kansas City.

This glorious weather is bringing them along and we will have to be content with hoping for the best.

JOHN H. VESEY.

Eucharis Grandiflora

It is a mistake to associate this flower with Eucharis Amazonica. The free-blooming qualities of the grandiflora are so much superior that the other cannot be brought in comparison at all except through its similar beautiful flowers. Eucharis Grandiflora will give five crops of bloom, properly handled, to one of Amazonica. It is one of the most profitable and successful flowers for florists to grow who wish something fine for funeral and wedding work.

A stock of bulbs once secured and let alone will produce from time to time through the season a beautiful show of flowers that can be compared to no other white flower for beauty and fragrance. It is both delicate in texture and fragrance, and its lasting qualities are superior to most of the white flowers of this class. It only needs a warm, shady corner of the house and very little care and the blooms will come in at seasons when white flowers are very scarce.

We still have a supply left and prices are offered the same as in former advertisement, $2.50 for large clumps of 15 to 20 bulbs, which are in bloom at the present time, and $10.00 per 100 for single flowering bulbs. The clumps will bloom again for the holidays with proper handling.

TORONTO.

Trade during the last week has been good, both in the city and country, and wholesale men report the shipping trade good. This speaks well for the prosperous condition of the country, and although many of our local florists were afraid the high price of coal was going to somewhat injure the floral trade, yet thus far it has not been noticed, and reports indicate that the sales are much ahead of this time last year. A number of October weddings has helped the sale of cut flowers, and while there has not been an over rush of design work, yet it has been steady.

Chrysanthemums are now with us in good supply, and we note some very fine stock. The price has dropped considerably since last week and we now see very good stuff for as low as $5 per hundred. Carnations have been very scarce, and this is more noticeable as the demand has been great. Roses, in most cases, were not equal to the demand, although we note one of our departmental stores selling good roses at 25 cents per dozen, which we learn were put in by one of our large rose growers at $1.50 per hundred. We hear considerable comment by our local dealers who have to pay $4 for the same stuff. Sorry that it should be so.

W. Jay & Son have their new refrigerator and show case in place and when the new front is completed they will have one of the most convenient as well as the showiest stores in Toronto. Their position on Spadina avenue is a stand that certainly deserves a good store, and we hope they will realize that the change was a good move.

W. J. Lawrence, North Toronto, has completed his new range of rose houses, and although his stock suffered somewhat from not having the houses completed in time, yet they are commencing to make good growth. W. J. always made a hobby of rose growing, and now as he has what he considers an ideal range of houses, we expect to hear from him later.

Toronto Floral Co.'s rose houses, which have been considerably off crop this last two weeks, are now showing some good blooms.

SPRINGFIELD, MASS.

Mr. Chas. Kerrigan has resigned the position of salesman for the Murphy Co. and will accept a similar position in Boston.

F. R. Pierson Co.'s salesman was a visitor in town last week. He is booking orders for Nephrolepis Piersoni.

Trade in general is continually increasing. Mums are beginning to make their appearance. The growers in this vicinity promise an unusually large crop this season.

Business the past week was somewhat improved. Some very fine white chrysanthemums are coming in and find a ready sale, and American Beauties, good ones they are, too, are to be seen in the Fourth avenue store windows. Carnations are improving in quality and the supply is ample. Dahlias and cosmos are still in the market.

Mr. Jacob Schulz has the finest carnations to be seen around here.

Joseph Coenen & Co.'s place is in fine shape. They are cutting some very fine Kaiserin roses, which are hard to beat.

E. G. Reimers has added to his plant three more houses, which are planted to carnations.

T. B. Rudy is remodeling his dwelling house and will occupy it by the first of November.

Nanz & Neuner made a very handsome display of American Beauties at their store on Fourth avenue.

F. C. Haupt has had several very large decorations, which called for the use of immense quantities of Beauties and carnations.

Henry Fuchs is troubled by grub worms in his rose house, having lost a considerable number of roses through them.

Joseph Coenen, William Mann and Henry Lichtefeld went up to Cincinnati and took in Mr. R. Witterstaetter's place, finding it in tiptop order. His chrysanthemums are models in growth, having fine, strong stems and good foliage. His new carnation, Albatross, is in fine shape. It is a white, is a fine grower and a good bloomer, and will be heard from later. Through the courtesy of Mr. Witterstaetter we were driven out to Mr. William Murphy's place to see his new white carnation called Murphy's White. It was looking fine and just loaded down with buds. It is a splendid bloomer and will find a ready sale. Hy. Lichtefeld.

Quakertown, Pa.—E. I. Rawlings added several new houses this summer and has installed a new boiler.

Lansing, Mich.—At the Industrial Schools there were two 100 ft. beds of S. A. Nutt geraniums this summer that were a gorgeous sight. A. E. Bambrick is the florist in charge.

Utica, N. Y.—Frank Baker has had a big run on ferns for dishes. He says the demand has been better than ever.

Roses.

The accompanying picture gives a side view of a bunch of three dozen Bridesmaid and La France roses made up with a few sprays of Asparagus plumosus, a bunch that can be readily sold for $5.00.

The greater number of the flowers, as will be seen, are half open, some two-thirds open and the others fully blown. The larger, or open flowers fill in well, making the bunch appear larger and much more effective than would be the case were all the flowers only half open.

Wire about one-half of the flowers (or the weaker stemmed ones) with say No. 22 wire, so as to be able to place them where you want them. Arrange loosely and carelessly, some flowers higher than others. Use some green for a foundation and it will be quite easy to make up a handsome bunch of roses with the number mentioned.

We do not advise the use of different kinds of pink roses in the same bunch. In making up the bunch illustrated we happened not to have enough of the size wanted in one variety. When the roses are all of one kind they make a much more desirable and salable bunch. But there are many colors and varieties that blend well together, such as Bride and Bridesmaid, any pink and white, Kaiserin and President Carnot, Bridesmaids or Chatenay and Golden Gate, the latter making a most beautiful combination.

Of course bunches of red or other bright colored roses are often used, especially American Beauties, which we shall illustrate at a future time.

Bunches of roses are often tied with ribbon, as seen in the second illustration, which gives a full front view of a bunch arranged in much the same style as the first one but containing twice the number of roses, and usually sold at $10.00. It is just as easy to make as the smaller one, and can be made as large and expensive as desired by the addition of more material.

We have seen all colors of ribbons used but do not consider it good taste to use loud or flashy colors on funeral bunches. White, lavender and purple are popular and appropriate. A most pleasing combination is the Golden Gate rose tied with a pea green ribbon, and a very pale pink ribbon with white or light pink roses is not so bad, but we think it out of place to tie Bridesmaids with ribbon to match the flowers, red roses with red ribbon, and so on, which we have very often seen used. High colored flowers are used a great deal and are no doubt in good taste, but we do not believe in the use of bright colored ribbons.

Next week we will present pictures of bunches containing the same roses but arranged in a different way from those shown this week. L. P. Walz.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS.

Shading the Blooms.

It is oftentimes necessary, or at least we find it so, to shade some of the more delicate varieties to prevent the flowers from getting burned by the sun. This is always the case with the pink and red varieties, and quite frequently the whites and yellows, when they are close to the glass, show signs of distress. Some growers do not seem to like to shade their mum houses at flowering time, no matter how many flowers they lose. Why this is I do not understand, for a spatter of lime over the glass with a syringe takes no time, and the cost of removing it is much more than made up by the flowers that will be saved.

Varieties like Morel or G. W. Childs are certain to suffer more or less if not protected and we always have an idea that flowers come slower and consequently firmer and better when shaded. The sun in October is often very warm, and it rushes the flowers along quicker than is good for them. This year it seems to me many varieties are in ahead of time. All our varieties so far are from one to two weeks earlier than usual, and I hear of Eaton being ready to cut on October 18th. Last year it was the second week in November before Eaton was in really good shape. This earliness means to all who exhibit their flowers considerable trouble in holding back many varieties to keep them in good condition for the shows. Here again a light shade on the house is valuable because a flower when shaded is not nearly as liable to open up in the center and show its eye.

Keeping Cut Flowers.

Flowers can be stored away and kept in good condition for from one to three weeks according to variety, if the right conditions are available. A cellar that is naturally cool and moist is the ideal place for this storing away. Cut your flowers with good long stems and stand them upright in a barrel. If the barrel is an ordinary fifty gallon size, fill it half full of water, and the upper half will keep the stems upright, which is important, as the water must have a direct upward course to the flower through the stem. Keep the foliage damped, but unless the cellar is very dry do not wet the flowers at all, or many of the petals will get spotted by the water. Look the flowers over carefully every day for any indication of decay, and about twice a week cut off some of the old stems and change the water.

Flowers kept in this manner will often outlast the flowers not so treated when set up on exhibition, because the stem is full of water. Any flower that is to be exhibited should have twenty-four hours in water beforehand to prepare it for its journey, and if the distance to the exhibition is long, thirty-six hours' immersion is not too much. If the foliage is limp and the petals hang loosely it is a sign that the stem has not taken up water, and such flowers you had better leave home because they will droop hopelessly in the dry air of an exhibition hall. It is half the battle in exhibiting to set up your flowers in a fresh, crisp condition, and many a man whose flowers looked fine on the plants has been disgusted when he viewed his stock after it had been set up for an hour or two.

Exhibition.

By the time these notes are in print the ball will be opened with the New York exhibition, and many of us will be going round with a hat several sizes too small for us, and a broad expansive smile, or else be sneaking back to the place whence we came, kicking ourselves and vowing vengeance on the judges and mankind generally. Poor judges, what a thankless lot is theirs, even though it may occasionally run to "Suite A in the Waldorf." When we don't win we always have an idea that the judges didn't know anything or had a personal grudge against us, or something of that kind. What a fertile field a genius like Dickens would have in an exhibition hall for studying the tragedy and comedy of life, and yet when it's all over we shall survive the shock, and coal will continue to be scarce and high all winter. Whatever other purpose they may serve exhibitions are the best thing in the world for the growers, since they are the means of making a man continually progress onward and upward or get lost in the shuffle.

The Market

is not so far favorable to the mum and prices are not so good as last year. Asters were fine and they kept down the price for the earliest flowers, and dahlias and many other things have kept coming in long after they should, according to precedent, have given up the ghost. Talk about "winter lingering in the lap of spring." It isn't a circumstance to the cactus dahlia lingering in the lap of the midseason mum, and if the season is going to change like this we shall have to grow Golden Wedding for an early variety and fall back on Merry Christmas and such varieties for midseason.

The weather has been beautiful and many of the best flower buyers are still in the country enjoying the landscape. When November comes in with its frosty nights and darker days we may reasonably expect that the market will improve.

MISCELLANEOUS SEASONABLE HINTS.

Alternantheras.

I have had a few questions sent to me of late, which I will answer under this head. Alternantheras are easily kept over winter, except the high colored and most valuable species, paronychioides major. Whether you have rooted them in flats in August or lifted some old plants and put them in flats, they should have a warm corner. The full light is not so essential if they are warm and dry. You don't expect nor want them to grow until you divide them next April (just to exist) so very little water will do. If not below 60 degrees, and if dry, they will come out all right, but if kept wet, even at that warm temperature, many will rot off. Water once in two weeks will be ample, unless very near the heat of the pipes.

Insects.

The greenfly is as troublesome on our Bermuda and Japan lilies as on any plants we grow, and they do their work in the crown of leaves where the smoke can hardly reach them. When you see aphis on a fully developed leaf it is proof that you have been very negligent in your smoking or other means of killing or keeping down the fly, but the big fellows you see creeping around are not what is ruining the plants. It is the punctures they are making on the young leaves and buds that will later develop only into arrested, crippled, abortive growth. For instance, you can walk through your benches of Marie Louise violets, look at the large leaves, and perhaps not discover any of those miserable, greasy, dark green or black flies; yet the young leaves are small, curled up and blistered in appearance, and the flowers are small and pale in color. You are afraid you have the fly on them, but the naked eye does not reveal the number there are or the harm they are doing. Just get a lens of moderate magnifying power and pull up a plant and take a good look into the heart of the plant where the young leaves and buds are struggling for an existence. If you pull up such a plant as I did a few years ago this month, you will see thirty or forty horny spiked brutes that will make your epidermis itch and that will remind you of Barnum's troupe of trained hyenas. You will wonder no longer at anything, except that you have leaves and buds at all.

A hyena is much larger than a green or black aphis, and the latter is much larger than the various kinds of bacillus, millions of which a sick man is often the host. All things are great or small only comparatively. And as the parson tried to illustrate it, but finished rather humorously, in his Idea of the Creation, he said: "When God made the mountain He also made a grain of sand; when He made the mighty Niagara He likewise made the dewdrop, and when He made me He made a daisy." Those of the congregation who were not asleep tittered.

Coming back from pulpit to plant, the mischief done by the aphis is not always seen until weeks after. About the time the lilies are forming their flower buds before they are visible, is when they are crippled. A mixture of the Roseleaf Extract diluted, one part of extract to one hundred of water, or one part of nicotine to four hundred of water, lightly sprayed in the crown of leaves will keep the aphis away.

Gladioli.

It seems these beautiful flowers have taken a leading part in the decorations of floral stores for many weeks during August, September and October, and they have been useful and largely used for many occasions. The hotels of the country have used millions. If your available ground is limited, it is almost as cheap to get your supply of cut spikes from Mr. Cowee, of Berlin, or some other of the men who grow fifty acres, but when you have the room there is little expense in their cultivation and your stock should be constantly on the increase.

The corm, usually called a bulb, is, I presume, all the better for remaining in the ground until the top is pretty well matured, and that time is here now and with early crops long past. Cut the tops off six inches above the bulb when lifting. A day's sunshine on the bulbs is good for them, but run no risk by leaving them out over night, as one of my dutiful sons did once, and three or four degrees of frost come down and next morning my few thousand bulbs were of the same value as the same quantity of rotten potatoes. I have seen gladiolus bulbs that were missed at lifting in the fall come up in the spring when I thought they must have been frozen. However that may be, they won't endure any frost when exposed. Don't put them in a warm, dry basement, or in a shed where the furnaces are. Beneath a bench in a cool house will do very well and lay them out thinly in shallow boxes or flats.

Chrysanthemums.

Chrysanthemums are glorious just before you cut them out. What a wreck the bench is when you have cut the long stems. It's no cut and come again crop, as it is with our roses, carnations and violets. You are, however, usually glad of the room they give you. Some very good advice has been often given about varieties. It is fascinating to try the new ones, and you won't keep up with the procession unless you do try the pick of the later varieties, but for your main crop a dozen varieties is a great plenty to supply your own retail trade; and if a grower, six varieties are all you want, so throw away entirely all the stock you have of any that has not turned out A1 with you, and lift sufficient stools of those you are going to grow.

If some new one has pleased you very much and you want to greatly increase your stock, you can put in some cuttings just as soon as you can get them. When rooted plant them out in a bench nine or ten inches apart and they will give you the best of cuttings from New Years on to June. Standard sorts of which you have an abundance should be lifted and placed in shallow boxes in four or five inches of soil and kept in a cool but light house, and don't encourage them to grow or make cuttings until next March. The chrysanthemum can be called an herbaceous shrub, and after flowering takes a rest during the winter months, and although most accommodating in their nature to varied treatment, they are all the better for a good rest after flowering. By cool I mean that 40 degrees in the cold winter months is high enough. I have seen them many times put down on the edge of a path in a house that was 55 degrees at night. Then there is only a premature, spindling, weak growth, and that is a poor way to start and expect a vigorous plant.

Hybrid Roses.

The hybrid perpetual roses are about to arrive from Europe. If carefully heeled in during winter in cold frame and not allowed to get too dry at the roots, or too hard a freeze, and they are correctly named, they do very well for your spring planting if you do that sort of business. I would sooner receive them now and keep them over winter than import them in the spring unless I was going to have the care of them after being planted out. There is no occasion to import these roses for forcing for Easter sales. Our American nurserymen can supply you with better plants, budded lower and fresh from the ground. If they cost you a few cents more each plant, you will make it up and more in the quality of the plant when forced. Don't be in a hurry about getting them. The wood should be thoroughly ripe. The middle to end of the month is time enough to get them. Pot them firmly. A 5 or 6-inch pot is what a good plant will need. Don't prune them heavily when you pot them; if not at all it is just as well. The pruning can be done when you bring them in after New Years. Plunge the pots in a deep cold frame and don't let the soil get dry. Let them freeze as little as possible. Ten degrees might not hurt them unless they were dry, but they are better without any hard frost, and if we get mild weather after they are in the frame, give all the air you can, or remove the sash.

ROSES.

Seasonable Hints.

Those who desire a few benches of Kaiserins for summer blooming should now proceed with their propagation. At this season there is an abundance of retarded flower stems which make ideal propagating wood. In selecting wood nothing but the very best should be taken, avoiding all thin, weak wood, examining every plant carefully to see that it is in good health before taking wood from it, careless selection of propagating wood being responsible for the perpetuation of many of the diseases and infirmities which afterward affect the plant. Cuttings of from one to three eyes succeed equally well. It is the care and attention bestowed on them in the cutting bench and after they are rooted which make the stock good or poor.

Clear river or pit sand is a good medium for the cutting bench. This should be about five inches deep and filled flush, then watered and pounded firm with a brick. The cuttings should be placed wider apart than is necessary for spring propagation, as they are more liable at this season to retain the moisture longer among the leaves.

To insure safe and healthy root-formation the temperature of the sand should be kept at 62 degrees, with a house temperature of 52 or 54 degrees, giving sufficient ventilation to keep the air sweet. Care must be taken never to let them suffer for want of water, nor yet to keep them soaked.

As soon as the roots have attained half an inch in length they ought to be potted as nothing can be more weakening to a rose cutting than to allow it to make roots and wood in the sand. Soil left over at planting time and passed through a half-inch screen is a good soil to use for a first potting; it ought to be in a nice mellow condition.

Two-inch standard pots are large enough to commence with. Pot firmly, taking care to get the roots no deeper than about one-third the depth of the pot, water as soon after potting as possible, going over them until all the soil in the pot is moistened, but not so as to make it muddy, a condition which should always be avoided.

Select a nice airy position for the young stock, in a house with a temperature of 56 or 58 degrees nights and shade for the first three or four days if the weather is bright, removing the shade as early in the afternoon as can be done with safety. Repot as soon as needed, as the fewer checks the young plants receive the quicker will they start when benched. By February they will be in good condition for planting.

The soil to be used at that time should be cared for now and stored where it will be secure from rain and snow, the condition of the soil at planting time, especially at that season, having a good deal to do with the success of the young stock.

CARNATION NOTES—EAST.

Propagating Bench.

It is none too early to get your cutting bench in readiness. The most satisfactory one we have tried is constructed of brick, bottom and sides, supported by two 3-inch pieces of cypress running crossways of the bench, 2-inch side up, at such distance apart that each end of every brick bears an inch on crosspiece. The bricks are laid flat and of course end to end. The width of bench can be made any number of bricks wide you may choose. For the sides use brick laid edgewise, cementing at ends and to bottom with Portland cement.

Such a bench has many points in its favor. It cannot possibly become soggy as the drainage is perfect. Brick being an excellent absorbent of heat and giving it off slowly, the necessary gentle bottom heat can be kept more uniform than with boards. Slate makes a durable bottom but is more expensive, easily broken in cleaning out the bench, and not being porous does not give the perfect drainage as does brick.

Whitewash the brick after laying, preparing the wash as recommended for painting on heating pipes (see issue of Oct. 2) except it should be thinned somewhat to spread easily. Put on a liberal coat and you will have accomplished much toward the prevention of fungous diseases. Here, too, is where brick is preferable to slate, being capable of absorbing the sulphur in solution formed by the action of the hot lime. Box in the space under the bench providing means of ventilation to regulate the degree of bottom heat desired.

I would not put the sand in for some time, but leave it out where it will keep sweet, getting it in as late as possible consistent with the weather and time needed. Be sure that it contains no impurities such as vegetable or animal matter, soil, bits of wood or paper; in fact have it absolutely pure. So much depends on the starting point in life I am inclined to think the disciples of soil sterilization could put their energy to better use in the direction of eliminating disease from the sand of the cutting bench and let natural law take care of the soil.

Behavior of New Varieties.

Having had several inquiries regarding new introductions it may be well to give my experience so far with the limited number under my care.

Cressbrook is evidently not a variety to finish well early in the season the blooms having a startled look, but with regular firing I am glad to say they have improved greatly. The plants are full of buds that will be in time for Thanksgiving.

Nelson is all that is claimed for it, coming with long stems bearing a finely formed flower of brilliant color. This variety has been in bloom for a month.

Floriana (pink) is almost an exact counterpart of Marquis, but with me blooms earlier, the petals open more and more cuttings are found on the flower stem.

Mrs. Potter Palmer acts very much like a late bloomer.

Murphy's White (on trial) proves to be an early bloomer, giving a very long stiff stem. It is a very rapid grower and gives a good commercial bloom.

It is too early, however, to judge any variety as to its full merit, but I believe it is well to exchange experiences all through the season, also that it should be a condition in the sale of cuttings or plants of every new introduction, that the originator furnish full information as to culture in the field and under glass. I notice this is being done to some extent already.

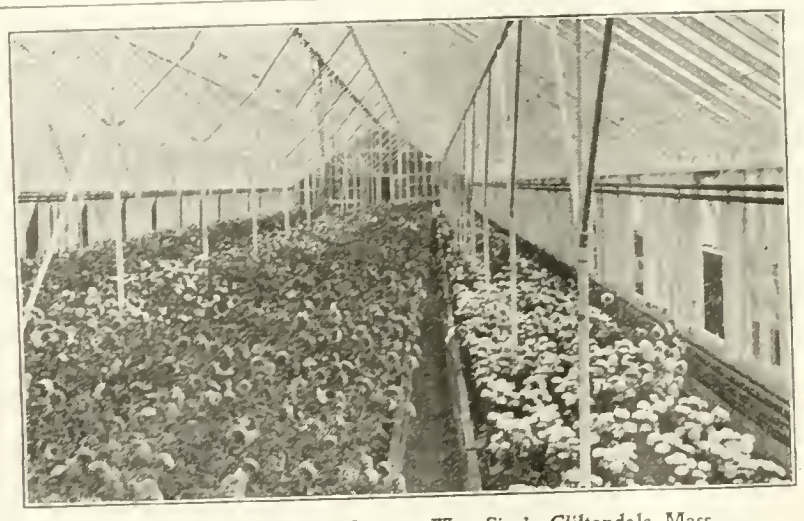
NOVEL CONSTRUCTION.

You remember the trip we made out to William Sims', Cliftondale, Mass., ten months ago, just as he got his full quota of violets pulling? Ten months have simply revolutionized his business. Since then he has extended each of three 200-foot houses to 300 feet, and built a large, cheap house to take the place of his former system of cold frames for spring violet picking, letting it freeze up all winter. He is now picking 4,000 to 5,000 violets per day out of doors.

But the greatest change in his plant consists of a magnificent new house, 200 x30, of such peculiar construction that a cut is inserted to show the strong brace work, which is so arranged as to support the ridge and purlins every four feet and immensely strengthen the building against any end shake in a heavy wind. This latter benefit is also provided for by heavy, long braces running from the ground to the ridge, bracing in four places in both directions. The great height of the house is also a feature. The side walls are of glass and are seven feet high. Being mostly of iron, and the little woodwork being very light, makes its interior seem almost like open daylight. The picture was taken while the house contained a fine crop of asters.



Novel Construction of a House at Wm. Sim's, Cliftondale, Mass.

Most of his glass is now occupied by the most magnificent growth of chrysanthemums I ever saw. The different varieties run from four to nearly eight feet high, straight, extra strong, and having the richest growth of heavy, leathery leaves almost down to the ground. He is cutting them at the rate of 125 dozen per day, and must continue that pace for some time yet, as he had 75,000 plants to begin with. The quality of the blossoms is such that they are marketed in a few minutes each morning, really, and Mr. Sims wastes no time in Boston.

He plans to get this huge crop out of the way by Thanksgiving, after which his whole attention will be directed to his single violets, of which he marketed 950,000 last year, and will surely beat it fifty per cent this season.

J. S. Manter.

CARNATION TROUBLES.

Some of my carnations are wilting and dying. On investigation when I pull them up, I find a number of little white mites of some kind that seem to be sucking the life out of the plant. Now, what are they, what is the cause and what is the remedy? J. W. F.

You ought not to find it very difficult to get rid of the mites. Take a half bushel of good fresh tobacco stems and soak them in a barrel of water, about 50 gallons, and let them soak over night, then use one part of this juice to three parts clear water and wet the beds with it whenever they are affected. Give a dose about each third day or twice in a week for two weeks and I think you will be rid of the mites and no harm will be done your carnations. Tobacco is not only a good insecticide but it is also a good plant food and unless it is used too strong it will do your plants good.

This calls to mind an incident that was related not long ago by one who claims it to be true, of a grower who thought he would kill two birds with one stone. Having been told that tobacco was a good fertilizer, he conceived the idea that if he could inoculate a little nicotine into the tissues of the plant by means of root absorption he could not only feed the plants but he could also destroy every greenfly that dared to thrust its sucking apparatus into the leaves of his plants. So he spread about a good inch of fresh tobacco stems on the bottom of the bench before filling in the soil for planting and then filled up the bench with good soil. Greenfly did not bother that bench of carnations because within a short time there were no carnation plants for them to bother and Mr. Grower had learned another lesson in cause and effect. We believe in experimenting, in fact if you want to learn and become efficient in your work you must experiment some, but use judgment in your experimenting. You don't have to look down the barrel of a gun to see if it is loaded.

CARNATION NOTES—WEST.

The New Varieties.

By this time you are beginning to watch the new varieties you bought last spring or in the fall pretty close to see if they come up to the older varieties in quality and productiveness. Of course it will depend largely upon the time you plant your carnations in the houses whether you can expect a good crop of blooms by this time or not. It would not be fair to expect a good crop of blooms at this time from plants that were housed in September, but those that were planted in before August 20

Earliness has become a very essential quality of late, especially in white and pink sorts, which can be used to fill up the gap between the last of outdoor flowers and the beginning of the mum season. For red the demand is not so great as it is later in the winter when the social season is at its height. A variety does not necessarily have to be extremely early, however, to be profitable. A variety that will produce a good crop of fine blooms by November 1 stands a good chance of heading the list when the dollars and cents are counted, and you can more often depend on such a variety keeping up a high standard all winter, which is something that many extra early varieties lack.

Then again you must not be too harsh in criticising a new variety because its failure is more than likely not due to faults of its own, but to circumstances. Very few varieties are put on the market without having been exhibited in fine shape, which is the best proof a disseminator can give to support the claims he makes for his pet and if you will keep your wits about you when looking at a vase of fine blooms you will not very often get lost. If you bought a lot of cuttings of a new variety because you saw it in fine shape last February or later and it does not happen to produce a fine crop of blooms in October, don't swear at the variety and the man that raised it, but wait until next February and then if the fine blooms are not forthcoming it is time to swear.

If you want to buy an early variety you should look for it early. Visit some of the numerous mum shows and if you see a variety staged in fine shape you can usually depend on it being fairly early and to see whether it holds up well all winter you should watch the reports of the Florists' Club meetings and the American Carnation Society convention in February. Of course we all know that much depends on the way a variety is handled whether it will come in early or late, but nevertheless the fact remains that some varieties naturally bloom early while others naturally come into bloom later. So it happens that one year's trial is often not enough to prove a variety's worth.

If a variety is healthy and produces good blooms later and seems to lack only earliness you should propagate it early and house it early and probably it will prove a good thing for you. Some varieties must be started early in order to get fair sized plants, while others seem to do best when medium sized plants are housed, and so on down the list you must study each variety and try to master its peculiarities before you can hope to grow each successfully.

Next week we will go through our list of varieties and note which are doing well and which have to "get better," etc.

THE LENOX FLOWER SHOW.

When the writer received a cordial invitation to visit the second annual exhibition of the Lenox Horticultural Society he decided the occasion was opportune for visiting this far-famed horticultural center, affording the chance of seeing the magnificent estates in the Berkshire Hills, and the products of the many good gardeners located there.

The exhibition was held in the new town hall on Thursday and Friday, October 23 and 24, and in spite of the early date I have no hesitation in asserting the general excellence and all around superior quality of this exhibition will be surpassed by none. In substantiation of this statement I may remark that the schedule provided eighty-three classes. There were entries in eighty-one and so keen was the competition in almost every instance that the judges' labor was particularly arduous, they requiring exactly seven hours to complete the awards.

There were thirty-four classes devoted to chrysanthemums; seven of these to plants and the balance to cut flowers and these last were a revelation indeed, all being characterized by full development and perfect finish.

For a group of chrysanthemums covering a circle ten feet in diameter the first award went to Mr. A. J. Loveless, gardener to J. Sloane, for a bold arrangement of finely flowered plants. G. Philcox, gardener to W. D. Sloane, was second with an effective but very stiff arrangement, and A. H. Wingett, gardener to Charles Lanier, was third with a truly admirable group. The best arranged gronp in the show was unfortunately disqualified for exceeding the allotted space. It was shown by E. Jenkins, gardener to Girard Foster. In addition to large flowered varieties, the pretty single Mizpah and a bronzy yellow single variety named Zeroff used for a border around the base of the group made this exhibit decidedly the most attractive. Still another fine group, but not in competition, was shown by J. Dallas, gardener to G. H. Morgan.

For three specimen chrysanthemum plants, E. Jenkins was first, the varieties being Mrs. H. Robinson, H. L. Sunderbruch and Mrs. Coombes, the last named a magnificent plant seven feet in diameter and carrying 300 flowers. J. Dallas was second and E. Edwards third.

For a single specimen plant, E. Edwards, J. Dallas and E. Jenkins were the winners in the order named.

For twelve plants in 6-inch pots, A. J. Loveless was first and E. Jenkins second, while for six plants in 6-inch pots E. Jenkins was first and A. J. Loveless second.

In the cut flowers the competition was extraordinarily keen. For twelve blooms in twelve varieties E. Jenkins was finally adjudged first and A. J. Loveless second, but the margin of difference, the judges said, was about 1 point. As all the flowers were perfect it may be of interest to give the names of the varieties shown by these two exhibitors in this class: Mrs. H. Robinson, Mrs. O. P. Bassett, Timothy Eaton, Lady Hanham, Rustique, Mrs. F. A. Constable, Lady Anglesea, Peter Kay, T. Carrington, Col. D. Appleton, Mrs. G. Mileham, H. J. Jones, Merza, Mme. Georges Bruant, Mrs. W. Mease, Mme. Carnot and Nellie Pockett. Mr. E. Lundberg was third with an admirable twelve.

The class for six in six varieties was also well contested, E. Jenkins winning with grand blooms of Robinson, Bassett, Morel, Mutual Friend, H. J. Jones and Peter Kay. E. Edwards, gardener to J. E. Parsons, was a close second, showing Eaton, Bassett, Jones, Carnot, Golden Gate and Mrs. Barclay.

For the best single bloom the first award went to E. Jenkins, who showed a grand flower of Appleton, and A. J. Loveless was second with Carnot.

A. J. Loveless was first and E. Jenkins second for ten blooms of any yellow variety. Both showed Peter Kay and both lots were exceptionally fine. For ten of of any white E. Jenkins won with a grand lot of Robinson, R. A. Schmidt being second with a superb vase of Nellie Pockett, and E. Limberg third with Mutual Friend of great merit.

For ten red E. Jenkins had the finest ten blooms of H. J. Jones the writer has ever seen, the flowers of great depth and substance and almost uniformly crimson, the long drooping petals showing none of the yellow reverse. The ten pink which won first for E. Jenkins in that class was another most remarkable lot. The variety was Mrs. Coombes, and in addition to large size and perfect finish the deep pink color of every flower was many shades deeper than I have yet seen in this most noteworthy new English variety. E. Edwards was second with the same kind and a grand lot but they looked pale by comparison with the first winners. The class for ten of any other color brought out a grand trio of vases and presented a judging problem ultimately solved by giving E. Jenkins first for Rustique, A. J. Loveless second for Mme. Georges Bruant and E. Limberg third for Golden Gate.

In the classes for five blooms E. Jenkins was first for five yellows and five red and five any color, and J. Dallas first for five white and five pink. For six Viviand-Morel the honors went to E. Jenkins and A. J. Loveless and for six Glory of the Pacific to E. Edwards, E. Jenkins and E. Limberg. First for six Bonnaffon went to E. Jenkins, who staged some of the best finished flowers seen in many years. He also won first for six Appleton, six A. J. Balfour, six Constable, six Robinson, and A. J. Loveless won the premier award on six Carnot, six Jones, six Carrington and six Lady Hanham.

From the foregoing it will be seen the chrysanthemum portion of the schedule was varied and comprehensive, practically all the good available varieties being provided for and shown so there was not the preponderance of one or two giants as in many shows last year.

Orchids were a feature of the show and occupied one entire side of the hall, in fact outside of last year's show in Madison Square Garden no such display has ever been seen. They well demonstrated a healthy spirit of friendly rivalry among the Lenox people for here were two displays, each covering fifty square feet, and the flowers alone in each representing a commercial value of over $200, in competition for a prize absurdly small in cash value, but the honor of winning counts for something considerable in the Lenox community and long may this admirable spirit prevail.

The first prize went to G. Phileox, but for the artistic merit of arrangement which won for this exhibit the coveted award credit must be given to F. Heeremans, as in originality of conception and clever execution the arrangement of this display was equal to the best work done by professional decorators in our large cities. To attempt a description is futile, but the display was a unique and striking feature of the show. The second award went to A. J. Loveless for a grand display in point of variety and in quantity and quality of bloom. For twelve plants of Cattleya labiata G. Philcox was first and A. J. Loveless second, and these two exhibits made quite a display as in both cases the twelve plants were carrying well over 100 flowers. A. J. Loveless was first for twelve cypripediums and H. P. Wookey and G. Philcox received the awards in the order named for twelve Oncidium varicosum, both staging magnificent plants, carrying enormous sprays of flowers.

Roses and carnations were well and largely shown. There were fourteen classes for roses, the principal prize winners being G. Philcox, first, for twelve Beauties; E. Jenkins first for twenty-five Bridesmaid and twenty-five Kaiserin, whilst A. J. Loveless secured first for twenty-five Brides and twenty-five Morgans. He was also first for twelve Brides, twelve Morgans, twelve Liberties, twelve Balduins and for a vase of fifty blooms in variety. For twelve Carnot and twelve Kaiserin E. Jenkins secured first.

Carnations of excellent quality were shown in twenty-five and twelve of the different colors, the winners of premier awards being Messrs. Loveless, Jenkins, Wingett, Dallas, Carlquist and Schmidt.

In violets, J. Dallas was first for 100 Marie Louise, E. Jenkins for 100 Campbell and H. P. Wookey for 100 single violets, the competition in all these classes being close and spirited.

In plants E. Jenkins was awarded first for a stove plant, showing a remarkable specimen of dieffenbachia, 8 feet 6 inches high and 10 feet through. For six ferns A. Wingett was first, showing grand pieces of Nephrolepis Wittboldii, exaltata, davallioides furcans and Washingtonianum and two large adiantums. He was also first for twelve flowering plants, among which was a beautiful pot of pink cosmos, well flowered Lilium speciosum and tuberous begonias carrying immense flowers five inches across.

Three great collections of vegetables were staged, the first award going to A. Wingett for a superb lot. In other individual vegetable classes and for fruits also the chief prize takers were Messrs. Wingett, Carlquist, Elias, Loveless and Jenkins.

It was with some anxious forebodings as to the probable result that the active members of the Lenox Society undertook putting up an exhibition in their new Town Hall but they could have filled a hall twice the size just as easily.

The judges were W. Anderson, South Lancaster, Mass.; W. Duckham and A. Herrington, both of Madison, N. J.

I noticed that the wealthy residents of the Lenox district gave their support to the show in attending freely and manifesting a keen interest in the awards, and moreover in spite of unpleasant weather, especially in the afternoon and evening of the second day, the gate receipts show a satisfactory increase over last year. CHRYSANTHEMUM SOCIETY OF AMERICA.

Following are the reports of the committees judging seedlings and sports:

New York, Oct. 25.—The E. G. Hill Co., Richmond, Ind., exhibited Mlle. Marie Liger (imported French variety), light pink Japanese, incurved, scoring 93 points commercial scale. John N. May, Summit, N. J., had on exhibition No. 15 M., pink, incurved Japanese on terminal bud, which scored 74 points commercial scale. No. 11 H., bright clear yellow, Japanese, incurved, scored 95 points commercial scale; this was also exhibited by John N. May.

Philadelphia, Oct. 18.—Wm. Paul Binder, Rider, Md., exhibited No. 14, white, incurved, Japanese, which scored 84 points commercial scale. Oct. 25.—Ernst Schreiber, gardener to Wm. L. Elkins, Esq., Ashbourne, Pa., exhibited Miss Stella T. Elkins, dark red, reflexed, Japanese, scoring 85 points commercial scale, 86 points exhibition scale. Mlle. Marie Liger, exhibited by the E. G. Hill Co., scored 90 points commercial and exhibition scales. No. 15 M., exhibited by John N. May, scored 86 points commercial scale. No. 11 H., by same exhibitor, scored 85 points commercial and exhibition scales.

Cincinnati, Oct. 25.—Mlle. Marie Liger, exhibited by the E. G. Hill Co., scored 93 points commercial scale.

Chicago, Oct. 25.—Mlle. Marie Liger, exhibited by the E. G. Hill Co., scored 87 points commercial scale.

It is gratifying to note that the imported French variety, Mlle. Marie Liger, which was exhibited by the E. G. Hill Co., Richmond, Ind., before the Chicago, Cincinnati, New York and Philadelphia committees, is the same variety which was honored by the award of the $25 offered by the Chrysanthemum Society of America, competed for at the Exposition of Paris, 1900. On that occasion it was exhibited by Monsieur Liger-Ligneau, horticulteur, Orleans.

Boston, Oct. 25.—John N. May, Summit, N. J., exhibited No. 15 M, silvery pink, which scored 86 points commercial scale. Edwin Lonsdale, Secretary.

BUFFALO.

The mild and many very pleasant days are helping business, and the supply of flowers is increasing daily. Roses are improving in quality; carnations are increasing daily and improving in size and stem. The Wise Bros., of East Aurora, and Harmon & Burr, of Darien, are sending in good double violets, all of which are snapped up quickly. I don't know whether the single violets are going to be as fashionable as they were last year, but we hope so, and if so, some of we rural growers will be in it. The odor is the charm of violets and the single ones have that equally with the double, and the single have the advantage of a much better stem, and when a bunch of a hundred are pinned on a foot below Mamie's nose they have a more graceful effect; in fact they are more in keeping with her hair. When Ivory and Colonel Appleton mums are here we are in the height of the season and for the next three weeks we shall do well if we dispose of our cut at a good price.

We were favored a few days ago with a visit in the country by Prof. Cowell and W. F. Kasting. Mr. Cowell looks "just the same," but Billy's trip across the Atlantic has added about 30 pounds to his weight. He looks like a prosperous (otherwise, boodle) alderman. He has promised to give us half an hour's talk on his impressions of Europe at the next meeting of the club. He says they have grand flower shows over there. Palms sell for just as good a price in England as they do here. They grow wonderful plants, and the London barmaids are beautiful. He dwelt longer on the maids than he did on the palms. I got him switched off onto the feed question and what made him so fat, but he quickly got back to these fair dispensers of smiles and liquids, and said it was partly owing to the wholesome Guinness Dublin Stout, which they handed you out at 4 cents a half pint; to the roast beef of old England; the sparkling and pure lager of Saxony, and the superlative excellence of the Berlin sauerkraut.

Mr. Cowell will go to Chicago as one of the judges of the big chrysanthemum show and convention.

We read with much pleasure your correspondent's account of the banquet given to Mr. P. Welch by his friends and associates of Boston. He deserves all the honors given him and the success he has had. We dealt with Mr. Welch twenty years ago and always wired to him with the full assurance and confidence that our wants would be filled satisfactorily. He is a bright, blue-eyed, quick-witted descendant of the Emerald Isle.

The fact of having spent his honeymoon in Buffalo may partly account for his domestic and commercial good luck. Yet bridal couples usually seek quiet places for the first few days and you would have thought Philadelphia would have suited them better. Those blissful, brief days that only come once with good people. The second edition is not the genuine article and more of a business contract. Then to those two all the world "A solemn stillness holds" for outside of their two blessed selves the world is a blank. There is nothing of interest or importance going on in the universe to them, and after a few days of this delicious dream, unless you have a competent, steady income, you must rub your eyes, smoke up and get a move on, and then, as has been often said, the real life begins. The other was only a light comedy as a curtain raiser to the heavy drama which is to follow in many acts.

But I really did not mean to dilate on these chestnuts that are so old and yet ever young. It was the banquet. We know and enjoy the clean cut oratory of Judge Hoitt and the many sensible things that Lawrence Cotter can say in ten minutes, but we deplore that the full stenographic account of Warren Ewell's address cannot be given to the world with the earnest delivery of Grover Cleveland, the picturesque gesticulations of Roscoe Conkling, the resonant, far-reaching voice of Bailey, of Texas, or Patrick O'Mara, Esq. What a treat for his auditors! There is a happy blending of philosophy, poetry, imagery, political economy, metaphysics, horticulture and recreation so beautifully blended, and sometimes dovetailed into each other, that, inspiring as they are to hear, they are, on account of the lofty language, difficult to report verbatim. As Mr. Ewell was, from last accounts, in robust health we trust that we will hear him at Milwaukee. They have plenty of the article there that inspires men to eloquence, if not logic.

We read with interest what they are doing in Philadelphia. That cut flower wholesale market must be a great success. A boon to both grower and retailer, no middle man or middle price. Ever since I saw the working of the Boston market last March I was convinced that every big city should do the same and was fully intent on writing up my opinion of it, but thought a commission man might tell me to shut up. It may take away some of their business. You can make no reforms or improvements or progress without hurting some one temporarily, but the commission man's business is largely with out of town customers, and he can go to the market and purchase his supplies for his shipping. The Boston market is the most satisfactory institution for both store keeper and grower that can be imagined. It's only open to one criticism and that is they need more commodious quarters, which I think they are getting. Philadelphia has gone at it with a vim and it will be a howling success.

You know there are different ways of doing things, and you also know that at church offertories or collections many people look the other way when the plate is coming around. Dean Hole, that wholesouled, 6-foot-3-inch, mighty, muscular christian, says that the episcopal bishop of Denver had a young parson, a diamond in the rough, and they sent him among the mining camps. After a stay of a few days in one of the prosperous camps he hired the dance hall over the saloon and preached a strong sermon to the motley crowd. Then he called to a tin horn gambler, "Billy the kid," and said: "Here's my hat, Billy, take up a collection." Billy was proud of the job, and the first man dropped in a quarter. Billy pulled his gun and said "Young man take that back, this here's a dollar show," and so with hat and gun he got a dollar from every man in the room. I don't see myself the connection of this story with the Philadelphia flower market, but it will have to pass as a windup for this week.

BOSTON.

The Market.

Last week was a hard week to generalize, and not worth much specialization. It was a fairly busy week, with the busy points bunched into about every other day, and we came out Saturday night with practically no good material to keep over Sunday. If a scarcity exists anywhere, it is probably in the violet department, where it is not marked.

Chrysanthemums may be at their greatest numbers, but, if so, have hardly yet overshadowed the demand for them. They stand in the way of profitable sales on other lines of goods, perhaps. Prices run fairly good, however, upon good material, but the call for poor material seems more limited than usual.

Another Annual Event.

The stockholders of the co-operative market held their tenth annual meeting at Young's hotel Saturday evening, October 25. At the head of the banquet table, flanked by about forty stockholders, sat President Stickel and the board of directors. Invited guests were correspondents of all trade papers and official auctioneer. Carroll, who did their full duty in the general onslaught upon the choice viands and refreshments served by the first-class management, and as near their duty in the flow of wit and wisdom following as their several capabilities admitted.

The only business definitely settled was the election of officers for the ensuing year. This matter went through very glibly, as an official was instructed to throw one vote each for President Stickel, Vice-President Nicholson and Treasurer Geo. Cartwright to retain their present positions, and one vote for directors resulted in the choice of E. N. Peirce, E. Sutermeister, L. W. Mann, J. Walsh, W. W. Edgar and Alex. Montgomery.

It then developed that the directors are still at sea in regard to new quarters for a larger market, all negotiations for a central position having fallen through, and the sense of the meeting concerning a Back Bay location indicates a move in that direction.

Much time was spent in discussing the fact that uneasiness exists among the stall-holders because so few hold certificates of stock, and it was practically voted to make use of some plan vouched for by the commissioner of corporations to admit all florists who wish to enter the corporation upon a fair basis. The report of the treasurer, of course, shows a flourishing condition, but no more money on hand than the growing needs of the business can make use of; because there is no reason why, with the proposed increase of stock, that a permanent home should not be owned in a few years, rentals of parts of which will go far toward reducing expenses and thereby assisting in the payment of purchase price. Particularly broad and generous views of the situation seemed to prevail, and the uppermost thought is for the "greatest good for the greatest number." J. S. Manter.

A VISIT TO RICHMOND.

One of the pleasures I like to indulge in a few times every year is a trip to Richmond, Ind. You can always depend on seeing a few good new things in the florist line when you go there and visit The E. G. Hill Co.'s establishment. There are a few larger places than theirs in the country, but I doubt if any place in this land can show you as many sterling novelties in the various lines they carry as you will find here, and I doubt if you could find another man in this land who could point out the good points to you in such a way that you will forget to look for weak ones as the genial senior member of this firm is sure to do. There were several things that I went to see specially this time and I was not disappointed, for they are always ready to take you through and show you a great deal more than you expected to see.

Of course the main attraction just at present is the mum houses, and they are worth going a long way to see. There you will find grand stock of all the leading varieties, both new and old. To go over the list of varieties would be wearisome, as you will be able to see them at the shows and in the show reports, but I want to just mention two varieties from which I could hardly pull myself away. The one was a yellow Timothy Eaton. The exact counterpart of the original, except the color, which is a good clear yellow, a little deeper than Bonnaffon. This one will likely lead the yellow varieties just as Timothy E. leads the whites. The other is a pink of grand form, color and habit, and I miss my guess if it does not become the leading pink in the early midseason class. They have one house full of it and it was my good fortune to see it before many blooms had been cut and hundreds were waiting for the knife. Every bloom a perfect specimen and not a cull among them, and the plants stood about four feet high. This variety is called Mlle. M. Liger and Mr. Hill promised me that he would send the Review a photo of the house I saw.

The carnations were quartered mostly in two new houses that were built last summer, and although they were not benched as early as they expected, yet they are in fine shape. The plants are stocky and a great crop of blooms is coming in a short time. Adonis is being kept denuded of buds because the demand for cuttings is such that not a single shoot can be spared for a while yet. Their new white Innocence looks like a profitable variety to grow and I was well pleased with its looks. Another variety they think highly of is Floriana, and it certainly is a grand carnation, too. Gov. Wolcott also looks good. There is a host of varieties, in fact all the new ones and the good old ones, and all show signs of good culture.

Two things in roses struck me favorably above all the others. The one was a seedling yellow of good color, size, and a splendid growth, and as a good yellow rose has been wanted for several years this will surely meet with a good demand when it comes out. The other one travels under the number 444 and it is yellow, too, though quite distinct from the other. This latter one, when the bloom is fully expanded, shows a deep orange colored center, which shows to good advantage with the clear yellow of the other petals. You will hear of this variety soon, I think.

There are houses and houses full of all manner of other stock, both standard varieties and novelties, but I have neither time nor space to mention them in detail. I am always interested in novelties, and really if you want to keep up with the times you must go and see them whenever you have the chance.

From there I took the Centreville car and went to see President McKinley at E. T. Grave's place, and I was glad I went because I saw a good carnation. You have seen it described and you can see it at the shows this fall, so I shall only say that it looks like a well grown Lawson. The plant is strong and healthy. In point of number Dorothy easily leads at this place and a splendid sight it is. In fact all of their carnations look fine and a heavy cut is promised by the looks of the plants. They also have a bench of as fine Timothy Eaton as I have ever seen, and they will likely send a few to Kansas City and Chicago. Appleton has also been grand with them this season.

NEW YORK.

Tarrytown and Scarboro.

A visit to Tarrytown was of especial interest and value. The wonderful new fern, Nephrolepsis Piersoni, "keeps on its widening way," appreciating in quality and numbers every day. The specimen plants for the fall exhibitions are at their best now and will soon be doing missionary work. The 2½-inch stock for February delivery is being potted by the tens of thousands, and the advance sale is enormous. The engraving in this week's issue illustrates the remarkable beauty of the fronds. That the supply will equal the demand is hardly possible, great as are the facilities for reproduction.

A trip to Scarboro to see the wonderful new greenhouse being erected by the Pierson-Seiton Co. was a revelation, as were the twenty-five acres of choice nursery and herbaceous stock, and the seven large houses, each 300x20, erected some years ago, devoted to American Beauties, and looking as bright, strong and well preserved as the year they were built.

But the new house, the first of its kind ever erected, will pay any grower to visit. This house is 350 feet long, 55 feet wide, and 22 feet high. Figure it out how many square feet it contains. Its total cost will come very near $15,000, no more than an ordinary greenhouse of the same size, but a wonderful improvement in every way. It will be the first house ever built entirely of galvanized iron, will have no gutters, no rafters, no painting. Its sides are of Portland cement, its sashbars of galvanized iron in U shape, with the groove filled with cypress so treated that decay would seem impossible. The cement blocks for the sills are from two to three feet in height and of course indestructible. The lightness of construction, and yet remarkable strength, are very perceptible, even to the novice.

By the way, Mr. Pierson has the gold medal that the S. A. F. awarded his fern at Asheville—and a big medal it is—of which he is very proud.

A trip to William Rockefeller's and Helen Gould's completed the courtesies of the day, and Washington Irving's tomb, Sleepy Hollow, Andre's monument and the bridge where Icabod Crane saw the headless horseman were amongst the matters of interest that made the trip a happy memory.

A shake hands with the autocrat of the Gould conservatories, Ferdinand Mangold, young at seventy-four, was a pleasant incident of the day.

A Visit to Ernst Asmus.

Last Wednesday by invitation of Ernst Asmus, his new rose house at Closter, N. J., was visited by L. M. Noe, Madison, N. J.; S. C. Nash, Clifton, N. J.; Benjamin Dorrance, Dorranceton, Pa.; F. L. Moore and Ralph Moore, Chatham, N. J.; Henry Hentz, Jr., Madison, N. J.; Frank McMahon, Seabright, N. J.; Eugene Dailledouze, Flatbush, N. Y.; J. Hillman, secretary of the New York Cut Flower Co., and the representatives of the Exchange and of the Review. The day was a perfect one and the "outing" corresponded in every way. Mr. Asmus is a model host, and he cannot have too many inspections to suit his visitors if this is a sample of his method.

The house is one of many to be erected and contains 31,000 square feet. A greenhouse 400 feet long, 55 feet wide and 23 feet high, filled with 8,000 Beauties, 900 Queen of Edgely, 1,500 Maids and 1,000 Brides, is a great sight, and you can calculate the daily output of such an enterprise. The first crop of the Maids was 11,000, the first planting, August 1. The glass is 24x30. The capacity of the one house is one-fourth of the entire original plant at West Hoboken, where Mr. Asmus has sixty-five houses. Hitchings & Co. were the builders of the greenhouse, and it is a monument of their skill that will stand for generations.

When Mr. Asmus was asked what he was going to do with his eighty-five acres of splendid land here, he said: "Fill 'em up with greenhouses." Better rose soil is not obtainable anywhere. From this source the houses at West Hoboken are supplied. Mr. E. R. Asmus is in charge, and seven men assist in caring for this great establishment. The boilers are of 40 horse-power. A running brook on the property insures an unfailing water supply, the capacity of the elevated tank being 30,000 gallons. Twenty-five feet of space will be allowed between the houses as new ones are erected. There is room enough for a hundred of them. Everything has been done with a view to extension. Shed, office, ice boxes, electric plant for lighting and pumping, all have abundant capacity. The large house is practically fire proof, the sash bars and doors being the only wood used. The curved glass eliminates the gutter problem.

From "Ernstina" or "Asmusiana" or "Willowbrook" the carriage drive to the Closter hostelry was less than half a mile, and here a banquet that lacked nothing awaited the guests, the generous entertainer being toasted in champagne.

The afternoon was devoted to a visit at the home plant, which "Liberty" has helped to make famous, and where everything was in grand condition. Several houses of gardenias and four new lilac houses in process of building were first inspected, and then house after house of Liberty, Cusin, Watteville, Golden Gate, Alice Roosevelt, Testout, Carnot, valley and mums, with many "seedlings" of merit and the fine new yellow rose "444," that gives promise of becoming a favorite, and to which several houses are already devoted. Liberty is in splendid condition, about a dozen houses filled with it, one, two and some three years old.

The closing festivities occurred in the Asmus mansion, where the investigation of the hunting trophies of many years developed proofs of any moose stories which Mr. Asmus could possibly originate, including the head and bent antlers of the very giant whose struggles caused the injury to Mr. Asmus' arm a few weeks since, notwithstanding that the moose "bit the dust" several years ago! However, the magnificent exhibit, heads and horns covering the walls of many rooms, evidence skill that must have taken many moons to develop, and altogether form the most interesting private collection of actual "fruits of the chase" I have ever seen.

The day was a most delightful one in every respect, and all who accepted the hospitality of Mr. Asmus were more than pleased with the generous outing provided.

Notes.

Tomorrow night will open at the Madison Square Garden what now promises to be the greatest flower show and sculpture exhibition ever given in this country. An enormous attendance is anticipated. All the metropolitan papers are full of illustrations and favorable comment concerning it, and with propitious weather a great success is assured. In your next a full report will be given. The entries of exhibits are numerous and satisfactory to the management.

The coal agony is over. From $24 a ton to $6.50 is a big "drop," but the noise of the fall was about as sweet music as the growers have heard in many a day.

Henry W. Gibbons, the greenhouse architect, will show at the garden this week a very pretty design for a home window garden, which can be attached to any house, at a cost of $40. The size is 5 feet by 2½ feet, 6 inches.

The Lotus Club saw a very handsome decoration last week at the dinner given the Crown Prince of Siam. Autumn foliage and American Beauties only were used, but the general effect was charming.

The Jones-Kip wedding at the Church of The Incarnation, Saturday, was a brilliant affair, chrysanthemums being principally used in the decorations, which were by Hodgson.

The retail trade generally reflected the dull condition of the wholesale market and the week was voted the most discouraging of the year to date, not only among the smaller stores but in all the large ones.

The Rapid Transit Commission is arranging to replace in the spring the beautiful trees it has destroyed on many of the city's finest avenues and boulevards.

Mr. Miller, of Guttenberg, is sending thousands of his fine yellow mum Cremo to Ford Bros., shipments already aggregating 1,000 flowers at a time.

All the wholesale stores are flooded with chrysanthemums. The supply seems inexhaustible and never before reached such proportions so early in the season.

The American Institute will hold an exhibition of chrysanthemums, roses, carnations and ornamental plants at Berkeley Lyceum Nov. 12 and 13.

A few of the faithful materialized on bowling night and eleven games were rolled. Lang scored 234 in one game and the best put up by the others were: Hansen, 157; Mansfield, 177; Siebrecht, 214; Traendly, 129; Shaw, 148.

CHICAGO.

The usual market report will be found following the Chicago quotations elsewhere in this issue.

In this issue we present a number of views from photographs taken recently at the establishment of Wietor Bros., Rogers Park. They are now cutting Meteor and Liberty of fine enough grade to command $8.00 per 100.

The horse show opened this week, and Phil Hauswirth used 500 mums in one day at social affairs in connection with it.

W. H. Drake, Kenosha, Wis., Mrs. Gontram, Battle Creek, Mich., and Chas. Chadwick and wife, Grand Rapids, Mich., were recent visitors.

Quite a number of Chicago growers will visit the Kansas City show next week.

The termination of the coal strike does not seem to have affected prices here yet.

The bowlers have organized four teams and will begin a series of league games next Tuesday evening.

The new sculpture hall at the Art Institute, where the coming exhibition will be held, is 208x58 feet and 34 feet high. There will be room for all and every grower should be represented. PHILADELPHIA.

The Flower Market.

The election of R. G. Palmer as treasurer of the Flower Market completes the list of officers. Mr. Palmer is a well known grower of fine tea roses, with greenhouses at Doylestown. His election completes a strong board of officers, which stands as follows: President, Joseph Heacock; vice president, W. K. Harris; secretary, Edwin Lonsdale; treasurer, R. G. Palmer. Progress is being made at the market headquarters, 1224 Cherry street. Water, light, telephone and stalls are all in evidence, and while much remains to be done, the plan begins to have an appearance.

These hasty notes go to press on the eve of the great party. The committee referred to last week has provided music and merry making of various kinds; another committee has loaned the decorations out; a third, led of course by the great and only John Westcott, has taken thought—solid but not effervescent thought—for the solid comforts; while still a fourth committee has showered invitations all over town. So it is to be hoped that all the world of flowers was present on Thursday night, and that they all have pleasant recollections of their evening spent in the new flower market.

Notes.

The first debutante's tea, the opening affair of the season, was held last week.

M. Rosens, a New York supply man, was in town looking up space in the flower market a few days ago.

The Colonial Flower Shop, C. H. Grigg manager, is now open for business at 139 S. Eleventh street.

Dr. Cotting has given up his Swarthmore place, which was run by John Nesbitt.

The Philadelphia Cut Flower Co., Dunn & Walsh, makes a specialty of decorating. They report a good business with orders booked ahead.

Leo Niessen is handling some fine pink bouvardia.

The decorators are making rich effects with oak leaves and other bright colored autumn foliage.

Robert Scott & Son are sending in some fine flowers of Mrs. Trainor L. Park to S. S. Pennock.

Joseph Kift & Son use many Queen of Edgely roses. This variety is increasing in popularity.

Pennock Bros. are making gorgeous effects in their windows with chrysanthemums.

The local press contained accounts lately of the havoc wrought by Jack Frost on the Peacock dahlia farm at Atco, N. J. It was said that one hundred persons engaged in picking and caring for the dahlias were thrown out of employment.

William K. Harris is cutting some fine blooms of his straw colored chrysanthemum, Miss Florence Harris.

The Philadelphia Wholesale Flower Market opens for business Saturday, November 1, at about 7:30 a. m., at 1224 Cherry street.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

Business is not booming here just at present, owing to the beautiful, summer-like weather we are having, the effect of which is severely felt in the cut flower trade.

The few fall weddings that are taking place are not making much of a stir in the cut flower line, and about the only business the past week was for funerals. On Friday everybody was busy with work for the funeral of Mrs. Townsend, wife of H. C. Townsend, general passenger agent of the Missouri Pacific. Never before was there a church filled with so many beautiful floral designs as was the First Congregational on last Friday morning. The quantity of flowers used at this funeral would lead one to think that the wholesale houses were all cleaned up, but this did not make even an impression on the market, so great was the glut at the wholesale houses.

The retailer can get almost anything he wants and plenty of it and at any old price, something he has not been able to do for many moons, and just at present, the man with a big job on his hands can congratulate himself.

Chrysanthemums are in the greatest demand and the florists' windows are filled with all varieties. These are not yet a glut and it is only the poor grades that sell slowly and at low prices.

There are heavy receipts of roses, and the wholesaler has hardly room in his ice-box to place the unsold stock each day. The stock is of unusually fine quality and no other sells. Anything in the second grade is lumped off in 1,000 lots at about your own price, and some of it is even dumped.

Carnations also are feeling the effects of this warm spell, and often are asleep when they arrive at the commission house. The best keeper just now is Ethel Crocker. Daybreak, Scott, Lawson, Crane and others are piled up in 1,000 lots and they are hard to sell. Never before were there so many carnations dumped as last week, which of course is not to the liking of growers.

California violets are very fine and there are plenty of them for the demand. Valley and cosmos are in great abundance and sell fairly well. Good smilax can be had in large quantities at the usual price.

Notes.

Mr. Paul Berkowitz, of H. Bayersdorfer & Co., Philadelphia, was in town Saturday calling on the trade.

J. B. Heiss, of Dayton, Ohio, was a visitor the past week.

Mrs. Francis Morat, of Louisville, Ky., mother-in-law of Jacob Schulz, was visiting friends here last week.

In the prize contest last week at Simmons' Hardware Co.'s retail store for the best table decoration, Ostertag Bros., won first prize, and Charlie Connon's Golden Wedding table came in for second. Both tables were very handsome and attracted much attention the two days they were on exhibition.

Fred W. Pape, general superintendent of the parks, and Miss May Miller were married last Wednesday evening, at the residence of the bride's parents, 702 Longborough avenue. After a reception Mr. and Mrs. Pape departed for a southern trip of two weeks, after which they will be at home to their friends at 2850 Wyoming street.

The florists of St. Louis were glad to read in the last issue of the Review that the check swindler, who operated so successfully in this city two weeks ago, was caught in Kansas City, according to Mr. Vesey's notes, and the ladies are waiting for this weeks' issue to see his picture and ascertain if he is the same fellow, as they say they can identify the swindler at once, so we hope Mr. Vesey will not forget the picture.

Miss Lillian Shaw, daughter of our friend, J. Austin Shaw, of New York, is here this week with The Liberty Belles at the Century theater. A party of florists went down to see the show Monday night and enjoyed the performance very much, and especially the part taken by Miss Shaw.

CINCINNATI.

Though a very fair business is being done it is not quite what it ought to be. Some of the store men are complaining, but the majority of them report very fair business in spite of bad conditions.

Chrysanthemums are now in in all their glory, and there is a good supply of them. As a rule a very fair figure has been obtained, and if they were anywhere near fancy they sold readily and at a good price. This simply demonstrates the fact that you must grow your stock just a little better than your neighbor. In so doing it is sure to be sold and at a good price. There are plenty of white mums at present, but pink ones are a trifle scarce and a good one is much needed. Yellows are more plentiful and Col. D. Appleton is proving itself to be a world beater. Some of this variety now being cut at B. P. Critchell's are superb, and bring the highest prices obtained for any mum, in quantity, so far this season, $3 per dozen. They are certainly worth it and sell as fast as they come in. In medium grades it looks very much as if this market would be overstocked by the last of this week.

Roses are a glut. All have felt the influence of the mum and the unfavorable weather. Brides, Maids, Gates, Liberties, etc., all are in oversupply, and the buyer gets his choice and at his own price. Beauties are suffering along with the rest, and quoted prices were prices in name only. Still the majority of them were sold and the net returns were not so bad. The Beauties in most cases were very poor in color, and the blooms undersized.

Carnations have not suffered in price quite so much as other flowers. Fancy ones sold well at the regular quoted prices. Only the mediums and culls suffered, and they were cleaned out fairly well, but at slightly reduced prices.

Dahlias and cosmos are still to be had but are about played out. Violets are rapidly increasing in supply and sell fairly well.

E. G. Hill Co. sent a chrysanthemum to be passed upon by the local chrysanthemum committee, and was awarded a certificate with about ten points to spare. It was Mlle. Marie Liger, the new French variety which won the prize offered by the Chrysanthemum Society of America for best seedling mum in build and color. C. J. Ohmer.

PITTSBURG.

The increase in the supply of all kinds of flowers the past week was very heavy. Roses were thicker than flies around a molasses barrel on a hot day. Maids arrived in very large quantities, due to the warm bright days. Job lots of these were sold at unmentionable prices. Large quantities of chrysanthemums are now to be had and the prices on them are low, quality considered; the demand is good. Beauties are increasing in supply; the better grades sell the best. Carnations are also abundant; the poorer grades in pink and white remain unsold. Some very fine cosmos are still to be had. For prices see this week's issue under Pittsburg quotations.

Henry Eichholz is shipping some very good chrysanthemums; they compare favorably with any around. He also has a seedling carnation which he named Tiger; it is of a peculiar yellowish hue and very large in size.

Wm. Lauck, of Carrick, is now cutting some very fine Robinson and Simpson mums. Billy was always a good chrysanthemum grower.

Theodore Langhans, of the Cut Flower Co., who has been confined to his home by illness, is at his desk again.

The next meeting of the Pittsburg and Allegheny Florists' Club will be held Wednesday evening, November 12, and it is to be a chrysanthemum night.

Superintendent William Falconer's chrysanthemum show at the Schenley Park conservatory opened Sunday, October 26. Its a double exhibit this year of chrysanthemums and cacti. The exhibit of cacti is new and contains specimens from Africa, South America, Mexico, the United States and India. The exhibit of mums is splendid, over 12,000 plants being displayed.

CANADIAN HORTICULTURISTS.

Mr. G. L. Creelman, secretary of the Ontario Fruit Growers' Association, has notified me that it is proposed to add a new feature to the programme at their next annual meeting to be held at Walkerton, Ont., December 1st and 2nd.

A special session will be held for those interested in the cultivation of plants and flowers. Papers on these subjects will be read and Mr. Creelman is anxious to secure the attendance of other gentlemen who are interested—trade or otherwise. This opportunity should not be lost, as a full report of the meeting is issued by the government.

VITIS COIGNETIAE.

We are mailing you under separate cover leaves of the vine sent out several years ago as "Vitis Coignetiæ" and recommended at that time as a decorative vine producing very brilliant colored foliage in the fall. Until this year it has not met our expectations in this respect, but just now either owing to the greater maturity of the vine or a specially favorable season, or perhaps part of both, the vine in question is certainly a most beautiful sight, as the foliage has turned the most brilliant crimson and yellows as you will note by the leaves sent you. If this plant will continue in the future to produce such magnificent colors it certainly is well worth more free use.

The Elm City Nursery Co.
New Haven, Conn.

[The leaves were well colored, though hardly as brilliant as we had expected from the description.—Ed.]

A copy of the wholesale catalogue of trade supplies recently issued by E. H. Hunt, Chicago, has reached us. A very striking feature is the line of original half-tone designs that they print to order on their Liberty cut flower boxes. They are very artistic and cannot fail to attract favorable attention. Half-tone engravings from photographs have almost entirely superseded the old style drawing or wood cut in this firm's catalogues and it is worthy of note that even a coil of hose shows up much more attractively by this process, while ribbons, cords, baskets, vases, etc., are depicted so much better than in a wood cut that there is no comparison.

Oxnard, Cal.—At the Farmers' Institute held here recently a remarkable display of begonias was made by Mrs. Theodosia B. Shepherd, of Ventura, Cal. Over seventy-five different varieties were in the collection. She delivered a lecture upon hybridizing and cultivating the begonia, her favorite flower, and was listened to with the deepest attention. In her gardens at Ventura she has over 150 varieties of begonia, many of them seedlings of her own growing.

Greenville, Texas.—The Greenville Nursery and Floral Co. has been organized with headquarters here and the company will grow a general assortment of bedding and decorative plants, cut flowers, and a full line of nursery stock. Mr. L. B. Seaman is president.

Hutchinson, Kans.—At the recent state fair the principal winner of prizes in the floral classes was John Stamm, who made an extensive display.

Although there is an abundance of stock in all varieties in the market at present the demand has kept pace with supply. Good stock commanded fair prices, although much inferior stuff went at pretty low figures. Some fine blooms brought $3.00 a dozen and ordinary grades sold at 50 cents to $1.50 per dozen. The warm, bright weather brought on a heavy crop of roses and carnations and there were plenty of them to satisfy all classes of buyers. Violets are coming in freely and of extra quality, but demand rather light. Some fine cosmos are in the market. INCOG.

The market is very much overstocked with all kinds of flowers, and there is no immediate relief in sight. Hard frosts are needed to destroy the outdoor flowers, and cold weather to decrease the quantity of indoor blooms. Chrysanthemums are very plentiful, and dealers say are not selling as well as in former years. Prices have fallen since last week's quotations, with little prospect of improvement before Saturday.

A glance at the above prices tells the story of about the worst week known in the wholesale cut flower business in this city. It seemed last week as though the bottom had been reached, but the closing days disclosed the fact that there was really no bottom.

And so far this week the improvement requires a magnifying glass to find it. A few "specials" among the Beauties and mums command a 25-cent value, but it would not take long to count the total. Violets are the only flowers that hold their own; in fact, a few extras sold at $1.00 Saturday, but it was scarcity rather than value that caused the upturn.

The flood of chrysanthemums continues. It was an avalanche on Saturday. Even orchids are uncalled for. With the opening of the great exhibition and the anticipated cooler weather, it is possible next week may show an improvement. J. A. S.

Cooler weather arrived last Sunday and has prevailed since. A slight decrease in the cut is already noted, and the general feeling is that prices will harden materially before the week is out if present weather conditions continue. Though there is practically no change in quotations, rates are better held on the best grades, the extra select Brides and Maids reaching $6.00. The receipts of seconds and culls continue large and prices on them are still weak.

It is the same as regards carnations. There are very few that can be called fancy, the selects are in fair supply and there is a big surplus of culls, of which the colored sorts are the slowest sale.

The chrysanthemum procession is lengthening and widening. The flowers must be very select to reach $2.50 a dozen, though we hear of sales of some fine Appletons at $3.00. Very fine flowers can be had for $2.00, and good ones at $1.00 to $1.50. Small flowers can be had at very low rates. Bergmans, Kalb, Monrovia, Willowbrook, Pacific and Sunshine have been cut out. The varieties now predominating are Robinson, Whilldin, Ivory, Pink Ivory, Morel, Appleton, Pennsylvania, Bassett, Hurrell, Eaton, Perrin, Wanamaker, Mayflower (both white and yellow), White Queen, Lady Hanham and Childs.

All Saints' Day brought a good many orders from southern points. The opening of the horse show this week is expected to help demand somewhat, and the opening of the flower show is looked forward to as an event that will probably mark the opening of the social season in a way that will be felt by the trade.

The market has been glutted with all kinds of choice stock the past week, which sold very cheap in big lots. The wholesalers claim that the call for chrysanthemums just now is the cause of this glut in other flowers, and the chances are that these cheap prices will prevail for some time. The fine warm weather is also a cause for the retail trade being somewhat slow with over-the-counter trade. Fakira are again on the downtown street corners with piles of extra fine violets, carnations and long-stemmed Beauties, which are peddled out at very cheap prices.

The market has come to a standstill and prices are much lower this week. Bright weather has made receipts exceed demand, and the mums are coming in heavily. Stock has much improved in quality. Roses have good stiff stems and excellent color. Carnations are up to standard with good stiff stems. No complaints are coming from the retailers. Chrysanthemums are very fine and varieties and colors numerous. Violets are fine and are being picked up right along. Wild smilax selling fast. DILGER.

PORTLAND, ORE.

From observation and a short interview with the leading florists everything would seem to be progressing satisfactorily along horticultural lines. Trade during the summer months was excellent and is now gradually increasing in volume. For the past month there has been a decided scarcity of good flowers, but soon we will have mums, roses and carnations in abundance, when we expect all the business we can possibly attend to.

Some little damage to outside stock and to young roses under glass, resulted from the smoke and ashes from forest fires which raged near here all through August.

Late asters were fine and sold well up to October 1. Dahlias have also proved profitable, selling as high as 75c per dozen. Sweet peas that commenced to bloom early in June are still blooming and if not destroyed by frosts promise good until Thanksgiving.

Roses and carnations, which thrived so well here under glass all summer, were not dispensed with until late in September. Their superior quality was highly commented on by eastern tourists. The best roses for commercial purposes are Testout, Carnot and Kaiserin, not uncommonly seen here on 30-inch stems, with thorns so sharp that you need a hide as thick as that of the rhinoceros to handle them.

The retail stores have been newly decorated and we have three of them which would do credit to any city.

The L. G. Pfunder place always has something novel on display. Miss Pfunder stole a march on us and captured the prize for the best decorated window during carnival week.

Clarke Bros. are receiving some grand blooms of Queen and Bonnaffon chrysanthemums from their place in Oakland, Cal., and their window looks fine arranged with these flowers and Adiantum Farleyense fern.

Martin & Forbes are using autumn foliage rather freely, creating a beautiful contrast with Adiantum cuneatum and other ferns. This firm put up an elaborate decoration at the Portland hotel for the banquet given last week to a party of New York state financiers who were prospecting through the northwest.

Geo. Otten is looking after the wedding decorations and was obliged to send to Chicago for valley and other material, which, he says, arrived in very good condition.

We are having salubrious weather and the surrounding country with its dense forestry clothed in its varied colors of autumn foliage is a most interesting study. You have only to drive over Portland Heights and through our city park to convince yourself that nature has wrought wonders for Portland. The city park is laid out on a range of hills and when you have reached its highest point you have climbed five hundred feet. From here you get a full view of the city, and on a clear day Mt. Hood is visible, a distance of sixty miles. H. J. M.

PONTIAC, ILL.—W. J. Miller has admitted his son, Orlin B. Miller, to partnership and the firm name is W. J. Miller & Son. Three new houses, each 30x100, are well equipped and ready for business. Prospects for a good season's trade are bright. Their carnation plants, which they did not get benched till September 25, are looking fine.

DIXON, ILL.—John E. Rakebrandt, foreman for O. L. Baird, has returned from a four months' sojourn in Germany and has resumed his position here. Business is good and stock plentiful.

WINONA, MINN.—The Winona Floral Co. has opened its new establishment for business. H. W. Rogers and R. G. Guenther, formerly of Chicago, are the managers.

FLATBUSH, N. Y.

The appended scores will indicate to our bowling friends in Milwaukee that the coming contest in August will not be a "walk over" for Philadelphia. The Flatbushians are quite happy over the solving of the coal problem and the prospective fall and winter trade, notwithstanding its present unhealthy condition. The doctor's prescription of "cold weather" will soon have the patient on his feet and within a fortnight the "fancies," both in mums and carnations, will command the pecuniary respect they deserve. But all unite in calling this week "the worst of the season."

Mr. Schmutz, with his new legs, is again bowling finely, the Dailledouze Bros. are a team in themselves, and Riley absorbs his "pots" as usual. Will Siebrecht was a little "off his feet" and woe to the man who goes up against one of John Raynor's lightning curves. Mrs. Siebrecht, who has been very ill, is convalescing. Flatbush will be decidedly "in it" at the carnation convention in February. The "stranger" is always welcomed at the club alleys here on Thursday evenings the year around.

Out of four games the best three are chosen:

AUSTIN.

TORONTO.

'Mum seems to be the word this week, as we find them in great demand and of ready sale in all quarters; in fact, the retailers, and consequently the wholesalers, claim that the demand this season, thus far, for chrysanthemums is considerably ahead of former years. We usually find chrysanthemums dragging after they have been in a couple of weeks, and the supply gets over the demand. This year it has been the reverse, and although we believe the supply was equal to, if not ahead of other years, the demand has been such that many orders are being only half filled. Roses are more plentiful, while carnations are in moderate supply.

J. S. Simmons, our enterprising Yonge street florist, reports three large weddings and two large receptions this week, which took a considerable amount of stuff, one taking as much as two hundred yards of smilax. The decoration for a large reception this week was taken by one of our departmental stores, while the palms were furnished by S. Tidy & Son. This was one of the most extensive decorations done for some time in this line, using one hundred large palms. D. J.

KANSAS CITY, OCT. 26.

I have just a moment or two to give you a few lines. I believe there has never before been such a response to any flower show as we have here today. Entries are crowding me so much that I am worried about what to do with them. The more I fight for third premiums, the surer I feel that it is just and right to offer them. In several of the classes to date (and I have to await final entries for our first and second days' entries until tomorrow) there are five entries, and in no class are there less than three. I am delighted with the prospects of our show and wish it were possible for all my friends to see it.

Canaries, parrots and fish aquariums are, as you know, rather an innovation in flower shows, yet we have quite a number of entries, and life is life, so we shall have birds and fishes anyway. I desired to get something more than the birds and fishes, so I asked Director General Taggart about it and he said "Rats!" I told him Bear and For Bear."

UNCLE JOHN.

MEMPHIS, TENN.

Death of Henry Moore.

Henry Moore, one of the pioneer florists of the south, died October 21. He was a native of Pennsylvania, but when a young man came south. This was before the war, and when the great struggle began he enlisted in a Confederate regiment in Mississippi and marched and fought and starved all through the conflict. After the surrender he came to Memphis and engaged in the florist business. Through a combination of fortunate circumstances, untiring energy and a love of his chosen profession he amassed a fortune sufficient to enable him to retire from business in 1892.

He leaves a devoted wife, children and grandchildren. His funeral, under the charge of his brother Odd Fellows, was largely attended and numerous floral offerings from those in the trade attested his popularity with his fellow florists.

RICHMOND, IND.

At the last meeting of the Richmond Florists' Club, held at the greenhouses of Chessman & Schepman, every establishment in the city was represented. Future meetings will be held at the various greenhouses and the next one will be held at the establishment of the E. G. Hill Co. The club contemplates having a local carnation show some time this season, and a chrysanthemum show a year hence. Committees were appointed to report later. After adjournment cigars and pipes and several decks of cards were forthcoming and a pleasant social time was had.

A visit to the various establishments found them all in excellent condition. Roses and carnations are coming on well, and mums are seen in all sizes, from a nickel up to a grandfather's hat.

At Fulle Bros. the boys were excavating a pit for the new boiler.

At Gift's we found stock well in hand and in good condition.

At Gause's we found some fine Beauties and Liberties and a bench of Crockers that were fine enough for any one.

At Graves' we saw some Eatons that would be hard to excel, and their Appletons are immense.

At Hill's, among the new chrysanthemums, a pink novelty, Mlle. Marie Liger, is immense and sure to be a winner.

At Chessman & Schepman's (the old Beach place) there is a marked improvement in both quality and quantity of stock grown.

Ben. H. Schroeder, foreman for the above firm, was married October 8, the bride being Miss Irene Smithmeyer. The church was handsomely decorated with wild smilax, palms, ferns and Beauty roses. After the wedding the happy couple visited Chicago, St. Louis and other points and will be at home to their friends at 517 South Seventh street.

LONDON, ONT.

Business is good for the kind of weather we are having. One hour the sun is shining and the next it is raining. There has been an unusual number of thunder storms of late, doing more or less damage, chiefly to barns that are well filled with grain.

Thanksgiving day trade was about equal to last year, the call being for small quantities, mostly carnations.

Chrysanthemums are becoming more plentiful and are selling at fair prices, Ivory bringing $2 per dozen, Omega $3 and Bergmann sold out well at $1 to $1.50. Carnations are more plentiful and of better quality, bringing 40 cents to 60 cents at retail.

Gammage Bros. are adding a 10x100 propagating house, using cement slabs, 12x21x1½, for the bench in place of slate, which they consider will make a more durable bottom and be equal to the brick bottom propagating benches.

BUTTE, MONT.

We are fortunate in not having any dull summer season here. We have the finest sweet peas in the world and are receiving thousands daily which we retail at never less than 75 cents per 100. For the last ten days flowers have been exceptionally scarce, but we are getting caught up now. Chrysanthemums have made their appearance. Outdoor stock has been frozen up for the past month.

The stock at the Gregson plant of the Butte Floral Co. looks fine and the mums promise to be the best ever seen here. The carnations are also unusually promising.

Law Bros. and the State Nursery also report good trade, their stocks keeping well cleaned up.

Mr. Kirkham could not change his name, so he got Miss O'Leary to change hers to his. Best wishes of all the boys.

The country was too much for Paul Berkowitz. A couple of ranchers saw his price list sticking out of his pocket and held him up, thinking he carried a wad of money. He will keep that price list out of sight next time.

Mr. Hanson, formerly with the Columbia Gardens under Mr. Siegel, has taken charge of W. A. Clark's private conservatories and is making a fine showing. He succeeded Archie Elliott, who has gone east.

As usual we are all busy with funeral work, and fill in with society events. Quite a stir in society circles lately.

Rambler.

BOILER AND PIPING.

In reply to A. C. B., for the heating of the greenhouse 46x16 feet with soft coal for fuel, a vertical direct draft boiler would be best suited, one having a grate area of about 18 or 20 inches in diameter. Two inch wrought iron pipe should be used for coils, using five lines under the south bench, three lines under the middle bench and four lines under the north bench.

The cost of the boiler would entirely depend upon the make selected, a fair approximation, however, would be about $70. The pipe and fittings, together with expansion tank, would cost probably in the neighborhood of $120. Of course, it is understood that these prices are only approximated, and are based on the cost ruling in any of our larger commercial centers.

THERON N. PARKER,
Harrison, N. J.
Dear Sir:—After using your Model carnation support in two of our houses the past winter we have come to the conclusion that it is perfectly adapted to supporting carnation plants and shall use them on all our plants the coming season. We were much pleased with the simplicity, strength and neat appearance of the support. Yours truly,
F. DORNER & SONS CO.

THE EXHIBITIONS.

NEW YORK.

The Exhibition.

The great Flower and Sculpture Exhibition at the Madison Square Garden in New York opened on schedule time, Thursday evening last, "in all its glory," and never was Solomon, or Solomon's Temple, arrayed more artistically, nor has there ever been seen in this country, as was promised, such a beautiful combination of art and nature as greeted the eye on entrance to the great amphitheater, lighted with myriads of electric lights and ablaze with color and decoration.

It was an anxious day for managers, lieutenants and helpers, and until afternoon chaos reigned. In fact, darkness fell and the clock pointed threateningly to eight when the finishing touches were made, and though not all was perfect, everything was presentable, and the throng of visitors saw only the finished whole and were satisfied.

One of the metropolitan papers on Friday morning saw things through uneducated eyes and did a little uncalled for "knocking," but the majority had only praise for what had been accomplished, and since the beginning every newspaper in the city has given its favorable criticism. Still up to Sunday night the attendance was not what the Florists' Club had a right to expect, and it is a question if blase New York has another opportunity for many a day to "look upon its like again!"

The list of awards appears below. The silver medal goes to the Pierson fern and the bronze medal to the Dale Estate's new rose, the "Canadian Queen." Saturday there arrived the English chrysanthemum exhibit—a lot of grand flowers in excellent condition, many of them seedlings, but all of them on Sunday night christened and decorated by the manager with names of kings, queens, lords and generals of old England, that ought to make them immortal.

The illustrations which accompany this letter, tell better of the profusion of decoration, artistic arrangement, sculptural effect and general beauty than any words can convey. The facile pen of William Scott will doubtless paint a picture that will please and interest you.

Such weather, too as the show has had must have been "made to order." It continues perfect and it is no credit to New York that 10,000 people daily do not see this exhibition.

The judges were: On plants, William Falconer, William Nicholson and William Taplin; on cut flowers, William Scott, Edwin Lonsdale and J. L. Powell; on chrysanthemums, W. G. Gomersall, W. Barth and Phil. Breitmeyer. Their decisions met with general approval.

Some novelties never before exhibited here were in evidence, notably the Canadian Queen rose, shown by the Dale Estate, Brampton, Ont.; the Mlle. Marie Liger mum, shown by the E. G. Hill Co., of Richmond, Ind., and the Enchantress carnation, shown by Peter Fisher, of Ellis, Mass.

The Alice Roosevelt carnation, by Dailledouze Bros., of Flatbush, and the President Roosevelt carnation, by C. W. Ward, of Queens, were greatly admired.

The Chicago Carnation Co. sent Harlowarden and Marshall Field 1,000 miles and they stood the long journey remarkably well.

In the trade exhibit many of the local supply people were well represented and the display was interesting and instructive.

The exhibition of chrysanthemums on Monday was superb.

The attendance on Monday was excellent.

E. G. Hill came all the way from Indiana with his new mum and was a welcome visitor. So was Peter Crowe, of Utica, whose good nature and rotund personality show no signs of retrogression.

Visitors included Peter Fisher, of Ellis, Mass.; William Falconer, of Pittsburg; Edwin Lonsdale, of Philadelphia; W. W. Edgar, of Boston; M. A. Patten, of Tewkesbury, Mass.; W. H. Taplin, of Holmesburg, Pa.; William Nicholson, of Boston; W. F. and A. Gude, of Washington, and John Chambers, of Toronto. There were also many others from a distance visiting the exhibition.

Phil. Breitmeyer appeared at the garden on Sunday—a fitting day for Detroit's representative to arrive—and will take in the big show for some days, and get a glimpse of Boston's and Philadelphia's exhibitions before he returns.

William Scott fulfilled his judging duties to everybody's satisfaction and returned to Buffalo Sunday, as much charmed with the show as were his many friends with his uniform geniality. If there had been any medals given for the most popular judge, Mr. Scott would have had a gold one.

The Awards.

Various Items.

Bradshaw & Hartman have "taken time by the fetlock" and anticipated Christmas by giving the New York retailers some holly for Thanksgiving. As they have a car load of it, there may be a box or two to spare for enterprising outsiders.

At last report Mr. John Young had decided that the "judgment day" at Kansas City would have to "come" without him, as business engagements made it impossible for him to fulfill his intended duties at the great western exhibition.

Condon's mum exhibition in Brooklyn began on Saturday last and runs over two weeks. As it is free, and always a fine show, there will be no doubts about the attendance.

The business automobile is becoming necessary in every "bon ton" florists' family. The latest to appear is Warrendorff's on Broadway.

IMPRESSIONS OF THE NEW YORK SHOW.

I am well aware that your able New York correspondent will give you the fullest details of the Madison Square "Flower and Sculpture Exhibition;" yet as I looked forward very much to seeing it, and have little else to say this week, I may be excused for a few comments on what appealed to me.

When I entered the immense building about noon Thursday all was chaos, and a herculean task was before the committee. I thought if Mr. Harry Bunyard came out of this without a collapse, he should be exhibited as a remarkable phenomenon. Order gradually came and by 6 o'clock, when the doors were opened, there was little evidence of the confusion that reigned a few hours before, yet it was another twenty-four hours before the thing looked finished. This was not the committee's fault, as but little time was given them to build the arches, etc., and put on the decorations. Yet there were flagrant cases of exhibitors holding back their exhibits until they saw what other firms were going to show.

The committee of judges on cut flowers, of which I was one, followed strictly the clause in the rules which said, "All exhibits shall be correctly named." It was harsh and severe, and many vases of carnations were ignored, whatever their quality, simply because they had no name attached. This no doubt carried a lesson for the future, but why not then enforce another rule and regulation, which read, "All articles for competition must be in position on Thursday, October 30, by 12 noon." The latter is far more important, but was ignored, and perhaps always will be, yet it seems only reasonable that if one rule is winked at, all might be.

The display of orchids by Lager & Hurrell and Henry Siebrecht & Son was grand. The group of Nephrolepis Piersoni was only what you would expect from the beautiful fern, and if it had had a setting of white paper instead of oak leaves and sawdust, it would have been far more effective. There was a splendid specimen of another new nephrolepis exhibited by Mr. John Scott, of Brooklyn, which he calls Nephrolepis Scottii. I admire the name, and the plant was a beauty, a narrower frond than Bostoniensis and more drooping, a wonderfully effective specimen and grown in an 8-inch pan. Nephrolepis Anna Foster was also well represented, but the fact is these contemporary nephrolepis are sadly handicapped this year by the gem that began its existence in Tarrytown.

There was a display of garden vegetables by Mr. Duckham, so excellent in quality and variety that I lived back forty-five years to the time when I jumped over beds of leeks, salsify and celery to make a short cut to the walls where there were waiting for my thieving hand some lucious peaches and nectarines. There are some temptations in life when conscience is a dumb organ or gone on a visit, and a boy and fruit is one of them.

I am no judge of statuary, perhaps slightly of the living, but in stone or bronze, I pass. I think what little there was of it was a relief to the sombre green of palms and evergreens which occupied the greater part of the space. "The Father of His Country" on a charger was the most conspicuous object in that line and the color of the horse gave you the impression that the boys had thrown a shower of eggs at it and succeeded in their marksmanship. In a horse sale catalogue it would be described as a "dun splashed with yellow," but perhaps it was just as art decrees, and so with all the rest, I needed a higher education to properly appreciate the display of statuary.

Now what I am going to say about the chrysanthemums, carnations and roses is written with no attempt to criticize or be funny or unjust, but with a sincere desire to be truthful to the facts as they existed. The rose show was not as good in quantity or quality as any one of a dozen growers could have made singly had they so been inclined, and but for the fine exhibit of Canadian Queen from the Dale Estate, it would have been ridiculous. One hundred dollars for 100 American Beauties, and not an entry. In classes for 50 blooms of roses, nine classes, there was just one exhibit, Bridesmaid. Mr. J. N. May offered $100 for 50 blooms of Mrs. Oliver Ames. Not one bloom of this variety was to be seen. American Rose Co. offered $100 for 50 blooms of Ivory. We failed to find a flower of this fine white rose.

The carnations, considering the earliness of the season, were far better represented than the roses, both in quantity and quality. Some fine vases of Lawson were staged, but the gem of the collection were two vases of Enchantress all the way from Joliet. Coming this distance and looking well, even on Sunday, speaks well for this grand variety. Mr.

C. W. Ward did wonders to help out the carnation part of the program. His vase of President Roosevelt was splendid. Without looking at it very closely it looks like Governor Roosevelt, and let us hope, as the governor was promoted to a loftier station, in fact the pinnacle, that this new carnation possesses such qualities as merit its dignified name. Further Mr. Ward brought in on Saturday a superb collection of varieties of carnations. They were beautifully arranged in vases on a circular table some ten or twelve feet across. It was a gem of an exhibit and a bright, particular oasis of color.

If I were to criticize Mr. Ward verbally about the naming of his carnations he would stick his hands deep in his trousers pockets, jerk back his shoulders, give a short cough and talk me down, and in three minutes I should be glad to say, "I guess that's right." When the keeper of a hotel(?) in Montana said to the tenderfoot, late of Harvard, "Them hills is all paying dirt," the ex-student replied, "Excuse me, sir, let me correct you; those hills are all paying dirt." The keeper of the hotel placed a large gun on the bar and said, "I'll bet you a hundred dollars it's them hills." Then the tenderfoot rubbed his chin, looked thoughtful and replied, "Come to remember, I believe you are right." There would be no gun in our discussion, but considerable hot air, so I protest this way, as many others have remarked, that there are many Roosevelts. There are Alice and the Misses and His Excellency in two characters. How easily this could be shown to be unwise, and it will lead to no end of confusion, both verbally and in correspondence. If ever there were a nation that had a weakness for abbreviating names it is ours. General Jacqueminot is simply "Jack" and Souvenir de President Carnot is nothing more than "Carnot" to ninety-nine per cent of rose growers and buyers. And these four carnations will be merely "Roosevelt." There are the planets, the rivers of the country, the women of Dickens, the heroines of Shakespeare, all to be preferred and exhausted before we get down to personal names.

There were some good vases of mums, but nothing in quantity as I expected to see, and I think those two splendid gardeners (a gardener is a professional man; a florist is only a tradesman) Mr. Herrington and Mr. Duckham, very largely contributed to the display of these. The old standard varieties that were greatly in evidence and fine in quality, were Bonnaffon, Appleton, Robinson, Viviand-Morel and Mrs. Weeks. Among the newer ones that I thought improvements over their existing types were A. J. Balfour, a beautiful rose pink; Miss Alice Byron, better and earlier than Robinson; Carnot, a wonderful white for exhibition.

I must not forget two splendid vases of Mlle. Liger, shown by E. G. Hill Co., something resembling a well grown, mature Maud Dean, but a heavier flower of fine form, and I should say about right by the 20th of November. This will be a most valuable commercial variety. C. J. Salter beats the well known Appleton; Mrs. J. C. Neville is better than Mrs. Weeks, a wonderful flower; Mrs. T. W. Pockett is a glorious flower; Mrs. Coombes is another variety that we will all grow. It's a far better color than Viviand-Morel, of great size, and follows Glory of the Pacific. Among the very newest I noticed the Australian variety "Durban Pride," a light pink, twenty-seven inches in circumference and solid.

As six hayseeds were crossing the North river Saturday morning on their way to Madison Square Garden, the noble ship Campania passed in front of our ferry boat, a beautiful sight with her upper decks crowded with home comers from a distant land, hearts beating high with joy to see again their dear ones and bless the leviathan that had brought them safely across the ocean. Little did we think that on our return to the show at 3 o'clock we should see on a table about two dozen magnificent flowers in absolutely perfect order, and they had come over on the Campania from Surrey, England. This is wonderful! The varieties were all under number, or nearly all. I can only say that many of them eclipsed in beauty and size anything we have in chrysanthemums up to date.

When you were up in the gallery the whole scene below was pretty, but how meager the exhibition to what it might and should have been. Mr. Bunyard, the manager, Mr. Sheridan, the president, a most courteous gentleman, and the bright secretary worked hard, and perhaps all the committees did, but where, oh, where, was one of the score of first-class retailers? Where could be found one exhibit of the many wholesalers? And with the exception of a very few, where was the army of growers that can be found within twenty miles of Greater New York? The weather was glorious, no excuse. What is the matter? It's not for an outsider to say, for all reforms must come from within.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS.

Speaking generally, the standard of the cut flowers seems lower than last year, though there are some notable exceptions. By lower, I mean that the general run of the flowers seems hardly as large as last season. The show as a whole will doubtless be dealt with by your regular correspondents, and I will merely note the most prominent varieties in the exhibition classes.

Appleton was shown finer, I venture to say, than it has ever been shown before, and of excellent finish. It was superb. Robinson was not very strongly represented, which is not surprising, considering that many growers had been cutting this variety three weeks before the show. Nellie Pockett was set up in very fine shape, as were also Carrington, Faleoner (or Peter Kay, as some still insist on calling it), Mrs. Weeks, H. J. Jones, Mme. Carnot and Alice Byron.

In a class arranged for effect many of the novelties I recently described in these notes made a conspicuous showing. They included Charles Longley, purple; Millicent Richardson, purple; C. J. Salter, yellow; Durban's Pride, a light pink, 25½ inches in circumference, but a little weak in the neck for the immense flower to hold itself erect; Mabel Morgan, a fine yellow; Edith Pilkington, yellow, and several others.

Mrs. Coombes, considering that it was fully developed three weeks ago, was set up in first-class shape. This variety will become the standard early pink without question. To its other virtues it adds the excellent one of being one of the best keepers of all the pink varieties. A large exhibit of the new pink Mlle. Marie Liger was set up from the E. G. Hill Co. and excited favorable comment from everyone. It will apparently rank as the best second early pink. The way it set up after 48 hours' travel shows it to be a grand shipper. The flower is incurving with a high built center, the shape the wholesalers like to handle, because such flowers don't get bruised easily. After being on exhibition for three days the flowers are still in excellent condition.

On Saturday morning flowers were received by steamer from England, and considering the time necessary for transportation (seven days at least), they arrived in a wonderfully fresh condition. They were sent by W. Wells, an English specialist, and great credit is due him for his enterprise in thus bringing his wares before the American public. The flowers averaged up well in size, though many of them were not nearly developed. They were mostly seedlings and included a good range of color. They were set up singly in small vases and were much admired.

Looking at these flowers and the attractive appearance they presented, it seemed to me that much more staging of that kind should be done where it is proposed to set flowers up on exhibition for a longer period than two days. Flowers set up with long stems will not keep in presentable condition much longer than two days, while flowers put up with a foot of stem will keep perfectly for a week, and can be spread over a much larger area. I am not decrying classes like six vases, six flowers in a vase. Far from it. Those classes are the making of a show from a spectacular point of view, but there is lots of room for big vases and small vases too. They would create more variety and would break up the monotony of long rows of vases all the same size and all containing the same number of flowers. I know of one exhibition where these small vase classes are made a feature and it is to my mind a most attractive one.

More classes are to be competed for at New York on Monday and some good new things may be brought out that may be worthy of note. The classes for plants were poorly filled, and the reason is not far to seek. Specimen plants represent an immense amount of work, and the cost of producing such plants is entirely out of proportion to the cash prize that is generally offered. Judging by the remarks made, the classes for specimen plants will be even more poorly represented next year than this unless some radical change in the feelings of the exhibitors takes place.

Having had inquiries for a list of varieties of chrysanthemums which have been awarded the necessary number of points entitling them to a certificate by the Chrysanthemum Society of America since and including 1898, and thinking perhaps there may be others desiring same information, we herewith venture to send said list for publication in your columns.

The Horticultural Society of Chicago, under the auspices of the Chrysanthemum Society of America, offer premiums for the varieties under consideration, a premium list of which may be had by applying either to Edwin A. First Annual Convention to be held at the Art Institute, Chicago, November 12 and 13, 1902.

Among other features papers will be read by Harman C. Payne, London, England; Patrick O'Mara, New York; E. Gurney Hill, Richmond, Ind., John F. Cowell, Buffalo, N. Y.; Edwin Lonsdale, Chestnut Hill., Pa.; Elmer D. Smith, Adrian, Mich.; T. D. Hatfield, Wellesley, Mass.; William Scott, Buffalo, N. Y.; John N. May, Summit, N. J.; Grove P. Rawson, Elmira, N. Y.; F. P. Davis, Mobile, Ala.; C. W. Johnson, Rockford, Ill.; E. E. Pieser, Chicago, Ill.

THE KANSAS CITY SHOW.

Upon entering the Convention Hall at Kansas City one is greeted by the brilliant display of red, white, blue and green. Hundreds of flags draped from the wall and balconies form a grand sight. Ropings of wild smilax are festooned from the ceiling, while hundreds of miniature electric lights are intermingled with the roping. The elaborateness of the decoration must be seen to be appreciated, the decoration surpassing all other years in novelty of design and the success with which it has been carried out.

At the farthest end of the hall is stretched a canvas, upon which is represented the house and grounds at Mt. Vernon. From these historic grounds broad steps lead down into an old fashioned garden, laid out in small geometric designs, and enclosed by a four foot hedge of evergreens, as they are at the real Mt. Vernon. On the upper terrace are a number of plants loaned from the National Conservatory by President Roosevelt. On the newel posts of the stairs and landing are immense tubs with fine specimens of Boston fern. On either side of the garden are raised airy pavilions, white as ivory, over which runs a delicate tracery of wild smilax. In the general decoration there are four hundred flags six by ten feet in size, draped in fan shape in three rows around the building below each gallery. In the vaulting are six flags eighteen by forty feet, pendant in fan shape, while two immense flags twenty by forty made of bunting, extend horizontally across the ceiling, and they are set with jewels of about 900 incandescent lights. There are 6,000 electric lights used in the illumination and decoration of the hall.

There are two large pyramids of salvia plants, that are 25 feet long and 16 feet high and about 16 feet wide. These pyramids contain about 700 boxes with four plants to the box, and are built to just fit the exact space for each box and spacing. The whole was surmounted by a bouquet of white incandescent lamps. And all through the plants were a number of electric lights covering the banks. When illuminated the yellow lights give a beautiful golden effect among the scarlet salvia. The night display was beautiful and the orchestra played the "Star Spangled Banner." The play of lights was grand and brought out hearty applause from the public.

Owing to sickness or some other detention Mr. Lonsdale and Mr. Young were unable to attend and act as judges, which was a great disappointment to the management. Mr. Kanst acted as judge for cut flowers mostly, and some assistance was extended him by other florists. But the judging was necessarily very much delayed.

The competition was remarkably strong and from six to eight entries in a class. Following are the awards up to time of writing.

The Thompson Carnation Co. exhibited a fine vase of Enchantress which attracted the attention of all.

An Odd Display.

Tuesday was carnation and chrysanthemum day and the roof garden, where these exhibits were, was the most popular place in the hall. The roof garden had been very attractively arranged, and the display of chrysanthemums extended along the entire length of the east and west sides of the hall. The beams had been covered with southern smilax and the flowers were shown on a sloping bank of moss, with the bottles hidden in same and holding one flower in each, said to be the English style of exhibiting.

The exhibit, containing one bloom each of almost every known variety, was a collection of curiosities. The growers seemed to have done their best to present the most freakish looking specimens they could produce and some of them were so ugly that they attracted more attention than the pretty ones. Each flower seemed to vie with the others in being original. There were mums of various degrees of regularity and those of every shade of pink, red, yellow and lavender.

Perhaps the one flower that attracted more attention than any other was a chrysanthemum of about the normal size with petals some four or five inches in length and as fine as string, of a yellow and orange color. It was called the Golden Shower, and resembled a miniature shock of red hair more than anything else. There were several varieties which were almost perfect balls, and several that were as flat as sunflowers and looked like great daisies. Following are the awards:

Ninety-six varieties, one flower of each, 1st, $50, Nathan Smith & Son; 2nd, $30, E. G. Hill Co.; 3d, $20, H. W. Buckbee.

The fine display of Pandanus Sanderi by H. A. Dreer, was greatly admired, one lady even calling it "a beautiful begonia."

Mr. Pierson's beautiful new fern was also a strong attraction.

THE CHRYSANTHEMUM SOCIETY.

The annual meeting and exhibition of the Chrysanthemum Society of America will be held in Chicago in connection with the annual exhibition of the Horticultural Society of Chicago, Nov. 11 to 15.

This will be the first general meeting held during the chrysanthemum season and in connection with a general exhibition, and it will be a splendid opportunity for chrysanthemum growers to show their strength.

If you are one of them you should not fail to be represented by some blooms or plants in the exhibition and appear in person at the meetings.

ROSES.

Seasonable Hints.

With the approach of the dark, short days, watering and syringing will have to receive special attention. There is no part of the minutiæ of rose culture which requires more careful study than this will during the next four months, as the least careless or indiscriminate use of the hose during that period may be the means of ruining a crop of buds, or of causing permanent injury to the health of the stock. I revert to this subject at this season as I consider it of the utmost importance, and knowing how easy it is to forget the lessons of a year ago.

The transition from a lavish use of water during summer to the carefully apportioned and guarded supply necessary to the requirements of winter is often a question which is hard for a grower to get his assistants to understand, the inclination usually being to use more water than the plants require.

It is also impossible to lay down any rule limiting the supply or regulating its use as there are so many attending conditions which govern the different cases. Good common sense, and the habit of carefully observing all the circumstances are of far more importance than all the rules that can be evolved, as atmospheric conditions are ever changing and these have to be watched and the supplies regulated to correspond with the various changes.

Before proceeding with watering and syringing the benches should be carefully examined to find out what the wants are. If there are any dry spots these should be gone over and brought as near the condition of the rest of the bench as possible. The state of the weather is another condition which must be taken into account previous to syringing. If the weather is unfavorable this is better left undone than to take any risks, particularly with Beauties and Liberties, which if left wet over night are apt to get a dose of black spot which at this season will be a hard matter to get rid of.

Good judgment in carefully regulating the supply of water to suit the different stages of growth in the plants is another matter worthy of notice. Benches which are just off crop and which have not as yet made another growth call for a much less supply than they will do after the eyes have broken and got well started. The more vigorous the growth the greater will be the need of a more liberal supply. As the buds approach maturity the benches ought to be kept in a uniform condition, neither too wet nor too dry.

As proficiency in the art of watering can only be attained when the wants of the plants are ascertained these few hints may possibly direct the student along the right lines. Ribes.

CARNATION NOTES—EAST.

Disbudding.

Under no circumstances should you allow this operation to be neglected, done haphazard or to think that it can be put off until there is nothing else to do. There is always something to do, so it is best to have a system whereby each something will come in its turn. When disbudding, see that shoots, as well as buds are removed as far down the stem as is proper to cut when in bloom. At the same time arrange the plant to keep within its support. Break the buds off by a sort of side pull, thereby not injuring the foliage in any way.

There is such a thing as disbudding too soon, especially near the main bud, for in removing the small bud close under it, if not sufficiently developed to rub off easily the stem is likely to be injured, causing the bloom to turn at right angles, as you have probably seen some blooms of Frank Hardy chrysanthemum. I find that Lawson is very apt to do this: in fact, it was on this variety that I first noticed it, but the cause was soon discovered.

What are the advantages of disbudding, you may ask. First, you get a larger bloom; second, the stem holds the flowers more gracefully, not being weighted down with surplus buds; third, the blooms look more finished and can be packed, shipped and handled to arrive in fine condition at their destination; all of which results in a better price to the grower and a quicker sale for both wholesaler and store man. Further still, I believe the plants are less exhausted in a given time.

Weather.

We have been having a spell of fine weather in the east, but the nights are cold and you must have on some heat, watching it closely, for it is now when the days are warm and the nights cold that great damage can easily be done.

Thanksgiving is close upon us, but I trust you have improved each shining hour, and have gotten your plants in good condition to give just returns for the labor you have bestowed upon them, thus making you feel that you have something to be thankful for.

PHILADELPHIA.

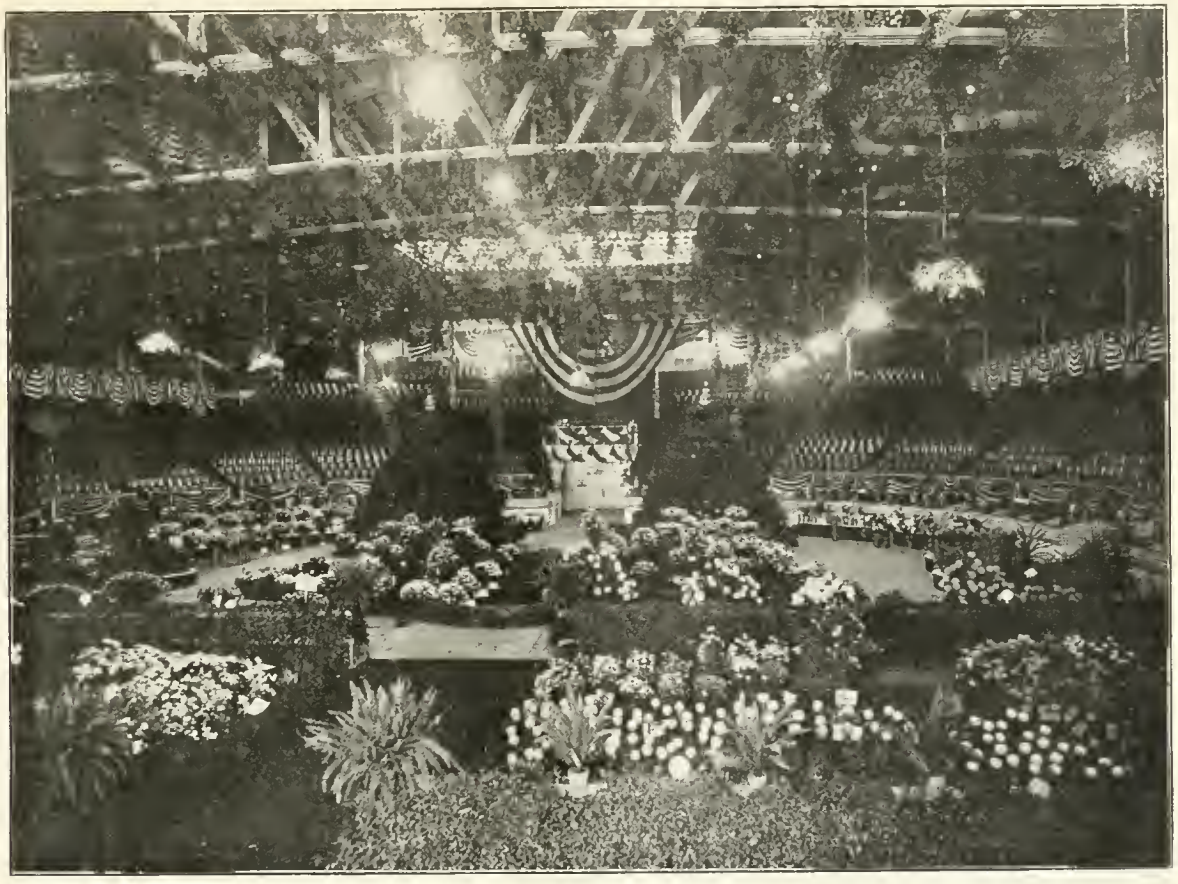
The Flower Market's Party.

This took place on Thursday evening, October 30, when nearly 500 guests assembled at the house warming. There were representative men from nearly every branch of our profession, while stately matrons and fair maids added grace to the scene by their presence. The hall and stage were beautifully decorated with cheese cloth of light shades, wild smilax, oak leaves and foliage plants. H. C. Geiger was in charge and to him great credit is due for the fine effect produced. He was ably seconded by the willing hands and choice material of many of our leading men.

The proceedings were opened at about 8:30 p. m., with an address by President Heacock, who spoke as follows:

Ladies and Gentlemen: It gives me great pleasure to welcome you here tonight in the name of the Philadelphia Wholesale Flower

The Vases of One Hundred Blooms at the Kansas City Show.



General View of the Kansas City Show.

Market. We are glad to see you take so much interest in an enterprise, the beginning of which I believe to be the marking of a new era to the Philadelphia florist, be he grower or retailer, and the advance of which will be as great as that of fifteen or twenty years ago, when the steam boiler and steam pipes superseded the brick flues. We are told by those older in the business that I am of the good old time when all one had to do was to grow the flowers and at sunrise he found the retailers at his gate begging for a chance to buy them. We all know how things have changed since then, until now the grower goes around seeking the man who wants to buy, and how often he misses him! You have doubtless all had the experience, after having hunted for some one in a crowd, and having at last given it up in despair and stood still, of having the one whom you sought all at once find you. This is just our case. While we have been hunting some one to buy our flowers, and have found him with more or less success, we have frequently missed him, much to the loss of both parties, and now we propose to have the product of our greenhouses in this beautiful, well-lighted room at 7:30 next Saturday morning, and on every morning thereafter, Sundays excepted.

We have all felt the need of just such a market, a central place where buyer and seller could find each other and do far more business in an hour than could heretofore be accomplished in a forenoon, and do it far more satisfactorily to both parties. New York has two and Boston one such market. Philadelphia, proverbially slow, is at last awake, and has the experience of her sister cities by which to profit. Philadelphia, with her million inhabitants, is going to support such a market. There is no question about that, and any grower who is not here at the start will be ashamed to let his descendants know it.

Our enterprise is of a healthy growth. Little did we think of such a company as this three months ago, chartered by the State of Pennsylvania, with a capital of $20,000. Our plans were humble. We said, if we could only get half a dozen growers to bring their flowers to a central place the market would be a success. Whomever we talked with about it seemed to be in favor of it. We then decided to have some capital, and thought $5,000 would be ample, and then it developed into $10,000, and finally stopped at the present figure. It seemed the larger we made it the more determined the growers were to have some of the stock, until now there are but a few shares left, and all the shares sold are held by those actually in the business of growing flowers, or growing or dealing in plants, trees, shrubs, seeds, bulbs and other merchandise of the general flower business for purposes of commerce, and our by-laws are so drawn that no other person can ever hold shares of stock in the company.

I feel that I would not be just to whom honor is due if I did not speak of the valuable work done by Mr. Samuel S. Pennock at the beginning of this project. Indeed, if it had not been for his earnest co-operation and services, this market would not be started at this time. It seems like the irony of fate that Mr. Pennock should be excluded from any part in the company, after having done so much for it, and all because he is a dreaded commission man! Mr. David Rust also rendered us most valuable assistance at a time when it was very difficult to get.

In conclusion, allow me to congratulate all interested in this market on our having procured the valued services of Mr. Charles Meehan as manager. Mr. Meehan is well known to all of you, and his character, ability and impartiality means success to the enterprise.

Robert Craig followed with remarks in his happiest vein. Then came an attractive program, full of wit, music and song, arranged by William P. Craig, who carried it through eighteen numbers and encores in fine style. The talent, well known in our business circles, was composed of Robert Kift, styled the "Father of the Market," who responded to "Magic;" Horace T. Dumont, of Dumont & Co.; A. G. Campbell and Leo Niessen. The last two named have fine voices.

Light refreshments and dancing closed an evening voted by many as the most successful affair of the kind ever given in the City of Brotherly Love. One of the features of the entertainment was the beautiful bouquets and baskets of flowers sent by many of the retailers with their best wishes for the success of the market.

Saturday, November 1, was the market's first day of business. By 7 a. m. nearly a score of growers had gathered in the big room; several leading retailers came early, and by 9 o'clock nearly all the cut flowers were sold—an unexpectedly good showing for the first day. The atmosphere of a mart was certainly there, and it ought to prove a great thing for Philadelphia business when the place gets fairly moving. S. Alfred Baur, of Erie, has the proud distinction of being the first out-of-town visitor, a distinction probably not realized at the moment.

Manager Meehan expressed himself as pleased with the start made. The next few weeks will be a very busy time for him. By the end of that time things should be running smoothly.

C. H. Miller.

It is with deep regret that I record the death of Charles H. Miller, which occurred at his home, Mt. Airy, on Sunday evening last. He was born in England in 1829 and came to this country just before the war closed. In 1876 he was made landscape gardener at Fairmount Park, which position he has held for the past twenty-six years. He was a man of great energy, and his reputation as a landscape architect is known over a large portion of the Eastern states. For many years he was engaged in the nursery business adjoining his home at Mt. Airy, but lately he had devoted his entire attention to the park and to his landscape business. A widow and two daughters survive him.

Notes.

Leo Niessen has made a new departure in offering plants to his out-of-town customers. This should prove a great convenience. His Liberties are exceptionally fine.

Joseph Heacock's reference to the work done for the market by S. S. Pennock was a graceful and deserved tribute.

William Swayne, of Kennett Square, sent the first early Timothy Eatons to W. J. Baker.

Eugene Bernheimer finds the demand for Queen of Edgely roses very encouraging.

Adolph Fahrenwald won first prize for American Beauties at the New York show. Hurrah for Philadelphia!

The Germantown Horticultural Society was the guest of John T. Morris, at Chestnut Hill, on Saturday. Mr. Morris' "fern grotto" was the chief point of interest.

Edwin Lonsdale was a judge at the New York show last week; he was especially pleased with the orchid exhibit.

A Lamb among the Lions.

A dinner was given at Boothby's on Thursday evening of last week by Mr. Battles, the prominent retailer, to his friends, the commission merchants, humorously described by the above heading. Those present were: H. H. Battles, Henry Bauer, Eugene Bernheimer, George Cooper, Horace T. Dumont, Frank Gaul, Geo. M. Moss, William J. Moore, Leo Niessen, Samuel S. Pennock and Edward Reid. After a very pleasant evening the party adjourned to the reception at the Flower Market.

Bowling.

Philadelphia is to be represented in the Bowlers' League this season by a team from which associate members are barred. This will weaken the team, as some of the associates are fine bowlers. The first game played this week was played with the Pennsylvania Club at the alleys in West Philadelphia. The Florists' team composed of Geo. M. Moss, captain, D. T. Connor, W. R. Gibson, Frank Polites and Walter Yates.

BOSTON.

A busy week for both retailer and wholesaler has been torn off the floral calendar; for the retailer, because he had a fairly good week's work, and for the wholesaler, because he had more goods than he could sell and put in overtime trying to do so.

It strikes me that the call for chrysanthemums is particularly good, especially for the medium qualities. If any are left over after the morning hours, it is usually a lot of poor ones and a few good yellow. The increase of the best chrysanthemum price from $20 to $30 per 100 is caused by the advent of large late varieties, some of which command the latter price.

There has been a surplus of poor to medium roses all the week, but practically all the carnations have been marketed. There was a scarcity along violet lines until Saturday, when a much larger supply developed. I note a few sweet peas in Galvin's, and they claim them to be the first for next year, rather than the last for this year. The first paper white narcissus I have seen were in Wollaston Heights Patterson's box a few days ago.

Notes.

There never was a week more bare of news incidentals than that of October 27 to November 1. James F. Quinn, of Brookline, did go and get married, consequently creating an important page of history for himself and one other. (May it be a long chapter, Mr. Quinn, and full of pleasant paragraphs.)

Too, the New England Flower Growers' Association held another meeting at the American House, expressed anew their determination to keep up their organization socially, at least, voted a committee to draw up a constitution, assessed each other a quarter and went home.

James Sutherland is back in Boston again as manager of N. F. Sutherland's Bromfield street store, which fact assures good trade there.

Grading Roses.

Perhaps you have noticed that in its price lists of roses the REVIEW makes use of the terms "special," "extra," "No. 1" and "No. 2." Well, as Shakespeare says, "What's in a name" and "A rose by any other name would smell as sweet," the fact is that most Boston growers grade as "No. 1," "No. 2," "No. 3" and "culls," not even using the term "extra" except when they really have a grade that is extra good for the season. The fact is that one man's "extra" or his "No. 1" may not be so good as another man's "No. 3." Again, if a customer approaches a retailer with an order for "extra" roses, he grades his stock up to that grade, no matter what number he bought them for. Another discrepancy, too, is the fact that the same man's goods will vary with the season and condition of his crop. For instance, a "No. 1" of early autumn would be classed among the "No. 3s" of winter. Now, why would it not be better to grade roses by inches in length of stem, for instance, "6-inch," "9-inch," "12-inch," "18-inch," "24-inch?" And the length should be counted only from the point where it will sustain the blossom in an erect position. Customers in ordering by mail or telephone usually have to resort to these terms or else state the price they wish to pay, because we salesmen are so loose in our vernacular.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

Trade in the cut flower line was not very encouraging among the retailers the past week. A few of them were busy with funeral work, but there was little, if any, transient trade. The pleasant weather is still with us, and it will take a good frost and some cold weather to place our business where it belongs.

The horse show opens tonight at the Coliseum, and as it is one of the fashionable society events of the season, it will, no doubt, use up quite a lot of first-class stock of all kinds. The principal call for this event is for Beauties, extra large chrysanthemums and violets.

The quality of the stock in roses is very fine in selects, suitable for bunches and cut flowers, but is limited in quantity; the bulk of the stock runs to seconds and thirds with short stems, good only for design work and brings only a fair price. First-class Beauties and Meteors have slacked up some the past week, while Brides, Maids, Gates and Perles have come in great quantities, and placards announcing fresh roses at 25 cents a dozen have made their appearance in downtown store windows.

In carnations the demand is good for first-class stock. Some very fine Lawson, Croeker, Crane, White Cloud, Morning Glory and Scott were seen the past week. Lawson to sell well must come with longer stems.

Violets are now very fine and the florists' windows are filled with them.

Chrysanthemums are now in full blast, and a few fine specimen blooms were seen in the West End flower stores, but the majority of the blooms are below the average in quality.

Notes.

Mr. A. Lloyd Vaughan, the popular salesman for E. H. Hunt, of Chicago, is in town accompanied by his wife and daughter. No salesman has more friends in St. Louis than Lloyd Vaughan.

Mr. E. T. Grave, of Richmond, Ind., was in town Saturday on his way to Kansas City's big show. Mr. Grave had a good word to say for the Review and the Kansas City show.

Mrs. M. S. Vesey, of Ft. Wayne, Ind., accompanied by her sister, spent Sunday in St. Louis on her way to Kansas City, and some of those big prizes on mums and roses will be taken back to Ft. Wayne.

Herbert Heller, of New Castle, Ind., was a caller Sunday. Herbert is out for those big prizes hung up at Kansas City.

Frank M. Ellis leaves Tuesday night to take in the Kansas City show and will spend the rest of the week in that city.

The Schuerman Floral Co. was busy all week decorating the Coliseum in green and white for the horse show, and the place never looked better. A car load of wild smilax was used.

Club Meeting.

Don't forget the big meeting of the Florists' Club next Thursday afternoon at 3 o'clock. The chrysanthemum exhibition promises to be large, with the following prizes offered: Best vase each of white, yellow, pink and any other color: first, $1.50; second, $1 each.

Two essays will be read, one by R. J. Mohr on "Hardy Bulbs for Cut Flowers," and the other by Dr. Halstedt on "How to Grow Chrysanthemums for Cut Flowers."

ST. PAUL.

Among the Growers.

R. C. Seeger has a nice range of about 27,000 square feet, located on Gorman avenue. He has been in business for a number of years, but not until the summer of 1900 did he complete his present range. Heretofore he has devoted nearly his entire area to roses, but this season he has put in a large number of carnations, thinking there are larger profits in these.

In the line of roses he is growing Brides, Bridesmaids, Golden Gates, Liberties, Meteors and Beauties for general crop. For summer blooming he has grown Kaiserin, Carnot, Testout and Meteor. In novelties he is growing a few Helen Gould. This appears to be a first-class flower in every particular. While not as large as some varieties it is of fine form, good substance, fragrant and of a very pleasing shade of dark cerise. The plants are clean, healthy and vigorous, well filled with buds. It seems to be a valuable acquisition to our list of really good varieties.

Mr. Seeger was one of the first in this section to plant the Liberty, but I must say it is disappointing here as I have found it elsewhere. The introducer advises every one to get a good growth of wood before allowing the buds to develop. Such advice is good, but how to get the growth of wood is what is bothering Mr. Seeger, as well as others. Some grafted plants showed up better than those grown on their own roots.

The Mme. Testout as grown here is certainly a grand variety for summer and fall blooming, and will be planted extensively next season. Carnot and Kaiserin have also given excellent results during the summer. These will be kept in bloom until after Christmas, when they will be cut back and allowed to rest until spring.

Fairly good success has attended the cultivation of Beauties at this place and they are considered as profitable as any variety grown, both for summer and winter crops. Brides, Maids, Meteors and Golden Gates are grown here in large quantities and are profitable for winter cutting.

His collection of carnations consists of the following standard varieties: Mrs. Lawson, Mrs. Bradt, Prosperity, White Cloud, Norway, Crane, Mrs. Joost, Daybreak, Marquis and Flora Hill. The plants are very strong, thrifty and clean and should yield immense crops later on. In one house, which is rather dark in winter, is grown the Mrs. Joost. The proprietor informs me that this variety will thrive as well in the shaded house as most varieties do in sunlight.

The product of these ranges is sold mostly at wholesale to the trade in St. Paul. A stand in one of the department stores helps work off the cheaper grades and disposes of some stock that would otherwise go to waste.

A few Sprengeri and plumosus asparagus are grown, as well as some bedding plants, but for the most part his houses are devoted to roses and carnations.

Carl Peterson has recently built two houses 16x100 feet, which are planted to carnations and a general line of bedding stock. His plants are looking fine and he is beginning to cut quite a goodly number each day. He grows most of the leading varieties of carnations, but none of the fancy sorts.

Keiper & Powles, on Stryker avenue, have five houses, containing about 5,000 square feet of glass. In addition to this they have several hundred hotbed sash employed in the business. Their specialty is asters, which are grown in large quantities to supply the local dealers. Many of them are grown in frames, being sown late so as to be at their prime during the early fall months, when most outside stock is gone.

Sweet peas are grown quite largely in the winter and large quantities of geraniums are propagated for spring bedding purposes. By specializing this firm has built up a very good and prosperous business.

ber 10, 11 and 12. Quite a number of the florists have made entries for the occasion and a nice show will no doubt be had. Frank Berry, of Stillwater, assisted by two ladies, will be judges of cut flowers. O. A. Nordquist, of St. Paul, Thos. Hall, of Minneapolis, and Prof. Green, of the State Experimental Farm, have been appointed judges of plants. X. Y. Z.

CINCINNATI.

The Market.

The cold weather, for which we have been looking, made its appearance the first of last week, and had the desired effect of immediately shortening the supply and improving the quality of all kinds of stock. Mums arrived in large quantities, but the shortness of other stock made them sell out fast and at good prices.

All Souls' day created quite a demand for stock, but mostly of a cheap grade. Small mums, and cheap roses and carnations went as fast as they came in. Ivory chrysanthemums proved to be the winners, and were disposed of by the thousands. They sold from 4 to 8 cents each. This mum is certainly a favorite, and one of the best paying ones in the market. Some very fine Bonnaffon were in and sold from 10 to 20 cents each.

On Saturday afternoon and evening, the Jabez Elliott Flower Market was a mass of bloom of all kinds, and it looked as if there would be great quantities left after the day's business was over; but it was not so as the demand was great and the day proved to be one of the best in the history of the market.

Roses and carnations are scarce, but the bright weather we are having will soon remedy this. The quality of stock is improving, and an advance in price is bound to occur all along the line, very soon.

Great quantities of mums were shipped by local wholesale houses to New Orleans, and this outside demand helped to relieve the market of its surplus stock.

Nathan Smith & Son, of Adrian, Mich., had chrysanthemum No. 35 before the committee Saturday. It was of a very light shade of pink. The flower was built on the Queen order, but had a very long neck.

Next Saturday, November 8, will be the next regular meeting of the Florists' Society, also the annual chrysanthemum show. The date appears to be well chosen and a fine exhibit is looked forward to. The list of prizes offered published in these columns some three weeks ago, are very good and worth competing for. Many local growers have already expressed their intention of entering and some out-of-town growers are expected to make entries.

Geo. Meyers, of the Avondale Flower Co., had a wedding decoration the past week, which was a credit to his ability as a florist. In the church he used selected Col. D. Appleton mums, banking them on the altar, and about the front of the church. The effect created by these massive mums was superb, and the decoration as a whole, was one of the best seen in the city for some time.

During the past week, H. D. Edwards, the leading florist of Newport, Ky., was taken very suddenly with nervous prostration. Luckily, it did not prove to be as serious as at first thought, and he is now able to be about.

Al. Forder had the misfortune to run a needle into his foot. The doctors have not been able to locate it, and an operation will undoubtedly be necessary.

Visitors were: Paul Berkowitz, of Philadelphia, Pa., and H. P. Smith, of Piqua, Ohio. C. J. Ohmer.

PITTSBURG.

The Market.

The large receipts of all kinds of flowers continued the past week, and up to this writing plenty of all kinds of stock can be had. The commission and wholesale houses report business very good, but prices low on medium and cheaper grades; the choicest grades remain the best sellers. This applies to everything coming in.

In roses, Maids are slightly "off crop," but enough for all orders. Brides are now on, and some very choice stock can be had. Beauties are not much in demand.

Carnations are plentiful, and the quality is much better. Among the fancy varieties worthy of mention are: Lawson, Crocker, Marquis and Dorothy. These are exceptionally fine for so early in the season. All white varieties in the better grades still remain scarce.

Chrysanthemums are very abundant, the medium-sized ones selling the best. Culls are not salable at any figure.

Quantities of California violets are now arriving from the Lancaster district. The Cut Flower Co. is handling most of them.

Charles Koenig, of Milvale, is cutting some very good Lawson and Dorothy carnations. His stock looks very promising for a large crop for Thanksgiving.

J. R. Fotheringham, representing F. R. Pierson Co., of Scarboro, N. Y., was with us last week. He is booking heavy orders for his new fern, Nephrolepis Piersoni.

Paul Berkowitz, of H. Bayersdorfer & Co., of Philadelphia, was in this city last week, calling on the trade. He reports a heavy demand for Christmas novelties.

Arthur Langhans, of Wheeling, was a visitor the past week.

Arthur Hall, of A. W. Smith's, is at his home laid up with typhoid fever. We hope for his speedy recovery.

The chrysanthemum shows at Schenley Park, and West Park, Allegheny, are in fine condition, and many out-of-town visitors are inspecting them. Superintendent Hamilton, of the Allegheny Parks, sent out a squad of park police early the other morning to arrest the early pedestrians who violated a park ordinance by making short cuts across the grass. Fifteen arrests were made by 7 a. m. This, no doubt, will stop the offense.

At a meeting of the Florists' Club to be held next Wednesday evening, November 12, President Falconer will exhibit a collection of new varieties of chrysanthemums. Mr. Falconer went to New York as one of the judges of the big chrysanthemum show.

Randolph & McClements decorated Carnegie Library, Art Gallery, and Music Hall for Founders' day last Thursday. The decorations were very elaborate.

The Pittsburg Rose and Carnation Co., at Bakerstown, are cutting some good carnations of White Cloud, Lawson, Goethe, Marquis, Joost, and Mr. Burki's pet red one, Hector.

Hoo-Hoo.

CHICAGO.

In addition to the report on the market, to be found elsewhere in this issue, it might be stated that some extra fine Timothy Eaton and Appleton mums are now arriving. Robinson and Whilldin are now practically all cut out. Bonnaffon is now much in evidence, and Autumn Glory, Xeno, Lavender Queen and White Bonnaffon have made their appearance, while Ivory, White Ivory, Morel, Pennsylvania, Bassett, Hurrell, Wanamaker, Mayflower, Lady Hanham and Childs are still with us.

The annual exhibition of the Horticultural Society and the Chrysanthemum Society of America opens at the Art Institute next Tuesday. Every grower for the Chicago market should be represented by a display. The annual meeting of the Chrysanthemum Society will be held in connection with the exhibition, and the annual banquet of the Florists' Club will take place during the show.

The reports from Kansas City are interesting a good many Chicago growers just now. The fact that Peter Reinberg captured first and Benthey & Co. second in the contest for the big prizes for 100 American Beauties is cause for some local pride.

Kennicott Bros. Co. are receiving some extra fine Marie Louise violets from a Wisconsin grower.

McKellar & Winterson have enlarged their weekly bulletin to blanket sheet size. It's now almost a catalogue.

Hughes, the W. Van Buren street florist, has issued an announcement of his "Annual chrysanthemum show" and the dates given are "Oct. 22 to Dec. 31."

Leonard Kill, of Peter Reinberg's and L. Coatsworth, of Benthey & Co., are in Kansas City this week doing a few things in the rose classes at the K. C. show.

The florists opened their tournament at Michelson and De Profts Bowling Alleys on Tuesday. The League consists of four teams, namely McKellar & Winterson's, Vaughan's, Retailers and Wholesalers. The contests resulted in the Retailers defeating the Vaughan team three games and the McKellar & Winterson's took three from the Wholesalers. The latter teams rolled six men.

The ladies were well represented and give promise of defeating some of the men in the near future. Following are the scores of the evening:

DRESHERTOWN, PA.—The employes at the nursery of Thomas Meehan & Sons, who have for some time past been studying botany at the nursery office, have now formally organized a society under the title Thomas Meehan Horticultural Society, and have elected officers as follows: Robert B. Cridland, Pres.; Ernest Manning, Vice pres.; S. Newman Baxter, Sec. and Treas. The society is exclusively for employes and all are eligible, from the boy who pulls weeds to the oldest veteran. At the meetings the discussions are eminently practical and as a result the employers as well as the employes are benefited. The plan is worthy of adoption by all firms having a considerable number of employes.

CONSISTENCY.

Why all these efforts to expose the operations of the palm swindler, naming his victims and thus putting them in a position to be chaffed at?

Why publish the doings of the slick individual who passes worthless checks and flaunt the names of his dupes?

Why proclaim the existence of a fraudulent subscription agent?

Why this continual besmirching the practice of the U. S. government in its effort to distribute free seeds, calling it a humbug and a farce?

Why borrow articles from other papers, one in point being entitled "Uncle Sam as a Florist"?

Supposedly to check the evils (real or imaginary) and all will agree that it is eminently the proper course. But perhaps it may be done to give an opportunity for all to form an opinion of the business acumen of those who confess to being duped, or that it offers a chance for certain ones to be continually crying over spilled milk.

It has been said that every evil has a remedy; evidently these are exceptions and the guilty remain in concealment, pointing to each other and saying "Thou art the man." Certainly these evils continue to exist in spite of all efforts, directed or misdirected.

Perhaps the concerted efforts of a Nutmeg State Florists' Club, whose powers are referred to in a recent editorial as being of such magnitude that the withdrawal of their trade from certain parties would result in their non-existence, would prove of service.

Consistency, thou art a jewel: God grant that the straight shoot aiming to grow into a vigorous plant may attain its object, even though the atmosphere around it may be so seeped in the hot breath of the Tammany tiger that truth would almost seem to have ceased to be a virtue.

The cut flower market is still very much overstocked with nearly all kinds of stock. Carnations and tea roses, especially the poorer grades, can be had at buyers' prices, and a great many remain unsold. Chrysanthemums have fallen off in price and are selling much better; at present figures they seem to be preferred to any of the other showy flowers. Double violets are now very fine; S. S. Pennock sold ten thousand sweet peas. Reid and Niessen are handling sweet peas, and Bernheimer some giant daisies.

Timothy Eaton is the highest priced chrysanthemum on the market today; one dozen specials brought $5. Mrs. Perrin and Maud Dean are the best pinks, Grace the best pale pink, Mrs. Parks, Col. Appleton and Major Bonnaffon the best yellows, and George W. Childs the best red. For small, perfect flowers there is no white like Ivory. For large blooms Mrs. Robinson vies with Eaton. PHIL.

This week shows no actual improvement and practically no change in quotations from last week. A condition of uniform dullness prevails. Everything is abundant, and quality unsurpassed, but "there's nothing doing." But better things are certainly ahead. The election is over, coal is down to $6.50 a ton and the flower buyers are coming back to the city.

The cooler weather did not remain long, and it has been remarkably warm for the season; in fact, almost summer temperature at times. As a result the supply is still unwieldy, though trade is undoubtedly very fair for the season. The fact that carnation blooms from plants outside are still being received at this late date tells the story of the remarkable weather this fall.

The quality of roses continues to improve, with the best growers, but there is an enormous quantity of undergrade stuff coming in and this is the most difficult to move.

The changes from the quotations of last week are very few and slight. There are oceans of violets. The chrysanthemum situation remains practically unchanged.

Outdoor stuff has practically disappeared after one freeze. Trade fair to good. Many weddings and social affairs create general demand. Prospects favorable to satisfactory season. Weather perfect.

The weather has been splendid. Has cooled off enough not to rush the chrysanthemum crop, but the demand is not equal to the supply yet, for there were too many mums grown. Carnations and roses are moving better, but prices are low, though the grade is up to the standard. American Beauties are holding out, both in price and demand.

Cosmos are very fine and moving rapidly. Violets are much improved and sell well, good stock bringing 75 to 90 cents per 100. Sweet peas have made their start with Blanche Ferry in the lead. Callas are coming slow, but good stock. Good smilax none too plentiful.

DETROIT.

A Visit to Mt. Clemens.

On Thursday, October 30, the Detroit Florists' Club to the number of forty-three, having been invited by John Breitmeyer's Sons, R. Klagge, James Taylor and the other Mt. Clemens florists, paid a visit to the Bath City, the home of the violet. Leaving Detroit by special car at 10 a. m., they arrived at Breitmeyer's at 11, where a substantial lunch, spread in the large sorting room, was in readiness, to which the party did ample justice, then separating into groups they began a long walk through the various houses to inspect the stock. The writer, being more in touch with carnations and chrysanthemums, spent his time in looking them over, and must say that with few exceptions they are in fine condition and give promise of a rich harvest soon. Mr. Fred Breitmeyer will make several entries of mums at the coming show in Chicago.

At the sound of the bell the party reassembled in the lunch room and went from there over to the house of the Violet King, Robert Klagge, who has made extensive improvements the past season by building another house, a large brick boiler room and coal shed and installing a new boiler. Here, as usual, was seen the modest violet, grown as only "Bob" can grow it in this section, while his carnations are a sight, especially a bench of Prosperity, which was full of flowers on stems twenty inches long, stiff and erect. Here, again, was the inner man looked after.

Moving across the street we came to the place of Gutschow & Son, enlarged by two houses since the last visit of the writer, which are planted with carnations and violets, and they are looking fine. Here meat and drink were provided for the third time since 11 a. m. and it was not yet 2:30 p. m!

Next was a long walk to the establishment of James Taylor, which is located near the cemetery. Mr. Taylor is an Englishman who can grow good carnations and mums and very fair violets, who does not drop his h's, and whose wife can make as fine coffee and doughnuts as any florist could wish. I cannot help digressing a little here to say that Mr. Taylor showed good judgment in serving the coffee instead of other lubricators, for by this time something normal and common was needed to "kind of settle things" and level them up.

Another stiff tramp to J. Carey's place was well repaid by the sight of the elegant roses, which at the present time fill the larger part of his plant, the other houses being filled with mums and carnations, all of which are looking well. After the usual feed and oil up (and where on earth do florists put away all they eat and drink? And the thin ones seem to have more capacity than the fat ones) Mr. E. A. Scribner was chosen temporary chairman and called on several members for talks and songs, and a most enjoyable hour was spent. Mr. Trillow, of Chicago, and Mr. Zerkmann, representing Sigmund Geller, of New York, were present and contributed to the entertainment. A vote of thanks was tendered the Mt. Clemens florists for the very enjoyable day.

Club Notes.

Prof. L. R. Taft, of the Michigan Agricultural College, gave the club a very interesting talk and had a very appreciative audience. At the next meeting we will have a musical program.

Some ten or twelve members will visit Chicago to attend the chrysanthemum show.

Bowling goes on every Monday evening and some good scores are being made.

J. K. Stock is slowly recovering from a long siege of typhoid fever.

The Michigan Cut Flower Exchange celebrated its first anniversary on November 1 by giving a spread, which was enjoyed by some thirty of the craft.

RAG.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICH.

We have been having bright days and cool nights mostly, with a few rainy days. Carnations are flowering freely and are of fair quality, but in spite of the quantity cut, the demand more than keeps pace with the supply and nothing is going to waste. Mums are in their glory and moving fast. The main varieties now in are: White Robinson, yellow Robinson, Major Bonnaffon, V. Morel, J. K. Shaw, pink Ivory and white Ivory. Shaw for an early pink is fine, being a great improvement over Mrs. Perrin.

Roses are in crop, but none are going to waste. Business continues good, and from indications will be even better than last year.

The Grand Rapids Floral Co. has all its carnations housed, but still has one more house to rebuild, which is expected to be finished this fall and used for bedding stock, etc.

There is a new florist in town and Eli Cross is the happy father.

Henry Smith is hurrying his new houses along as fast as possible, one of which will be used for green stuff exclusively and will be of large size.

At the recent West Michigan Fair, the only exhibitors were Henry Smith and Crabb & Hunter. In the design entries, some good work was put up. Premiums were awarded as follows: Best design, Henry Smith first, Crabb & Hunter, second. Basket of flowers, Crabb & Hunter first, Smith second. Table arrangement, same award. Cut roses and carnations, Smith first, Crabb & Hunter second. The show was a financial success, and was held this time independent of the State Fair.

Crabb & Hunter have acquired the Robertson farm of eighty-four acres adjoining the Masonic Home grounds, and intend to build a modern range of glass in the spring and to go extensively into fruit growing. The farm is leased for seven years, subject to terms of sale.

Harm Bruins-Slot and Helen Richmann are married, and the craft wish them a happy career. Harm still continues with the firm of Bruins-Slot & Sons.

Seed Trade News.

SPRINGFIELD, MASS.

Of course all are familiar with and deplore the almost absolute failure of cucumber and the general crop of vine seeds. Also the returns from northern New York and Canada, and up on the Michigan thumb, of peas and beans and the first earlies will average less than 20 per cent of the ordinary calculated yield.

Sweet corn records somewhat better, as we expect a good crop from our Connecticut growers in general. The western reports return about 75 per cent. These reports, which are constantly growing more serious to the wholesale seedsman, will of course advance prices very materially, and the wholesaler who has not sold much in advance will be away ahead of the game by the first of May.

We understand the canners are going to any length to secure seed stock, and offering more than double contract prices for Alaska and Knott's Excelsior peas. Tomato seed is also very scarce, the price running even higher than last year.

Returns from the German growers are very discouraging regarding asters, though the pansy stock is very fine and at very reasonable prices. We look to California for our best aster seed today, and from all accounts expect a full crop from that source.

Of course the yarn about California sweet peas not being desirable to plant this side of the Mississippi has been exploded, and while the named varieties of sweet peas are not as carefully rogued and do not run as true to name as we would wish, the vitality is all that could be desired, and the general mixtures which are put out from California, with the exception of the very cheap stuff, will certainly prove satisfactory to every one.

The B. L. Bragg Co.

Mr. S. M. Pease, of the Cleveland Seed Co., Rochester, N. Y., says: "The weather has been described as the worst on record, with crops all ruined, and it has been so reiterated that we have come to believe it and to appease our forlorn condition have made ourselves quite lusty and almost cheerful by putting up prices during all these long, dreary days of anxiety. The holders of coal have not had all the pleasure. Seedsmen as a rule are quite a bright set of people and know pretty well how to take advantage of the acts of Providence and see to it that it turns them an honest penny. It is a very bad season that does not work to the advantage of some one. In spite of the very short pea and bean crop, sweet corn almost a failure, oats very disappointing in yield, cabbage so abundant a market cannot be found for the surplus, potatoes and apples rotting, I believe general conditions were never more favorable than now. Farmers have been hard hit in many instances but as a rule they are all right and prosperous times will continue barring unfavorable legislation or similar causes."

Portland, Ore.—The Portland Seed Company has increased its capital stock from $25,000 to $50,000.

John Hyde, statistician of the Department of Agriculture, in his report issued Sept. 10, says: The acreage of clover has been considerably reduced since last year, only two of the principal states—Maryland and Ohio—reporting even a small increase. The other important states—except Kansas, in which state the area is the same as last year—report decreases, ranging from 1 per cent in Wisconsin to 12 in California. In California, Utah and Colorado conditions are 1, 6 and 22 points, respectively, below their ten-year averages, while all other states—except Maryland, in which state the condition is the same as the ten-year average—report conditions ranging from 11 to 28 points above such average.

During August the exports of seeds from the United States were as follows: Clover, $20,592; cotton, $9,682; flaxseed, $7,080; timothy, $7,809; other grass seeds, $2,766; all other seeds, $5,839; a total of $53,768, against a total of $131,698 for August last year. The greatest reduction was in the exports of flaxseed, which amounted to $102,062 in 1901 and only $7,080 in 1902. The largest amounts were exported to the United Kingdom and British North America.

The annual distribution of free seed has been begun by the department at Washington, the start being made several months earlier than usual. This year the enormous number of 40,000,000 packages of seed, weighing about 1,000 tons, will be distributed. The free seed evil is expanding instead of being curtailed.

The California State Board of Horticulture has taken action looking to the exclusion of asparagus roots grown outside of the state, the intention being to prevent the importation of plants affected by the asparagus rust.

Zavalla, Texas.—R. C. Brashears is building a seed house and preparing to handle seed for this section.

D. M. Ferry, the Detroit seedsman, has withdrawn from the race for senator.

COSMOS.

Mrs. Theodosia B. Shepherd, of Ventura, Cal., has been improving the cosmos for the last ten years, and now has some very fine forms, with flowers four to five inches in diameter.

"Pink Butterfly" is a pink flower with broad petals that are placed at angles with each other, giving a very taking effect.

"Pond Lily" is snowy white, with large, round, overlapping petals.

"Rainbow" is a blending of white, pink, mauve or red, with various other color tones, and the flowers are large and finely formed.

There are many other named varieties and the strain as a whole has been pronounced by experts to be the finest in existence.

Geneva, N. Y.—Vinton A. Clark has been appointed assistant horticulturist at the state experiment station here.

Iona, Mich.—Vincent Bros. have purchased the Thornton greenhouses and intend to push the business.

CHRYSANTHEMUM SOCIETY OF AMERICA.

President Herrington has announced committees to examine chrysanthemum seedlings and sports on dates as follows: October 4, 11, 18, 25, November 1, 8, 15, 22, 29, 1902.

Boston, Mass.—E. A. Wood, chairman, care Boston Flower Market, No. 1 Park street; James Wheeler, William Nicholson.

New York, N. Y.—E. Dailledouze, chairman, care New York Cut Flower Company, Twenty-sixth street and Sixth avenue; James W. Withers, William H. Duckham.

Philadelphia, Pa.—A. B. Cartledge, chairman, 1514 Chestnut street; William K. Harris, John Westcott.

Chicago, Ill.—James S. Wilson, chairman, care J. B. Deamud, 51 Wabash avenue; George Stollery, E. Wienhoeber.

Cincinnati, O.—Albert Sunderbruch, chairman, care Cincinnati Cut Flower Company, 437 and 439 Main street; James B. Allan, E. G. Gillett.

Exhibits to receive attention from the committees must in all cases be prepaid to destination, and the entry fee of $2 should be forwarded to the secretary not later than Tuesday of the week preceding examination.

Anyone having a variety in season before or after the dates fixed can have the same passed upon by specially notifying the chairmen of committees. EDWIN LONSDALE, Secretary, Wyndmoor, Chestnut Hill, Philadelphia, Pa.

Hastings, Neb.—Business has been good, everything selling out and at good prices. The recent street fair brought 35,000 to 50,000 visitors to the city. The flower parade was the leading attraction and was pronounced the best ever seen in the state. Charles Winkler has purchased over 300 acres on West Seventh street, which will be devoted to select nursery stock, small fruits and vegetables, and he will also build some additional greenhouses. Mr. Winkler was awarded first prize for exhibit of winter wheat at the fair.

Council Bluffs, Ia.—C. J. Rafter, claiming to conduct The Twin City Nursery of Council Bluffs, sold some nursery stock to W. C. Bender, of Salix, Ia., that turned out badly. Mr. Bender could not find the nursery supposed to be in this city and communicated with the chief of police, who, after investigation, replied: "C. J. Rafter, of Yankton, S. D., is the man who gets mail out of the box named. We understand he buys stock at different nurseries throughout the country, and fills orders from here, but has no nursery here."

Pontiac, Ill.—Mr. Orlin B. Miller, the florist, and Miss Pauline Menke were married Oct. 26. The decorations at the wedding were very profuse and handsome. The couple have the best wishes of many friends.

Newark, N. J.—The business of C. W. Stuart & Co., nurserymen, has been incorporated with a capital stock of $24,000. The directors are: C. W. Stuart, J. M. Pitkin, Jr., and C. H. Stuart, all of Newark.

To be in time for our Thanksgiving Number, to be issued next week, copy for advs. must reach us by next Wednesday morning, November 12, at the very latest.

By using the classified advertisements in the Review I can dispose of surplus stock at little expense.—Harvey B. Snow, Camden, N. Y.

Delavan, Wis.—The Phoenix Nursery Co., of which A. P. Wilkins is president, has purchased 29 acres of land, the consideration being $4,700.

TORONTO.

Trade during the past week has been exceptionally good from a florist's standpoint, and without exception, all the retail men spoken to during the week have nothing but good reports of the amount of business they are doing. We are very glad that this is the case, and it speaks volumes for the growth of floriculture in and around Toronto. In Canada a few years ago flowers were looked upon as a luxury, but they now seem to be classed along with the necessities, and no social function is considered complete without them.

Chrysanthemums are still in the lead, and we are now seeing some of the finer varieties coming in. Violets have improved much, in quality, as well as in quantity, and the demand seems to keep them pretty well picked up. Roses and carnations are in fair supply, but we expect a shortage in roses very soon now, as we hear that most of the growers are cutting back their best houses to have them in for the holidays.

A visit to Dunlop's conservatories a few days ago showed the stock looking up to the mark, especially his carnations, of which he has some twenty odd new varieties that look very promising. Mr. Dunlop is very reticent about condemning any varieties that do not look equal to their neighbors on the bench, and invariably has some good excuse to offer; he cannot be coaxed to even recommend any one or two varieties as the best commercial varieties, but we expect in a few weeks to be able to spot out what can be considered the best and most profitable ones for the small grower to grow without having to take a few of the great number of varieties that are now on the market.

One of the latest developments in Toronto in the florists' line, is a new Gardeners' and Florists' Union, which, we are told, is affiliated with the A. F. of L. Of course do not think that the gardeners and florists were driven to organize a union through any harsh treatment that they received at the hands of their employers, but, as they say, it is just a little ounce of preventive. However, anybody that may require any information as to the whys and wherefores of this organization would do well to communicate with Davy Cooper, their very enthusiastic secretary.

Sinclair has just completed a new dust-proof case for his large stock of baskets, which will be of material advantage in handling these delicate goods.

Mr. C. H. Joosten, New York, sends us a copy of his trade catalogue of plants, hardy ornamental trees and shrubs, conifers, roses, herbaceous plants, etc., the stock which he sells in America as agent for the Boskoop Nursery Association, of Holland. The list is very full and complete and includes a great deal of interest to the trade.

RETAIL ADVERTISING.

The retailer catering to a critical trade and appealing to people of refinement as well as of wealth is often puzzled as to the kind of advertising that will be effective and in no way offensive. The problem seems to us to have been admirably solved by the Ernst Wienhoeber Co., Chicago, who have recently issued an artistically gotten up book of engagements, or to quote from the title page: "A book in which may be chronicled coming engagements and various happenings."

The book is 3½ by 5¼ inches in size and on the cover appears a bunch of violets in color and the simple title "Engagements" in gilt. After several blank pages appears a small engraving of their store and a title page in which the firm is mentioned as the publishers, and the copyright mark. Then come blank pages for engagements during October to May inclusive, each month having a specially designed title page, the dates of two days appearing in old English type on each page. Following this are a few pages on flowers in season during the months noted, written from the view point of the flower lover rather than that of the florist. Across the bottoms of these pages appears the firm's full name and address, separated from the reading matter by a rule. It was designed by Mr. George W. Wienhoeber and is certainly a great credit to him.

The cost of issuing this little book must have been considerable, but that it will prove a profitable investment there can be little doubt. No recipient can fail to be favorably impressed and each one is sure to make use of such a helpful aid to the memory. And while doing so they are frequently reminded of the florist by whom it was presented.

But it would be a mistake to have made use of a book that in any way suggested cheapness. To be effective with critical people it must appeal by its excellence and originality in design, and were these essentials lacking it would be better to save the expense altogether as it then might do more harm than good.

RETURNING CONDENSATION.

What make of steam pump would return to boiler water condensed in heating pipes? The boiler is on surface of ground. Size required for 15,000 feet of 1¼-inch pipe. Steam pressure 2 to 5 lbs. Want a pump, not a steam trap.

G. H. B.

In reply to G. H. B., I know of no steam pump which will operate successfully with the low pressure he mentions. If he has access to an electric current, a small electrically driven pump could be installed which would fulfill all requirements.

New York.

Unionville, Pa.—Mr. Joseph Renard died about two months ago after a business career of twenty years. He was the successor of Thomas Seal as owner of the Rosewood Greenhouses, and was widely known as a carnation grower. Mr. Renard had customers all over the world for his carnation cuttings. His successor is Mr. G. de la Rigaudiere, who bought the property and in partnership with Charles Brown, of Canton, O., has completely renovated the plant and put it in first-class condition.

CLEVELAND.

Business has been very good lately, quite a large number of funerals and a great many weddings helping trade considerably. The mum is with us, some good, some bad and some indifferent, but as a general thing those I have seen have been very good, with the later, and of course better, ones to hear from. Roses and carnations are both improving in quality. The supply of carnations promises to be larger than ever before, as many more have been planted than in previous seasons. We have not yet had a general killing frost, though some sections have been touched.

A visit to the Storrs & Harrison Co., at Painesville, found them busy digging and storing trees and shrubs for the winter. The season has been so wet that the digging has been delayed. Their houses are full of miscellaneous stock for their large mail trade.

R. Addicott & Son have their houses about finished and all planted. Their stock is looking fine, especially two houses of roses that were carried over.

Bate Bros. have a fine lot of stock, especially a house of roses, which is in prime condition. Several houses of roses now in their third year were making splendid growth. They have not yet put the glass over their violets.

A. Graham & Son were busy getting in their ivies, of which they grow a great many; also vincas, a hundred-foot bench being filled with them. They have a lot of Lorraine begonias in fine shape.

Mary A. Tilton, wife of Alfred Tilton and mother of Geo. A. Tilton, died October 28, and was laid at rest October 30.

TENEP.

HOUSTON, TEX.—W. W. Westgate has returned to this city from Seattle and has again engaged in the florist business. He is now president and general manager of the Houston Seed and Nursery Co., 1906 Bagby street. S. T. Middleton remains as secretary and treasurer. Mr. Westgate is moving all the stock from the old stand on Washington street, where his mother, Mrs. N. E. Westgate, was in business until her death about a year ago.

CORRECTION—In the advertisement of Nathan Smith & Son in our last two issues the quotation on Nephrolepis davallioides furcans should have been $5.00 and $6.00 per dozen instead of per 100. The error was no doubt apparent to all.

If you have not already mailed copy for your adv. in our Thanksgiving Number, to be issued next week, do not fail to mail same at once or you may be too late.

"A SYNDICATE."

According to reports in the daily press a "syndicate" has been formed by Joseph Fleischman, of New York, for the purpose of "controlling the flower market" in the large cities. According to the report it is "a million dollar syndicate" and is "to knock out the middlemen by raising its own flowers and selling them direct to the public." Also: "Incidentally the price of flowers is to be reduced 50 per cent in the stores to be owned or controlled by the syndicate."

The fact that Mr. Fleischman has led the daily press to widely disseminate such "news" as this indicates that he has great ability as an advertiser. The dear reporters, in their anxiety to get hold of anything to make a sensation, have given the astute Mr. Fleischman an immense free adv., the value of which can hardly be estimated. The assertion that the prices would be reduced 50 per cent in the syndicate stores (the Fleischman syndicate, of course,) makes the free adv. a gem. Think up another, Mr. Fleischman. It's much more effective and a whole lot cheaper than buying space at regular rates.

KALAMAZOO, MICH.

Here, as elsewhere, mums are having a depressing effect on the marketing of other stock. During the first part of the month the demand and prices were good, but with the advent of mums these took a big drop.

The supply of roses is not very large, most of the growers being a little off crop just at present, but the quality is good and there are prospects of a fine cut later on. Beauties have been particularly fine and plentiful.

Carnations are not overplentiful; the crops are just beginning. The quality is excellent and the supply promises to be large.

Mums are plentiful and of a high grade. The Van Bochoves have had an extra fine display, particularly in pot plants.

Reports from all around regarding stock and prospects are very satisfactory.

Visitors: F. W. Creighton, Philadelphia, and A. W. Gonter, Battle Creek, Mich. R.

ELMIRA, N. Y.—The annual fall exhibition of the Elmira Horticultural Society will be held Nov. 11 and 12. A silver cup is offered for the best seedling chrysanthemum not yet disseminated.

THE EXHIBITIONS.

CHICAGO.

The exhibition of the Chrysanthemum Society of America and the Horticultural Society of Chicago opened Tuesday at the Art Institute and the display is especially strong in chrysanthemum blooms. Plants are as freely shown as in the past few years, but the blooms are wonderful. The exhibition presents quite a different appearance from its predecessors, being placed in a large hall, much longer than wide. The smaller vases of blooms are placed on a balcony extending along one side of the hall, and the larger ones are in an annex on the main floor. The general view is rather less impressive than usual, but the individual exhibits are magnificent in nearly every case. The competition in the classes for chrysanthemum blooms was in many cases very sharp, several classes having eight to ten entries.

A new chrysanthemum exhibited by E. G. Hill Co., under name of R. E. Richardson, is a remarkably soft and pleasing shade of pink, the blooms incurved, large and on good stems. It is the nearest to a real pink we have seen in a chrysanthemum.

The attendance has so far been very good, in spite of unfavorable weather on Tuesday.

MADISON, N. J.

Morris County Society's Flower Show.

The seventh annual flower show of the Morris County Society was held here on November 6 and 7 and proved to be the most successful one the society has yet held. The weather was fine and the attendance all that one could expect from a limited population. The show was unanimously voted the prettiest and most artistic that has been seen in this section, and the quality of the exhibits could not be excelled in any part of the country and in only few cases could it be equalled. This exhibition has been held continuously for seven years under practically the same management, and the result is seen in continuous improvement in the staging and general features, and this year it may be truthfully stated that the show is a model for others to follow.

In the cut flower classes, the ancient rivals, Messrs. Herrington and Duckham, were very conspicuous, and they may be said to have quit with honors about even. The premier class was for 36 flowers, 6 varieties and the judges, after long, careful work, decided in Mr. Duckham's favor. His varieties were Lord Salisbury, Mme. Thirkell (both grand), Mrs. Weeks, T. Carrington, Merza and H. J. Jones. Mr. Herrington was given second, his varieties being Merza, Appleton, Carrington, Chenon de Leche, Eaton, very fine, and Jeannie Falconer.

In the class for 18 flowers in 3 varieties, Mr. Herrington was first with Appleton, Eaton and Mrs. Barclay, Peter Duff being a good second.

For 12 flowers in 4 varieties A. Herrington was again first with Eaton, Appleton, Merza and Carrington, W. Duckham running a good second with W. R. Church as his conspicuous vase.

For 10 white A. Herrington was first with Merza, Jefferson Doremus being second with the same variety.

For 10 yellow W. Duckham was first with Mabel Morgan, a beautiful English variety, that will become a favorite with everyone; A. Herrington was second with Falconer.

In class for 10 flowers of Eaton, A. Herrington was easily first, Frank Burnett being second.

For 10 Appletons A. Herrington was again first, with W. Duckham second.

For 6 flowers, white, Peter Duff was first with Merza, and George Bird second with Mrs. Weeks.

For 6 yellow Alfred Coreu scored first with a nice vase of Minerva.

For 6 Eaton H. L. Hand was first and George Bird second. There were seven competitors in this class.

For 6 Appleton, which also brought out fine competition, Peter Duff got first, Frank Burnett second.

For 6 any color Peter Duff was first, with T. Carrington, H. L. Hand being second.

For a vase arranged with foliage the president of the society, Mr. E. Regan, got a well merited first.

The special prize for the largest flower in the show was given to the secretary, C. H. Atkins. This was a rank decision, and fraud and corruption on the secretary's part is openly charged. A recount of the votes may be necessary before the prize is finally awarded. The chief point at issue is where the secretary got his flower. It is known for a fact that he has not handled mums for years. If the flower has been five years growing, as claimed, its enormous size may be accounted for. When measured by the judges it was 28 inches in circumference, but as the evening advanced it had swelled to 41 inches, with two districts yet to be heard from. Finally a guard had to be placed over this flower, as one lady attempted to take it away, being under the impression that it was a Japanese screen. The variety was Malcolm Smith, an Australian importation, a freak of the first order, due to early bud selection.

Before leaving the mums, special mention must be made of an exhibit of 50 named varieties set up by W. Duckham. They were practically all novelties, and many of them will possibly never see the exhibition board again, but there were some very fine varieties among them. Florence Molyneux was the most conspicuous, a splendid white on the style somewhat of Eaton, but perfectly finished in the center.

Roses.

The rose classes were well filled, and considering the bad season, were of wonderful quality. Competition was excellent, running as high as twelve to fifteen entries in many of the classes.

For 18 Beauties L. A. Noe was first, with Henry Hentz second.

For 12 Beauties the order was reversed, Henry Hentz getting first and L. A. Noe second.

In 12 Bridesmaids Mr. Ryan was first, David Shannon second, Henry Hentz third.

In 12 Brides the order ran, Hentz first, Carl Holm, second, Noe third.

In 6 Maids W. Ryan first and Joseph Querney second.

In 6 Brides Henry Hentz first, with Carl E. Holm second.

Miscellaneous.

There were some very fine carnations staged, a variety, Glow-worm, in C. W. Ward's exhibit, being much admired.

For 12 flowers each of 3 varieties, W Duckham was first, with C. W. Ward second.

The violets were the best ever shown in Madison, the first for 100 blooms double going to Lyon & Striekland, Milton, N. Y.; J. Herzog second.

For 100 singles H. L. Hand was first, John Fraser second.

For group of chrysanthemums in flower with foliage plants, Mr. Hand was first.

For 3 specimen plants in flower, Peter Duff got first with fine plants of A. J. Balfour, Puritan and Walter Molatsch. Mr. Duff was also first for one specimen.

The prize for single stems was won by Mr. Hand; Peter Duff setting up a dozen Merza as single stems, not for competition, that I have never seen equalled for finish and perfection.

The vegetable classes are always a special feature here, and this year was no exception. For a collection W. Duckham was first, J. Fraser second.

For 12 heads of celery, the prizes were won by the same competitors in the same order.

For collection of apples first was won by Mr. Brant, H. Hand second.

Certificates of merit were awarded to W. Duckham for 50 distinct varieties of mums previously noted, and also for a pair of Kentia Sanderiana.

P. Duff was given a certificate for the wonderful lot of single stem Merza and F. R. Pierson Co. for its new fern. A. Herrington for Gerbera Jamesoni, John N. May for seedling pompons and Lager & Hurrell for table of orchids.

Not to trespass any longer on valuable space, I will only add that the judges were W. J. Stewart, of Boston; A. J. Loveless, gardener to John D. Sloan, Lenox, Mass., and J. Fraser, of Cedar Court, Morristown, N. J. Their work showed careful and accurate judment and the best of feeling prevailed among the exhibitors in consequence. At the close of the show upwards of $70 was realized from the auction sale of the cut flowers, a welcome addition to the treasury.

The medals offered by Messrs. Moore, Hentz & Nash in conjunction with the society for the actual growers of the flowers were won as follows: 18 Beauties, Joseph Rusicka; 12 Bridesmaids, Wm. McGowan; 12 Brides, J. Milton; 36 mums, Samuel Redstone.

These medals are a wonderful help in bringing out exhibits, and it is an award that is highly cherished by the recipient and cannot be too highly commended. Brian Boru.

FLORAL ARRANGEMENTS.

At the Kansas City Show.

At the Kansas City show the competitions in the classes for floral arrangements began on Thursday with table decorations of chrysanthemums.

Mr. S. Murray's table had a low, single mums, tuberoses, etc. Mr. Rock, the first prize winner, had a nicely waving flag, and deserved the award.

The American Beauty vases were all well arranged. John Mangel, Chicago, received first; W. L. Rock, second; S. Murray, third.

The chrysanthemum vases were also beautiful and effective. John Mangel's vase, which took first prize, was arranged with the dark varieties, shading down to the yellow Mrs. Park, the Tom Thumb yellow being also used, and some pretty light green Asparagus plumosus strings around the vase, a cluster of dark and bronze flowers being tied with a wide olive green ribbon. This effect was very striking.

Mr. Rock's vase, which took second, was a combination of white and yellow blooms, most beautifully and effectively arranged. Mr. Murray's vase, which received third, was filled with white and yellow blooms, and was very large and showy.

In the competition in vases of carnations Mr. Thompson took first with his vase of Enchantress. Mr. Murray was second, using a combination of Morning Glory and a very dark one, rather large, center piece, almost star shaped, of the yellow Robinson (a beautiful variety) interspersed with very fine adiantum. It was well gotten up and a credit to any florist. It received first prize.

Mr. W. L. Rock's table had a large flat center piece of Mme. Perrin, a pretty shade of pink, with fine adiantums. It took second prize.

Mr. John Mangel used a high center vase of Golden Wedding, the base of vase being arranged with yellow crotons, red berries and a few well colored oak leaves and asparagus. It won third prize.

The L. P. Walz's table had a low round arrangement of the three varieties of Ivory, shading from pure white on one side to light pink and darker pink. Asparagus tenuissimus was used on the cloth. This took fourth prize.

Friday was American flag day and the awards were: W. L. Rock, first; A. Newell, second; S. Murray, third; A. Barbe, fourth. These flags were made up pretty much of the same flowers, carnations for the red and white stripes, the blue field of immortelles and cape flowers, one being made of violets and another of ageratum, with the stars of which was very fine. Mr. Mangel was third with a vase of Morning Glory and Mme. de Jonghe, a pretty pink variety.

In the mixed vases S. Murray was first and John Mangel second.

On Saturday came the table decorations of flowers other than chrysanthemums, and they were most beautiful and costly, the principal flowers used being cattleyas and cypripediums.

First prize went to L. P. Walz, whose table had a low center piece of President Carnot roses, quite well open, with many buds and considerable foliage interspersed.

Mr. W. L. Rock's table, which was second, had a prettily arranged center piece of cypripediums with a pea green ribbon on one side. Very pretty but rather large.

Mr. Murray's table, which came third, had a large center piece of cattleyas and cypripediums, the effect being very rich and massive. A little crowded, but showy and effective.

Mr. Mangel's table had a center piece of cattleyas and adiantums and three smaller pieces of the same flowers.

The tables were all very pretty and a credit to those entering them.

BUFFALO.

We have a new departure in the way of a flower show. The H. A. Meldrum Department Store opened their chrysanthemum show Tuesday. They offered liberal cash prizes in fifteen classes and there was active competition in nearly all. Three classes were restricted to flowers grown in Erie county, but the others were open to all, and a magnificent lot of blooms was the result.

There were collections of 100 blooms arranged for effect, and 100 blooms in 10 varieties, as well as classes for 25 of one variety. The quality of the flowers could hardly be excelled, and the general effect was better than that of any exhibition the local club has been able to produce. And though it may sound strange to some ears it was a handsomer display of flowers than there was at the recent Madison Square Garden show in New York up to Saturday night when I left. For prize winners and some other important items connected with this success, please wait till next week.

ROSES.

Seasonable Hints.

It is now nearing the time for propagating, and every provision should be made so that a good, clear start is effected. The bench should be looked over and put into good order; the pipes, elbows, couplings, etc., under the benches should be examined, so that there will be no trouble after the cuttings are in.

It is a rare occurrence to find a house of Brides or Bridesmaids, in which these varieties are not more or less mixed. Now there is no reason why this should be so, as a little care and attention during October and November in marking the mixes, will remedy this and get the stock true to name.

It is obvious that at propagating time the plants will not all show flower and consequently no selection can be made then; so the proper course is to go over them frequently and put a prominent tag on all Brides that are in the Maid houses, and on all Maids that are in the Bride houses, and carefully refrain from taking wood from these.

This advice is not only for the grower who raises his own stock, but is even more applicable to those who raise young stock for sale. It is a sad disappointment to many growers who, at times, are forced to purchase stock of these varieties, which, after being planted and cared for, turn out a woeful mixture of both and frequently a generous sprinkling of Mermet also.

There are, no doubt, many firms who by care and attention in the selection of their wood are in a position to and do supply their customers with stock true to name; but experience teaches us that there are others.

By the way, our Eastern friends do not seem to take kindly to the new rose, Ivory. I see by the reports of the New York show that a very generous prize was offered for best 50 blooms, with the result that there was no exhibit. I guess they will line up by next year.

Last year, while collecting notes regarding the merits of Liberty, I wrote to an old friend in the East (a grower of high repute) for his opinion. His answer was short and pithy: "No good; too hard to grow." This year, wishing to have his opinion as to the merits of Ivory, I again wrote to him and his answer on this occasion was equally laconic: "No good; too easy to grow." I venture to predict that he and more of us, will find some good in it before another year is over, as it has so far upheld the reputation given it when it was put on the market. It is yet too early in the season to receive full criticism.

AVERAGE CUT OF ROSES.

The Review has given us the average cut of carnations. Now can it not give us the average cut of roses?

We grow about 8,000 plants, Maids, Brides, Beauties, Gates and Meteors. We keep count of our cut each morning, counting nothing but salable flowers, that is nothing with less than a twelve-inch stem and medium flower. We do not count firsts and mediums separately, but count all together. What I wish to find out is the average cut per plant in firsts and mediums, or both, from Sept. 1 to June 1, as any cut before or after the given dates are not counted.

N. G.

Roses which are planted early, having a longer growing season in which to form a large plant before September, will by reason of their greater strength, more extended root area, and greater number of flower bearing eyes, under the same treatment produce a much better average and especially of firsts and seconds, than those which are planted in June or early in July.

If planted early in June or late in May the average cut of all grades should be in the vicinity of 26 for Meteors, 25 for Maids and Brides, 27 for G. Gates and 12 for Beauties, these to be on their own roots.

As roses are graded at present it is difficult to define firsts and mediums, as what may be one grower's firsts may be specials with another, and what may be graded as specials one week may only rank as good seconds the next.

CHRYSANTHEMUM SOCIETY OF AMERICA.

The Chicago Convention.

Though a preliminary session was held Wednesday morning, it was nearly 3 o'clock in the afternoon before the first business session was held, the convention convening in Fullerton Hall, at the Art Institute. President Herrington presided and C. W. Johnson acted as temporary secretary. After the usual preliminaries President Herrington read his address, which follows:

President Herrington's Address.

The Chrysanthemum Society of America was organized at Buffalo in 1889, with the following aims: "To increase the general interest in the cultivation of the chrysanthemum. To improve the standard of excellence in the flower. To improve the methods of cultivation and to increase its use as a decorative flower. To properly supervise its nomenclature; to keep a register of seedlings in order to prevent duplication of names; and to stimulate the growing and introduction of improved seedlings in every legitimate way."

The constitution under which we organized provided for an annual meeting to be held each year in November, but this proviso has been respected in the breach rather than in the observance, till today, after the lapse of a dozen years, the hope some of us have long cherished has, thanks to the munificence of the Chicago Horticultural Society, been consummated, and we are in convention assembled with a specific purpose, and that is to be more active and more aggressive in the pursuit of our objects and aims.

Through the years that have elapsed since organization the Chrysanthemum Society of America has done a lot of quiet but effective work, so as a prelude it is eminently fitting to review the past at this initial November meeting, to give an account of our stewardship before we attempt to anticipate the future and lay out plans for greater activity in the years to come.

Looking back, down the vista of years that have passed, the year 1894 marks an important epoch in the existence of our society. The faithful few that from its inception to date have maintained its continuous existence met during the convention of the Society of American Florists, held that year at Atlantic City, and devised the plan of having committees appointed in the following cities: New York, Chicago, Philadelphia, Boston and Cincinnati, these committees to meet and pass judgment upon any new varieties submitted to them, to gauge their merit by a standard scale of essential requirements, and to endorse those found worthy. The best testimony that can be adduced to demonstrate the wisdom of this action is the fact that these committees have met uninterruptedly ever since during the chrysanthemum season, that their endorsement of new varieties has been, and is still eagerly sought after, and their judgments when rendered have been well sustained. "By our works we are known," and it may in full truth be asserted that to this particular act the Chrysanthemum Society of America owes its past span of life, its existence today; and though many here present may be unconscious of the fact through not having given thought to the matter, the benefits that have accrued to chrysanthemum growers resultant from the labors of these committees have been of a lasting character and a strong safeguard against imposition. Intentional imposition is not by this implied; but a salutary check has been in existence that has prevented the foisting upon the public of an excessive number of new varieties, many of doubtful use or merit.

During these years the results have been as follows in certificates awarded by the C. S. A.: 1894, 28; 1895, 34; 1896, 54; 1897, 25; 1898, 33; 1899, 23; 1900, 17; 1901, 17. In eight years 131 varieties have gone out endorsed by the Chrysanthemum Society of America. Many of them, you will say, "like leaves on a stream, have come and gone and left no trace behind." We admit it; no judgment is infallible, but you will at least concede these judgments were conscientiously rendered, and if they did not eliminate all the chaff, the good grain was made more easy of discovery.

A fair percentage of the varieties certificated each year we are still cultivating. For example, from the 1894 list we have Jeannie Falconer, J. E. Lager, Philadelphia, and Helen Bloodgood, and from 1895 Mrs. Perrin, William Simpson, Modesto and Western King.

So much for the past. It is a record that stands, needs no apologies, justifies our existence as an organization, amply sustains our belief in the need of such an organization, and on this basis we stand today, asking more support and a stronger, more united effort in the pursuit of a work that must be continuous and can never be considered complete, for the chrysanthemum is here to stay. It has outlasted the short span of popularity certain pessimists in this country presumed to concede it; is permanently enthroned as "Queen of Autumn" in the hearts of thousands of flower lovers, and has a history and a literature surpassing by far that of any other flower. It behooves us, therefore, as sponsors for the chrysanthemum in America, not only to maintain unimpaired its historical continuity, its ancient and honorable lineage, but as a precious heritage from the past, to hand it down to the future with the pages of its historical record amplified by good work performed in our day and time, so that American contributions to chrysanthemum lore, American production of new varieties, may be on a par with those of the Orient, whence the flower first originated; of Europe with its 115 years of continuous work in the chrysanthemum field, and of the Antipodes, whence comparatively new workers are now sending us new varieties surpassing any heretofore obtained.

So much to show how broad the field, and as a national society we should heed well the fact and so broaden our sphere of labor as to command the support of all who love this flower.

The cited record of work accomplished is good as far as it has gone, but the lines have been constricted; and commercialism has dominated it all.. The chrysanthemum as a cut flower for the market must, of course, be adjudged by the qualities that befit it best for this special purpose; and what we have accomplished along these lines may be summed up in a few words. We have made amazing progress. The commercial aspect of the flower is not in danger of neglect; it must be maintained to insure its profitable cultivation.

But, coincident with the growth in popularity of the chrysanthemum, in fact, the most striking feature thereof, is the number of chrysanthemum exhibitions held each year in almost every state in the Union, no other flower being so universally exploited in this manner. Visit any of them, and if you have had an opportunity of visiting similar exhibitions in Europe, you have an admirable standard for comparison and should find much to reflect upon, and to our disadvantage. The same varieties that are in the cut flower market are dominant; in fact, almost wholly constitute our exhibitions. From an exhibition point of view, the paucity of variety and the similarity of type are most disappointing. Perhaps there is some connection between this and the lack of public patronage that many deplore who arrange otherwise attractive exhibitions! Is it not worth while trying to make the chrysanthemum exhibition more attractive and might not popularity follow as a sequel? We cannot tell until we make the effort, and we must begin by systematizing our work, or rather pursuing it along divergent lines centering on a special objective point. By giving more attention to the varied types of exhibition flowers, we might enhance amateur interest; we might create a little army of amateur growers who would cultivate for their own pleasure hundreds of lovely varieties, whose only shortcoming is, they are not amenable to commercial cut flower requirements, because they cannot be packed in a box, shipped to market, and come out again in presentable form.

If it were possible to estimate all that has been lost, all the varieties that have been rejected in the past through appraising them from the commercial standpoint, it might surprise us.

A century of continuously increasing interest, love and enthusiasm that marks the history of the chrysanthemum in Europe has not been fostered and sustained by restriction of variety and type. The European cut flower markets have their limited few adapted to this special need, but the gardens and greenhouses of thousands of amateur growers are replete with collections of hundreds of varieties, and their annual exhibitions are self-sustaining by large attendance. Continuous change prevails. The varieties of a decade ago are not there today.

It is this inherent infinite variety of the chrysanthemum that attracts with the everlasting anticipation of seeing something new. It is needless to enlarge upon the possibilities before us in this direction, but we cannot continually ignore them.

Again over a large area of our country the chrysanthemum as an open-air flower should have attention. Here, indeed, is a new and wide field wherein to labor, and effort intelligently directed along this special line would be most advantageous to many. It should have the consideration and support of our society.

Another matter of importance is how, as a society we may be truly national, the central and recognized head of chrysanthemum work in America. This is an executive matter and the initiative must come from within our own ranks. "'Tis not in mortals to command success, but we'll do more, deserve it." Our committee work now commands universal respect. Let us devise ways and means to the end that all our work may do so. It should not be necessary for the Chrysanthemum Society of America to organize exhibitions every year. They are abundantly provided for, but the Chrysanthemum Society of America should be officially identified with some important exhibition each year, and in that place let the record of the year's work be made up and prospective lines laid down for the labor of the next year.

Cannot some arrangement be devised whereby the many existing local societies, the sole aim of which is the giving of a chrysanthemum exhibition, may by the contribution of a certain sum from their treasury become affiliated with the National Society, which in return should offer medals or other suitable awards at the exhibitions of those societies in affiliation and in other ways assist in systematizing all that is done in the chrysanthemum field? Some such plan exists with the National Chrysanthemum Society of England, and works to the mutual interest of all.

Our society, too, should take its place with other national societies in the matter of keeping records and publishing matter pertaining to its flower. We may regard lightly what we have done to date, but it will be of inestimable value if it is available to the future historian who writes up the record of the present time. Some of our faithful officers have this matter tabulated and compiled, but it loses half its value while unavailable for public reference. Our co-workers in England want to know what we are doing, and in one of their horticultural publications recently expressed a wish that we would publish a catalogue of American chrysanthemums, as was done some years ago and by them found very useful.

These are some of the matters now respectfully submitted for your consideration, and there are doubtless others that will occur and be suggested, for "in the multitude of counsellors there is wisdom," and we want to have the best thoughts of the brightest minds concentrated upon the cause of the flower we love.

Election of Officers.

The election resulted in the re-election of President A. Herrington and the selection of F. R. Pierson as vice-president, Fred Lemon as secretary, and the re-election of Treasurer J. N. May.

Invitations were received from five cities anxious for the next convention, and the selection was left to the executive committee.

The paper by Mr. C. Harman Payne was then read.

In the discussion of this paper and the president's address many interesting views were brought out. Referring to the work done by the society in the past Mr. Rudd asked if any variety that had failed to win a certificate since the society had been in existence had been a commercial success, and none could be noted. He thought that this fact alone was sufficient reason for the existence of the organization and that it was to be warmly congratulated upon the excellence of the work done.

Mr. Payne's statement regarding the failure of English growers to succeed with American varieties brought out a number of suggestions as to the probable cause. Mr. Herrington thought that the tendency to mildew was the result of the transference to different climate and environment. Mr. Cowell emphasized this view by recalling that the early English varieties imported into this country were very subject to mildew. Mr. Hill thought the moister climate of England was a probable cause of mildew and noted that even such a sturdy grower as Timothy Eaton had been a failure in England.

After a lengthy discussion upon the desirability of increasing the number of varieties and types at our exhibitions, and of breaking away from what seems to be the too restricted lines we have been following in America, it was resolved to recommend to the various bodies giving exhibitions, that they include classes in which blooms of fine exhibition varieties lacking in stem and foliage may be attached to stems of more vigorous sorts in order that they may be properly displayed in vases, and that there be also classes for short stemmed blooms on boards in the English style.

Though this was adopted it was not unanimous, some holding that the proposed action was a step backward, and that any flower that is unable to hold itself up without being "grafted" is not good enough for an American exhibition.

The need for greater variety at our exhibitions is generally recognized, and splicing seemed to be the only way out of the difficulty if we are to make use of the sorts too weak to hold their heads up if vases are to be used.

AMERICAN CHRYSANTHEMUMS IN ENGLAND.

BY [illegible]

Read before the Chrysanthemum Society of America at the Chicago convention.

Having been invited to contribute a paper, to be read at the first convention of the Chrysanthemum Society of America, on a subject likely to interest American growers of this popular autumn flower, it seems that we may usefully consider some of the facts relating to the almost utter extinction of American varieties from our English exhibitions.

It is remarkable that while we had a large number of really meritorious American seedlings annually exhibited on the show boards of our leading exhibitions some few years ago, there remain today scarcely half a dozen that continue to find favor with our largest growers. There is, as most of us are aware, no question as to the ability of American seedling raisers to produce varieties of sterling merit. That fact has been proven over and over again, and is beyond dispute to those of us who have watched the progress of the chrysanthemum during the past twenty years.

To go back to the earliest attempts on the part of our American friends to supply European cultivators with novelties it is necessary to remind this meeting that one of the first chrysanthemum raisers in the states was Dr. Walcott, of Boston. John Thorpe, Mr. Waterer, of Philadelphia, and W. K. Harris were next heard of here as being engaged in the work and many of their varieties were imported into England about 1884-5.

I well remember somewhere about that date visiting my old friend, Norman Davis, then of Camberwell, and seeing for the first time many of these American novelties which he was probably the first to introduce, and the interest that their appearance then caused. Up to that time the French growers had enjoyed the sole monopoly for some years of raising new seedling chrysanthemums, as they appear almost to have done during later years. Many of these early American varieties being very distinctive in form, soon became popular with our growers and figured at English exhibitions in goodly numbers.

A few of them can be readily recalled to memory, viz.: Bicolor, Christmas Eve, Fimbriatum, Gloriosum, Gorgeous, Jessica, Moonlight, Mrs. C. W. Wheeler, Mrs. James R. Pitcher, Mrs. Vannaman, Mrs. Wm. Meneke, Sam Henshaw, White Dragon and so forth. Of course I am fully aware that some precise critics here at home will say that many of the first American novelties were really importations from Japan, but that has little to do with our present purpose, inasmuch as we received them from American sources.

Interest having been excited in these newcomers, our trade importers were not slow to appreciate the fact that to keep in the front they must each lay in a store of the American novelties year by year and so in due course other Americans were brought into the line of expansion. The novelties distributed by such growers as T. H. Spaulding, Peter Henderson & Son, Fewkes & Son, E. G. Hill, Nathan Smith & Son, Messrs. Hollis, Alex. Surman, Dorner, Pitcher & Manda, J. C. Vaughan, May and, for all I know, many more besides were annually added to the ever increasing collections of our large trade growers and importers.

When one remembers the names of these men and the numerous seedlings that they raised and distributed, a large proportion receiving recognition of their merits by the awards of first-class certificates from our leading societies, it is difficult to understand the reason of their present non-existence as show flowers. Everyone of course knows that improvement has been made, but as time went on American seedlings did not remain stationary any more than did the seedlings of their rivals.

Let us recall a few names extending over that period and in order of their appearance: Puritan, Beauty of Castlewood, Coronet, Miss Anna Hartshorne, Florence Percy, Lizzie Cartledge, Elmer D. Smith, Eda Prass, Col. W. B. Smith, C. B. Whitnall, Mrs. E. D. Adams, Julius Roehrs, Geo. W. Childs, W. G. Newitt, Golden Wedding, Good Gracious, Niveus, Mrs. E. G. Hill, Eugene Dailledouze, Mutual Friend, Mrs. Henry Robinson, Miss Georgiana Pitcher, The Egyptian, Modesto, Western King and Simplicity.

Now, to be properly understood, I do not mean to say that these and similar sorts are nowhere to be seen in England, but I do say that these and many other equally fine varieties have been entirely discarded by the most prominent of our exhibitors in the leading shows. And further that for several years past little or nothing of American origin has been sent over here to compete with the French and more recently the Australian seedlings. The consequence is that the English thirst for novelties has to be assuaged by other means, and that instead of there being a steady flow of novelties from the other side of the Atlantic to occupy a portion of the space vacated by varieties that are pushed aside for various reasons, nothing new or attractive has come before our notice for a long time past.

The chief places where public opinion on such matters is formed is undoubtedly at the trade displays and at the floral committee meetings where novelties are staged by growers and importers. So keen is the competition for supremacy that unless a new variety obtains a certificate or gives great promise it is hardly worth anyone's while to grow a new variety a second year, the number of novelties being so large.

There is, however, some consolation, but it is one that does not appeal to a raiser's pocket. At many private establishments and in the interesting collections that are gratuitously provided by the London County Council in the public parks many varieties, American as well as others, are included and are grown year after year. I think in an article on this subject which I wrote for the American Florist some time since special reference was made to this fact. But the average chrysanthemum grower for exhibition in England hardly ever pays a visit to such places, which are intended for the pleasure of the inhabitants in the district where the parks are situated. Consequently the authorities, not having to appeal to critical trade in such matters, often keep in their collections many old kinds of ordinary merit that are only fit for general decorative display. To the exhibitor for prizes, however, the early possession of the finest novelties means success or failure, and he will willingly pay the price for any new addition likely to secure him the fullest number of points, for that means a considerable amount of prize money in his pocket or an array of silver cups for his sideboard.

Whatever may be said to the contrary, growing prize chrysanthemums in England is mainly a matter of profit and not honor. And the proof of this is easily found in the fact that where substantial prizes are not offered there will only be found growers of average ability. And it is also noteworthy that whatever varieties are included in the winning stands of our cleverest exhibitors are eagerly sought after by the numerous small amateurs who hope to follow in the greater one's steps. Hence the sale of some peculiarly striking novelty will often run into thousands the first year it is shown.

Going back to the subject of local display at the London parks it is curious to notice, as I did last year, blooms of many American varieties that once occupied a much loftier position. Many of them were in their turn exhibition blooms; today they are rejected as such. Yet although not grown in such fine form as they were when in the hands of our expert cultivators they may live on for years giving pleasure to many, whose only opportunity of seeing such flowers at all is a quiet stroll through the greenhouse of a London park on a Saturday or Sunday afternoon in mid-October or early November.

Survivors of these American introductions are as follows: Mrs. E. G. Hill, an early useful variety for the back row of a group of pot plants; W. H. Lincoln, Delaware, the anemone; Wm. Trieker, a capital pink variety when grown for decorative purposes; Gloriosum, Modesto, Col. W. B. Smith, Niveus, Western King, The Egyptian, Simplicity, G. W. Childs, always bright and effective but rather small. There may be a few others but these are all that appear in my notes of last year's visits to the London parks.

While these remain the originators have some satisfaction in knowing that their efforts have not been entirely obliterated. But mere honors will scarcely console a man who undertakes the raising of any kind of plant for a livelihood.

Only today I have been inspecting the collection of a well known introducer of new chrysanthemums, a man with little or no sentiment in relation to the origin of the new chrysanthemums he has to sell. Upon finishing the work I expressed surprise that new American seedlings were practically non-existent in his collection and had been for some years. His remarks may be instructive and perhaps of service to American growers and are briefly as follows:

"Taken as a whole the American seedlings are, as regards the blooms, quite as fine in color as any others. The foliage is good but very subject to mildew, at least five out of every six suffering from this disadvantage. For quality in respect to seedbearing they are of a high order of merit. George W. Childs having been the parent here of many of our best dark-colored kinds. Most of the plants have the disadvantage of being too tall when grown in our style for exhibition blooms and, generally speaking, they are much later in blooming than the Continental varieties, an immense disadvantage when connoisseurs are eagerly on the lookout early in the season for novelties for the following season.

Again, many are rather coarse, and I remember this was the fault in the case of some of the first we ever had. They do not lend themselves to stopping for refinement and the difference in bud selection is a matter of paramount importance. If attempts are made to get them early by taking early buds the flowers come rough, and that is one of the greatest bars to successful exhibiting in this country."

Another factor in the case is the question of transport. My informant tells me that in getting young plants from the States in past years it was never possible to get them over soon enough in the year to flower them well the first season after arrival, and that means that they were often knocked out of the running for up to date exhibitors.

How far these opinions are shared by the general body of our trade importers I do not know, but it is not the first time similar complaints have been made to me when going the rounds of our trade displays. If anything contained in this paper should tend to a revival of commerce in chrysanthemums with this country and to American chrysanthemums once again occupying something like their old position, both I and many other lovers of the autumn queen will not fail to do them justice and American growers will once again share in the honor of producing varieties that will help materially to increase their fame and pecuniary advantage. To this end the present paper has been compiled and the time devoted to its compilation will be considered well spent if such a result can be brought about.

HOUSES AND BENCHES MOST SUITABLE FOR CHRYSANTHEMUMS.

BY WILLIAM SCOTT.

When first asked to contribute something toward this convention it was suggested to me that I might better be able to say a few words about the most sensible structure, benches and ventilation, rather than the methods of culture; and with that suggestion I entirely agreed, for I am well aware that there are hundreds of men in our profession, both commercial and in private gardens, that can teach me in the culture of our Queen of Autumn, and have brought this glorious flower to a seeming point of perfection. Yet we must not say that further improvements cannot be made in this or any other flower. No one knows what can or will be done, and it appears to me that in those eighteen or twenty flowers that were exhibited at Madison Square Garden two weeks ago after a passage across the ocean on the good ship "Campania," and which were in marvelously perfect condition, there were at least half a dozen that, if not larger, were more beautiful and handsome than any existing varieties that I have had the opportunity to see. Perhaps in size the desired height has been reached, yet in delicate coloring, form and texture there is a further field ahead.

In considering what is the most suitable house for developing the chrysanthemum we must allow one fact, and that is that in this country, at least, no one can afford to let the chrysanthemum be the chief object in view. It must occupy the house for five or six months that after November must be utilized until the following June by one or more crops which from a money point of view are more valuable than the chrysanthemum, and the latter crops have cost more; for while little more than labor can be charged against the mums, there is a heavy fuel bill against the winter occupants. Fortunately the chrysanthemum asks for no special house, and while we are studying and improving the architecture of our houses for roses and carnations with a view to obtaining every ray of light in the dark and stormy winter days, the chrysanthemum is planted on the benches in the bright and sunny month of June and is cut before the dark days of winter arrive. Fortunately the majority, though not all, of our October and November months have bright, clear days and cool nights. I would say the ideal weather for these flowers.

As the growth of these plants is made during the summer months, when in normal seasons we have all the light and sun desired, it matters, I believe, little or nothing whether the house runs north and south or east and west, provided the glass is not of too small a size, but scarcely anyone now builds with less than 16 inches between sash bars. As above remarked, chrysanthemums are invariably grown in houses that later will be used for another important crop or crops. One man will fill up the benches with azaleas that have been kept in a cold frame, and Easter lilies that have also been in cold frame will occupy the space lately vacated by Timothy Eaton, and the florist who grows a general assortment of decorative and bedding plants, as the writer does, is always glad of the large additional space that the exit of the mum affords. For this reason, it appears to me, they are preferable, for I can well remember the time, twenty-five years ago, when a large proportion of our benches were idle during four or five summer months.

A New England grower, whose name I am not at liberty to mention, because I may not have his program down correctly, says he picks a million single violets during the winter; plants chrysanthemums, mostly early varieties, in June. When cut, these are succeeded by the violets. After Easter the violets are thrown out and a wonderful mammoth candytuft is planted, which comes in just right for Memorial Day and is a magnificent flower. It is then time to renew the soil and prepare again for the mums. Here are three simple crops filling out the year, and considering the fuel consumed and labor involved, is, I believe, most profitable.

When your houses are too far out to send in by wagon such plants as lilies, azaleas, etc., I cannot see that you can afford to occupy very much space with mums, because there is nothing to succeed them. Roses and carnations occupy the benches the entire year, and young stock of these occupy comparatively small space, and that not until after February. You will think I am wandering from my subject, but what I have said about other plants is merely to illustrate that the chrysanthemum is subservient to other crops, and is grown in houses built more with a view to the welfare of winter crops than to their own.

For a good many years the regulation rose house was built with the long span to the south, with the benches rising from the front or south bench to the north or back bench, which would be within three feet of the back slope and 6 or 7 feet from the ground. Many growers have by no means lost faith in this style of house, and on a recent visit to Madison, N. J., I went through some splendid new ranges built in this manner, and the roses were looking well. In this style of house some of the finest chrysanthemums raised in this country have been grown. I recall visiting Mr. John May some years ago, and saw on his middle and back benches of one of these houses some of the finest and most uniformly grand chrysanthemums I have ever seen. Possibly he wanted to use that house for young stock and did not use it for roses, but surely you would not build this style of house if you intended it for mums to be succeeded by azaleas, lilies, pot roses or other Easter crops. Undoubtedly these houses will grow roses, carnations, chrysanthemums or anything else that needs the fullest light, but they are expensive to build, must be detached, leaving from 20 to 25 feet of waste room between them, and are awkward and expensive to work. They get no more light than an equal span in the dark days, and in the summer months they are frightfully hot.

After seeing a good many ranges of glass built in this way during the past two or three years, I cannot help being a disciple of an entirely new style of architecture, and as imitation is the sincerest flattery, I have followed suit. These houses run east and west; except, perhaps, for roses and carnations they might be just as useful running north and south. They are from 17 to 26 feet from gutter to gutter, supported at the gutter by a 2-inch pipe or an arch of pipe and the walk beneath the gutter. One important requisite of these houses is that the gutter should be high and the benches low, particularly so if the houses run east and west, because when the gutter is high there is less shade on the benches in the next house to the north, and what shade there is is not constant, but continually moving. This is simply demonstrated by holding your outspread hand a foot from, say a dinner plate. Your hand would cast a shadow over a considerable portion of the plate, whereas, if held 6 feet from the plate, the shade would be scarcely noticeable.

I am not an advocate of the benches, whether for roses, carnations or violets, being on the solid ground, however well drained it may be, and in the cultivation of chrysanthemums it has been proven over and over again, and in this I can speak from experience, that 4 inches of soil is sufficient and will grow and produce finer flowers than a bed of 10-inch, or what may be called a solid bed, that is 5 or 6 inches of prepared soil with the natural soil beneath. In houses of this style it is necessary to have some material to separate them from Mother Earth. Boards of plank on a 2x6 scantling resting on the ground is one plan, but necessitates repairing and renewal. A 2x8 plank for an edge board with 2 or 3 inches of rubble-stone and the soil on top is another plan, and doutless will grow any of the important plants I have mentioned equally well as any material for a bottom, but when it comes to renewing the soil it is a very awkward and annoying job. One big grower, who likes the rubble-stone, says: "Well, we don't take out all the soil; we leave an inch on top of the stone and sprinkle some lime over it." Then they have an inch of exhausted soil just where the roots will be looking for the best nourishment.

In my humble opinion there is nothing for the bottom of the bed so good and so desirable as a 3-inch tile, or better still, the hollow brick used so much in our modern buildings. Those I used this summer are 5 inches wide, 4 inches thick and 13 inches long, but if they were largely used in any locality, the local tile yard would make a tile of any dimensions to suit the florist. With a brick set on edge in cement, or a cement edging of 4 or 5 inches in height and 1½ inches thick you have a bed that is practically everlasting. It must be perfect drainage. Air is passing through the tile, so that you cannot say there is dampness or coldness. I have in the past few months seen the best roses I have ever seen in my life growing on such a bed as I have described, and if they will grow roses, surely they will grow chrysanthemums.

This, then, is my ideal place for the mums. There are many advantages in having them down on the ground. If planted on a bench 3 feet from the ground, the later varieties will be away above your head before they are in flower, and the labor of tying and disbudding them will be treble what it is when they are under your eye. Think of the labor and annoyance saved, but above all think how we swear and tear and lose our temper when we discover that many new boards are needed in the bench, or that the whole bench must be renewed. I saw at Lake View Rose Gardens, Jamestown, N. Y., several houses this fall that had benches of mums planted on such beds as I have described. It was a pleasure to look at them, and in some cases down on them, instead of having to be lifted up on a bench to squint over them.

Now, you will say: "What are these beds good for when the mums are gone?" They are just the beds, with an inch or so of sand or ashes spread over the soil, or the soil removed to within an inch of the tile, and in the very best position for lilies, azaleas, hydrangeas, Rambler or hybrid perpetual roses, spiraea, rhododendrons or any other Easter stock; and although if my business were confined to small shipping stock, I should rather for convenience's sake have them on a raised bench, yet they would do just as well on these beds. I believe the days of wooden raised benches with their continual decaying are numbered. The cost of benches and keeping them in repair would not be a serious consideration if there were any decided advantage in the raised benches, but I have seen enough to convince me absolutely that there is none.

The matter of ventilation is of importance. Although the chrysanthemum withstands the great heat of our unshaded houses in July and August when the thermometer goes up to 120, which it often does inside, it must be a strain on the vitality of the plant, and therefore ample means of ventilation should be afforded to modify as much as possible the unnatural and intense heat. A house, whether detached or in a block of houses, should have continuous ventilation at the ridge. It is far better to have a 30-inch continuous than 4x4 and an interval of several feet. It is well agreed that at no time during their active growth should a chrysanthemum be shaded, or rather, I should say, have a permanent shade—the curse of many of our plants. Yet some varieties, notably the deeper colored, do bleach out under the bright suns of October and November, and some shading for them is desirable. I also believe if some moveable shade that could be easily adjusted on and off could be found, that it would be of great benefit to the plants in the hot summer months. They are frequently seen to wilt, however moist they may be at the root, and when they wilt some exhaustion has taken place.

I say in conclusion that those who have ever had under their care a bed of chrysanthemums on the ground will kick vigorously if they have to climb a step ladder to get on an even footing with Mlle. Liger.

PACKING CUT BLOOMS.

BY E. E. PIESER.

[Presented to the Chrysanthemum Society of America at the Chicago convention.]

Having for years taken special interest in the handling of cut flowers, from the receiving end to getting them to the trade in small towns and large cities in the best possible shape, causes one to try the many ways to pack the blooms. Now, we have found, except in very warm weather, ice is not wanted. We have also found that as near dry as you can get your stems before packing brings the stock through the best. We have also found that where one can get boxes long enough, packing the head of the flowers all one way with a light cleat about the center of the box, is an improvement. This we do not follow ourselves, as we have not the space to carry these large boxes and also in many cases the small buyer complains of the use of a large box, as he says express eats him up.

I would say that it is not so much the packing of flowers that the trade has to complain of, but it is more often the fault of the flowers. In chrysanthemums especially this is noticed, as the grower does not leave them on the plant long enough to have them well done, or "finished," as the term is often used, and flowers of this stage, no matter how carefully packed, would not carry ten miles. The same fault again applies when the grower goes the other way and lets them get over-ripe; the softness that shows in a chrysanthemum not yet done will spot and looks like an over-ripe apple packed in the middle of a barrel, when over-done, or left on the plant too long.

As near as I can learn from what I see in our place, as well as in others, just as soon as a grower hears that a certain thing is a bit scarce he goes home and at once starts to count how many pennies or dollars there are in sight, and goes at the cutting regardless of their completeness. This is a great mistake, for a dozen first-class chrysanthemums will bring more than ten dozen poor ones. Another thing comes before we get to the packing. Eleven No. 1 chrysanthemums and one "ringer" does not make a dozen first quality flowers. The same applies to all flowers, roses, carnations, Beauties, valley, violets, etc.

If I raised flowers to be sold on a wholesale market, or if I were a buyer on a large scale, I would furnish my own boxes and never have a box over six to seven inches deep for roses, carnations and that class of flowers. For chrysanthemums I would advise a flat box, wide enough for four to six and long enough so that they could be packed flat, with an extra light white wax tissue between each row of blooms. Never pack chrysanthemums one on top of another.

I have mentioned above that I believe all flowers should be as near dry as possible before packing; this I am sure applies to every flower except the violet, and, while it is never followed, I believe that a damp tissue on the stems and each bunch with white wax would improve them on their journey. Above all things, don't try and put all the violets you can possibly gather into one box, but stand them up and make rolls of nice clean paper between each row. A violet takes the odor of printers' ink, so I say "pass up" old newspapers for this one flower and give them enough space so as not to crush the end row either forward or back. In cold weather put heavy paper and plenty of old newspapers outside of the box to keep out frost.

Experience is the best teacher and a grower often wonders why his neighbor gets more for his flowers than he himself gets, even though they both sell through the same broker. It is simply one of two things. The one that gets the money is the man that never cuts a flower until it is just right, never tries to push through a few seconds with a lot of fine stock, and who is liberal in his judgment in regard to the requirements of the time of year, as to the proper boxes, paper, twine and sundry items that put his flowers before the buyer in the best possible shape. That is why he gets all there is to be had, but his neighbor would not believe this, even though he stood in front of the counter when the stock was sold.

CARNATION NOTES—WEST.

Propagating.

It is not too early to begin propagating some of the slow-growing varieties of carnations and, in fact, if you want plants that will give you enough blooms, to be profitable, of these varieties, you should have them in pots by January 1. If you have some new variety of which you want all you can get next season, you can start increasing your stock now. By taking a few cuttings early you may save robbing the plants later on and your stock will be better.

Between November 1 and March 1 you ought to be able to root 100 per cent of all the carnations you put in sand, as you have during that time, everything in your favor. I have described several times what kind of a cutting you should select, how you should trim it, stick it in the stand, etc. Whenever possible take only cuttings from near the base of the flower stems, and under no circumstances should you take a shoot that has begun to run up toward making a bud, nor a cutting from a diseased plant. Selection of cuttings is one of the most important points in keeping up the quality of your stock. You can't grow a healthy plant from a weak, diseased cutting.

The whole question of successful propagating lies in the proper temperature and the proper state of moisture, and when you have these under perfect control you will have no trouble. Of course you must first learn just what is the proper temperature and the proper state of moisture, before you can be entirely successful, and when you have mastered these two points, you must add to them very careful and close attention at all times. A few hours' neglect may ruin a whole batch of cuttings. How often you should water depends upon the weather and the amount of bottom heat you have. How often you should syringe, also depends upon the weather. How much sunshine you allow them depends upon the condition of the cuttings, and so on; you must at all times be prepared to use good judgment in caring for them. The point is to keep the cuttings fresh without allowing them to get too wet. Allow a carnation cutting to wilt badly and you might as well throw it away; at the same time, if you get the sand in a soggy condition, or keep the foliage wet over night continually, it will cause what is usually termed damping off, or cutting-bench fungus. Eternal vigilance, etc.

A bench with a brick bottom is, beyond question, the best all-around cutting bench, as there is but very little chance for the sand to become soggy, and a bench built in the manner described by Mr. Osborn a week or two ago is just about an ideal bench. We do not consider it absolutely necessary, however, to have such a bench to root carnations successfully. Our bench is built of boards, same as any other bench. It should not be tight at the bottom, as the boards will swell some and there must always be a way of letting any excess water drain off. We use six-inch boards and leave about ¾-inch space between them. Dry sand will run through such a space; wet the bottom of the bench with the hose if the sand is not moist enough to hold together. We use a sharp, clean sand, because that will allow the water to drain off better than a fine sand will, and we never find our sand soggy, even after a thorough soaking. Either river, lake or bank sand will do equally well, just so it is clean and sharp.

Cuttings for Next Summer.

While we are on the subject of propagating, I want to say that this is a good time to put in some cuttings for blooming next summer, and, in fact, you should lose no time in getting them in the sand. If grown right along you can get good, strong plants, well branched, in 3½-inch pots, by planting-out time. This is a little more work than the way Mr. Scott suggested a few weeks ago, of potting up the plants you have left in the field, and keeping them in a cool house or in cold-frames over winter. Many of you have only small places and you have no house that you keep as low as 40 to 45 degrees, which would be the proper temperature. In a warmer temperature they would grow and become exhausted in the pots before spring.

Then, again, you only want certain varieties for this purpose, too, as not all varieties will give you good blooms or enough of them during the summer months. In fact there are only a few that are really fit for that purpose. There are still thousands of Mrs. Fisher grown for white in the east, and it seems to give perfect satisfaction. We grow Flora Hill in this neck of the woods and we can hardly imagine anything better. Wm. Scott used to be our stand-by for pink, but Ethel Crocker is so far ahead of it that we have discarded Scott entirely. The blooms are almost as large in summer as they are in winter and the color and form are always fine. There is very little demand for red during the summer, but if you want some you should grow Crane. Elma is also a very fine summer bloomer and its fine, large Daybreak-shade blooms make it a valuable summer carnation. The blooms come large and full.

CARNATION NOTES—EAST.

General Behavior.

Lawson this year is making an excellent early showing, giving longer stems than at the same date last season. They were planted middle of July for several reasons. First, it was in the plan, also the plants were quite large and the constant rains made us fearful lest they be ruined, as stem-rot had affected a few plants. On the whole, I am convinced that Lawson should be housed early, also that it would be good policy to grow a portion under glass all summer.

Mrs. Potter Palmer was the next to come in, and perhaps we erred in housing so early, for, as previously stated in my notes, it appears late compared to Crane, which it was claimed to excel. The few blooms picked were of good size and color, except the center being inclined to lose its brilliancy. This, no doubt, will disappear as the season advances.

With Marquis we did a little experimenting, bringing in lots at different times. It seems to be a positive injury to Marquis to house it early, as the last lot to come in is far in advance of the others.

White Cloud is still our best white, the stems being 24 to 30 inches long and the flower perfection. It must be that soil has much to do with this sort, for I know growers superior to myself, who cannot do it at all well, probably on account of their soil being too open, for it needs a soil of a stiff clayey nature.

Queen Louise comes in earlier than White Cloud, and while the lower petals have a habit of dropping down around the calyx, it is of good habit, blooms continuously and is thoroughly a variety of the bread and butter sort.

Crane, in spite of complaints about it, still holds its own. It and Estelle make a good team, Crane coming in early, continuing through the holidays and social season, Estelle getting into line about December 15, continuing on late into spring when Crane is gone.

Avondale was sent out a year ago at a low price, but has outdone many of the higher priced ones. Being a sport (from Armazindy) it showed some streaks in the flowers on several plants, but by careful selection we have a grand lot of plants this year, which have already paid their board some time in advance.

Bradt is not so much in favor as formerly, and in consequence we are letting it come along slowly in a cool house, where it will come handy after the holidays.

Morning Glory is not doing as well this year as last, but we have Enchantress in sight for the future.

Cressbrook is somewhat of a puzzle at present, but by no means given up. As stated before, it is on the improve since regular firing.

Nelson needs no further comment than as stated in a previous issue.

California Gold, sent out, I believe, by The E. G. Hill Co. I have been surprised not to hear or see any reference made to this variety during the past year. It certainly is a good bloomer, has all the other fine qualities, such as color, stem, size and form. Perhaps it takes well only in certain localities or its being variegated is against it, as with Bradt.

Purchase of New Varieties.

In buying new sorts or, in fact, cuttings of any variety, try the plan of having them come unrooted. I do not advise this as a means of obtaining them at a lower price, although this often can be done. This may seem to you a queer method, but having had some experience along this line, I will endeavor next week to give a chapter on this subject. Geo. S. Osborn.

NEW YORK.

Club Meeting.

The regular monthly meeting of the Florists' Club was held on Monday evening at Civic Hall, 128 East Twenty-eighth street, about forty members being present.

The principal subject discussed was the flower show, and the disposition to make the best of things and to cheerfully "bear one another's burdens" was certainly commendable. A full statement of expenditures, receipts and all particulars was given the club by President Sheridan, and in an able and clear address, Mr. O'Mara dwelt upon the reasons for the financial deficit, the sculpture feature, the paucity of exhibits, the committee's faithful labors and much that redounded to the credit of the club. The thanks of the club were unanimously voted the committee.

It developed that the expenses of the Sculpture Society would approximate $5,000. Votes of thanks were passed to the exhibitors and trade exhibitors, and lessons were drawn that will be of practical service in any future attempts to "offer up sacrifices" to the "artistic element" of society in this city.

Four new members were nominated, and the nominating committee reported the following names to be voted on for the important offices of the club at its next meeting: For president: W. H. Siebrecht, J. H. Troy, L. Hafner. For vice-president: F. H. Traendly, A. Langjahr. For treasurer: C. B. Weathered, S. S. Butterfield. For secretary: John Young, H. Bunyard. Executive committee: W. Sheridan, W. S. Allen, W. H. Siebrecht, H. Hentz, Jr., Theo. Lang and J. Austin Shaw.

Exhibition Notes.

Henry A. Dreer's exhibit of Pandanus Sanderi was greatly admired. This is a wonderful acquisition and will be very popular.

The Otaheite orange plants shown by Chas. Zeller & Sons were perfect specimens and deserved the medal they secured.

C. W. Ward's fine carnation exhibit was renewed daily and kept in perfect condition to the end.

John H. May displayed Mrs. Oliver Ames, and Ernst Asmus had on exhibition a grand vase of Ivory.

The "Canadian Queen" proved to be one of the most interesting of the new roses, and was greatly admired by all. Its keeping qualities are excellent. The stock will be sent out early in 1903.

Henry Eichholz, of Waynesboro, Pa., showed his new striped carnation "Tiger," some twenty varieties of ornamental grasses and a number of "freak" chrysanthemums.

J. H. Troy's Japanese plants, trees, maidens and helpers formed as attractive a feature as could be seen in the garden and deserved all the attention and appreciation they received.

The orchid exhibits of Lager & Hurrell, Julius Roehrs and Siebrecht & Son have never been equaled in any exhibition on the continent.

The immense banks of palms and other decorative plants shown by Julius Roehrs, Siebrecht & Son and Anton Schultheis were composed of the finest stock from their conservatories.

Geo. M. Stumpp exhibited a fine basket of mums most artistically arranged; W. W. Burnham, wedding bouquets; and Clark's Sons, baskets of other flowers. Otherwise the retailers of the city made no demonstration.

Lehnig & Winnefeld, of Hackensack, exhibited a fine collection of cyclamen, and Wm. Brennecke, of Hempstead, a dozen fine geraniums.

Notes.

The auction sales continue. Now, in addition to the palms, come conifers, hardy roses, hydrangeas and ornamental nursery stock. The enthusiasm has had a hard time materializing this season.

Harry Bayersdorfer, of Philadelphia, was a visitor Saturday and made a friendly call on all the wholesale and supply establishments.

Bobbink & Atkins have had a grand season, and their travelers, who were both at the New York show, report a wonderful trade in both the wholesale and retail departments. Their exhibit of topiary work was one of the novel features of the exhibition and their fine specimens of evergreens deserved the interest awakened.

F. R. Pierson is getting used to gold medals, so that the telegram from Kansas City announcing "gold medal for Piersoni," caused no excitement and was evidently expected.

Alex. J. Guttman's trade is steadily increasing since the wholesale department of his business secures all his attention. He carries a large stock of extra fine Brides and Maids.

Charles Millang finds his greenhouse venture a success from the start. Hardly a plant remains unsold from his first shipments. He bought all of Chas. Zeller's orange trees at the Madison Square exhibition and rapidly sold them out the next day.

Jas. McManus still handles a large quantity of fine orchids daily, and is adding to his growers right along. His shipments out of town are increasing.

Ghormley's establishment will have to be enlarged or the mums will have to decrease. His store is ablaze with color and after the early shipments are arranged there isn't much room left for customers.

President Walter Sheridan is back again with his "Beauties" after a strenuous week at the flower show, to which he devoted his time and effort with an assiduity and patience that every member of the club might well have emulated.

Today and Thursday the American Institute's fall show of flowers and ornamental plants takes place at the Berkeley Lyceum. The entries are numerous and the prizes large.

The John J. Crooke Co., of New York and Chicago, reports a wonderful demand for its special lines of floral foil, in rose and violet, which seems to be growing constantly in popularity.

Mr. Sander, Jr., of the English house of Sander & Co., sails Saturday for his native land, very much pleased with America.

Stumpp & Walter Co. report an October business in the aggregate, double the trade of the same month in 1901, certainly a most healthful sign.

H. H. Berger & Co. are receiving a fine lot of Araucaria excelsa seed this year from New Zealand, and as these seeds are in the market at intervals of three years only, now is an opportune time to secure them.

Japanese rubrum and auratum lilies and all the speciosum varieties will be very scarce this season.

At the Central Park greenhouses the annual exhibition of orchids and mums is in progress, and as usual crowds appreciate this splendid yearly show which is free to all. On Sunday "standing room" was at a premium.

Visitors were numerous last week. In addition to those already mentioned there were F. W. Taylor, of St. Louis, full of World's Fair news; H. P. Kelsey, Boston; H. Eichholz, Waynesboro, Pa.; S. T. Bradley, New Haven; W. J. Buckley, Garrison; W. F. Ross, Madison; Arthur Cowee, Berlin; A. Salter, Rochester; John White, Pittsfield; E. Duggan, of the Dale Estate, Brampton, Ont.; John Thatcher, Amsterdam; W. R. Smith, Washington; John Burton, Philadelphia.

Mr. M. Purdy, the wholesale florist of Twenty-ninth street, has moved across the way and now has a part of M. Hart's store.

The report that Henry Pfister, who has for so many years been head gardener at the White House Conservatories, Washington, is no longer needed in that capacity, has been heard here with general regret. J. Austin Shaw.

The Review is the best value for the money that I know of.—Chas. R. Higbee, Jr., Hyde Park, Mass.

New Pink Rose Canadian Queen.

PHILADELPHIA.

A "Friend of all the World."

A great English writer in his description of life in India gives curious pictures of the ideas and thoughts of the people. One who did good among his fellows there was styled the "friend of all the world." His world was a small one and far away, yet the name is rather taking. Has not our world of florists someone who recalls this odd name? It certainly has, and no mistake. These thoughts were uppermost in my mind last Sunday morning after spending a delightful two hours at Forty-ninth and Market streets with Robert Craig. These visits are always a pleasure, not so frequent now as I could wish, perhaps even more keenly enjoyed for that reason. It is all nonsense to say that boys must enjoy themselves while they are young; the fewer the holidays the more one enjoys them, no matter if school is long since passed.

I digress. Robert Craig leads the way to the new carnation range of three houses, two 225x30, one 225x12, lately finished in good style, Lord & Burnham's iron plates, posts and purlins, all fitted ready for use, the effect light and airy. The carnations housed three weeks ago were starting to make growth. Adonis looked especially flourishing, already showing quite a lot of blooms. This variety is considered a wonder, deserving of all praise. W. P. Craig favored me with the names of the varieties they are growing: Scarlet: Adonis in quantity, a few Estelle (Crane will not be benched). Crimson: Governor Roosevelt (Maceo has been dropped). White: Lorna, some Alba, I think he said, also two seedlings, one very free. Pink, Floriana, considered an improved Joost, though lighter, Mrs. E. A. Nelson, Dorothy and a few Joost. Yellow: Dorothy Whitney, believed to be a good thing. Fancy: Prosperity, considered decidedly profitable, even though a late bloomer and a bit shy. The plants looked vigorous and healthy. I think Mrs. Lawson and one or two more sorts not in the above list are grown, but of this I am not sure. One is struck by the extreme briefness of the life of a carnation. The leading sorts of a few years ago are almost forgotten today.

Next the chrysanthemums. The yellow Eatons just coming into bloom are extremely fine. This variety sported from the white Timothy Eaton, and unlike most yellow sports, the color is almost an orange, reminding one of an old variety, W. H. Lincoln, in the intensity of its depth of color. In size, vigor, foliage and habits the yellow Eaton seems an ideal variety. Columbia, a beautiful globular flower of a pleasing shade of light pink, is an attractive novelty. Mr. Craig thinks that chrysanthemum growers should study the best paying varieties more closely and confine their efforts to these. Too many early sorts are grown and often sacrificed. Late varieties are apt to be far more profitable.

There are three large houses filled with Areca lutescens in fine condition, one house of 6, 7 and 8-inch plants being especially well furnished with glossy, green foliage. The large sizes of palms are scarce now. Mr. Craig thinks that the smaller sizes are, and probably always will be quite plentiful. Crotons are a specialty here and have sold well this season. One pretty variety, Croton Craigie, golden yellow foliage marked with green, was pointed out and admired. It originated with John A. Shellem and has not been sent out yet. There were several houses of azaleas, freshly imported, in good condition, no loss of foliage to mar their beauty.

Flowering plants are Mr. Craig's special pride and glory. A house of 1,500 cyclamens is worth seeing. Many of them are in full flower at this early day, with lots of buds coming on. The types that throw up their spikes all at once, not straggling into bloom, are especially prized.

Begonia Gloire de Lorraine is the other flowering gem; it looks even better than last season. A number of pans are made up with little Asparagus plumosus plants around the edge, a very pretty combination. A promising lot of small plants are coming on for center pieces and ferneries. There is a nicely colored batch of Dracæna terminalis in another house. There are also batches of Dracæna Lindeni and Dracæna Massangeana. The latter are more robust and to me a more pleasing variety than the former.

The Flower Market.

Through the courtesy of Secretary Lonsdale I am able to give the names of the firms which sent beautiful floral offerings to the opening of the market with their good wishes for the success of the enterprise. They were: Charles Fox, Hugh Graham, Robert Crawford, Jr., Julius Wolff, Jr., Century Flower Shop, Mrs. Mary Heron, Jos. Kift & Son, H. H. Battles, C. H. Fox, Chas. Schick & Son, Herman Schoenfeld, August Lutz, B. Stahl. Business at the market is progressing satisfactorily. Stuff is selling well. New growers who have until now been peddling their stock are coming in and the demand for stalls is increasing steadily.

Notes.

Joseph Heacock has an exceptionally well grown lot of palms of marketable sizes.

The directors of the American Rose Society are here this week attending the chrysanthemum show and arranging a schedule for the rose show to be held in this city next March in connection with the spring show of the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society.

James W. Paul, Jr., has done much to further the interests of the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society in its work.

John Burton is sending in the first Cypripedium insigne to this market.

Walter Yates, a son of Thaddeus N. Yates, and a graduate of Yale College, is a new member of our bowling team and an enthusiastic and promising bowler.

Edward Reid has added a large basement under his entire store, doubling his storage capacity and giving much needed room for the increased shipments of choice stock now coming in. A new consignor has been sending in some very fine Perles.

Miss Katherine Cleary, of the Plender Co., was married last Wednesday, November 12, to Robert Glass, who is with Leo Niessen.

A correction: Last week's report of the flower market party should have read "H. T. Dumont, and A. G. Campbell, who is with Leo Niessen, sang delightfully."

Eugene Bernheimer has received some very heavy orders for chrysanthemums during this week, one order being for 500 choice blooms.

The market is improving. Stock is too plentiful, but enormous quantities are moved at fair prices. Much poor stock and some of fine quality goes to the street at ridiculous prices. Beauties are scarce and find ready sale.

Pennock has quantities of choice orchids.

Niessen, Reid and Bernheimer are receiving sweet peas, and chrysanthemums go fairly well.

W. J. Baker is receiving some fine Silver Wedding and Appleton from George Carpenter.

The Germantown Horticultural Society held its November meeting on Monday evening.

Manager Meehan says that the choice of the stalls in the Flower Market will be sold at auction on Saturday, November 15, at 10 a. m. PHIL.

The Market.

It has been a heavy week to carry—all around. Chrysanthemums, of course, continue to be "the thing." They have been coming in extra good and extra fast. But the demand for them has well equalled the supply. An enormous quantity has been distributed and prices have been good enough so that mum men should keep mum indeed. So far as my observation goes, they are all content with the situation.

The rose growers have a thorn or two in the side. There is really not a heavy cut just now, but the demand does not equal it in volume; retailers cannot sell them and all are anxiously awaiting the decrease of the chrysanthemum moon, expected to begin after another week.

Carnations! Whew!! The woods have been full of them, especially the white ones, but they have not yet got their winter qualities on in most cases, so that but comparatively few are first-class, and this kind has sold well. The less said about a large quantity of the poorer grades the sooner they will be forgotten.

Violets have not been one whit too familiar, but I think all real demands have been cared for, thanks to the diplomacy of the florist in hypnotically suggesting something else; and there has been considerable "inter-repurchasing" going on among the retailers to make the supply go as far as possible. Retailers accommodate each other that way much more than formerly, an item to credit to the social side of the Co-operative market, in bringing all hands together on one floor under free and easy conditions.

Odds and ends are not plentiful. Orchids are not grown in this section to any extent. There is a little bouvardia, a little candy-tuft, narcissus, etc., but we are really now between "grass and glass," with the former badly frost-bitten and the latter undeveloped.

Boston News.

There have occurred a couple of "annual events" from which I could have derived a column or two had not the multitudinous perplexities of the week prevented my attendance in each case. The chrysanthemum show at Horticultural Hall occupied about all the week, with varying reports from visitors, from which I infer that the flower display was about of the old pattern, and that the display of fruit and vegetables was never equalled by the society. The list of awards, as here appended, contains a gratifying number of names of commercial growers:

Gratuities were awarded to the following: Lager & Hurrell, Summit, N. J., display of orchids. L. H. Foster, Dorchester, Mass., display of Nephrolepis Anna Foster. F. R. Pierson Co., Tarrytown, N. Y., display of Nephrolepis Piersoni. R. J. Farquhar & Co., Boston, Mass., display of palms, bay trees, etc. E. N. Peirce & Sons, Waltham, Mass., for four vases chrysanthemums. Patten & Co., Tewksbury, Mass., for twelve vases assorted carnations. S. J. Reuter Westerly, R. I., two vases carnations. H. A. Stevens & Co., Somerville, Mass., vase of Gov. Wolcott. E. G. Asmus, West Hoboken, N. J., for vase of Twentieth Century rose, and to The H. Dale Estate, Brampton, Ont., honorable mention for the new rose, Canadian Queen.

The annual exhibition of roses and chrysanthemums at the Waban Rose conservatories also was pulled off in its usual form. Those fortunate enough to go report a very pleasant outing, the usual fine display at the magnificent greenhouses and a gorgeous time at the banquet at the famous historical old hostelry, Bailey's Hotel, Wellesley. Among the visitors from other states were W. R. Smith, of the Washington, D. C., Botanical Gardens, and W. F. Gude, of Gude Bros., leading retail florists of that city. As after dinner speakers I hear most said of Warren Ewell and Rhymester Butterworth, although many others participated.

J. S. MANTER.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

Business for the past week was reported fairly good by some of the uptown florists, who had several large weddings; while the downtown florists, who had to content themselves with transient trade and funeral work, report that business was slow.

The event of the week was the horse show, which helped the florists a great deal in the sale of some of their surplus flowers. Large mums, American Beauties and violets were the flowers mostly carried by the ladies at the show. Notwithstanding this demand for first-class stock, the cut flower market has been dull, particularly so from the growers' standpoint, for the abundance of chrysanthemums has forced prices on everything else down to the lowest limit. Chrysanthemums have been selling cheaper than ever before. The local supply is still made up of the earlier sorts. Kuehn is receiving from Vesey's about the best that come to this market.

At this writing the glut in roses and carnations is not so great, and Saturday good roses were actually scarce, also carnations. This was something unusual and, of course, prices on roses and carnations went up a little. California violets are still coming in in large quantities; in fact, more than the demand calls for. Cosmos are out of the market just now. Plenty of very fine quality of valley is in the market at the usual price, and enough good smilax is on hand to supply the demand.

Notes.

The Prince of Siam was showered with American Beauties on his arrival at the Union Station on last Saturday.

Mr. William Trillow, of Chicago, is in town this week, calling on the trade.

Elmer D. Smith, of Adrian, Mich., passed through here Saturday on his way home from the Kansas City show. Elmer was all praises for the management of the show and was in a very happy mood, having captured all the good things in mums.

Frank M. Ellis returned from Kansas City Sunday morning. He says: "It was the biggest thing I ever saw, and a pleasant place to meet friends."

Henry Aul is using one of Max Herzog's smoke consumers and self-feeders at his place, which he claims is just the thing and will save much coal the coming winter. His new white carnation, St. Louis, is doing nicely, and some fine blooms of it are seen at Kuehn's every day.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred C. Weber celebrated the twenty-fifth anniversary of their wedding at their home, 4326 Olive street, last Friday evening, entertaining their friends with a euchre party. Many handsome presents of silver were received by Mr. and Mrs. Weber. The house was beautifully decorated with pink carnations, chrysanthemums and palms. Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Beneke were the only ones present at the anniversary who had the pleasure of attending the wedding twenty-five years before.

Invitations are out for the thirteenth annual banquet to gardeners, florists and nurserymen to be held at the Mercantile Club on Wednesday, November 19, at 7 p. m.

On Tuesday night a party of fifteen St. Louis florists left for Chicago to attend the flower show given at that place. Those who went are: F. M. Ellis, C. A. Kuehn, Otto Koenig, Fred Ammann, Theo. Miller, Fred C. Weber, John Steidle, A. Jablonsky, Fred Meinhardt, wife and sister; Carl Beyer, Carew Sanders, J. F. Windt, Jr., and J. J. Beneke. They will visit all the large plants adjacent to that city, also those in Joliet.

Miss Belle Miller, of Springfield, Ill., is in town this week calling on friends.

Club Meeting Postponed.

As most of the members of the Florists' Club are visiting Chicago this week, the club meeting has been postponed until next Thursday afternoon, November 20.

Bowling.

The florist bowlers who are bowling in the league are doing quite well and making good averages. I will give the bowling readers in the next issue the averages of the fifteen games bowled. The Florists' Bowling Club still rolls every Monday night at the Monarch alleys and some good scores are reported. The regulars are always in attendance.

Seed Trade News.

A PHILADELPHIA seedsman recently disposed of a lot of White Spine cucumber to the trade for $1.50 per pound, spot cash.

THE bulb business has recently shown a decided improvement, the finer varieties of narcissus, tulips and named hyacinths being well cleaned up.

LATE European advices are to the effect that many items will be shorter than the August bulletins indicated, notably beet and celery. California growers report that many surpluses are being cleaned up at prices much higher than the contract.

THE 1902 crop of New Jersey seeds is cleaning up less than one-half the usual yield, muskmelon, cucumber and tomato being a total failure. Onion seed is about one-half a crop. Egg plant and pepper is likewise short, and the sample of many lots will be poor. Fully two-thirds of the onion seed sown for sets produced large onions and the long continued spell of wet weather has already shown its bad effect on the few sets harvested. Both dwarf and pole beans sold well throughout the season and no seed of these has been saved. Same is true of sweet corn.

Another week of low prices, a flood of chrysanthemums, and no appreciation in business. A chilly wave put a little snap in the market on Saturday, but Monday's weather was much like that of midsummer. Saturday's shipments of mums were the largest ever known in this market. Monday a few special Beauties sold at $4 a dozen and Brides and Maids of extra fine quality and in limited quantity reached $10 per 100. Carnations are not so plentiful and an advance is looked for before the end of the week. Violets occasionally command $1.00, but they must be exceptionally fine to do so; 25 to 50 cents is the average. Some extra large mums reached $3.00 a dozen but the great mass of those flowers are a positive drug in the market. With the opening of the horse show and society's return to the city, better conditions are anticipated.

WACO, TEX.—The Texas State Floral Society will hold its annual chrysanthemum show here Nov. 12 to 15.

CARLISLE, PA.—The new greenhouses being erected by the Carlisle Nursery Co. cover a space of 26,000 square feet.

There was a suggestion of winter in the air on Monday, and the promised cold wave seemed at hand, but it didn't last long, and on Tuesday there was rain instead of the anticipated snow.

The cut has shortened slightly and the demand has improved somewhat, so prices on the best grades are somewhat better held, but there is still a large surplus of poor grade stock that moves slowly at bottom prices. A smart cold snap is needed to stiffen up the market as well as the general quality of the stock. The opening of the flower show has had no appreciable effect on the market as yet.

There is plenty of stock in all lines except roses. Mums are coming in in large quantities and inferior stock goes at low figures. Carnations are improving in quality and demand is good.

The market is steady, and with a little more cold weather trade is expected to have quite a boom. Mums are the flowers in most demand, which is increased by the fact that many of the stores are having mum exhibitions this week. Carnations sell for funeral work only. Roses are much better and are being cleaned up quite well, but at small prices. Beauties are always sought after. Violets are not any too plentiful as yet, but quality is first-class. Cypripediums are making a fine showing now. Cyclamen are arriving in 4, 5 and 6-inch pots and find a ready sale on account of profusion of blooms. DILGER.

The annual exhibition and the convention of the Chrysanthemum Society of America are covered elsewhere in this issue. Also the visitors at the show.

When Mr. E. Buettner returned home Tuesday evening after attending to his duties as judge at the exhibition, he found that during his absence he had himself received a double first premium in the shape of twin daughters. Congratulations are very much in order.

The annual banquet of the Florists' Club will be given this (Thursday) evening at 8 o'clock in the banquet hall of the Auditorium Hotel. P. J. Hauswirth is chairman of the committee.

Albert Fuchs, owner of the greenhouses occupied by Walter Retzer, and the principal creditor, was the largest buyer at the auction sale of Mr. Retzer's plants for the benefit of creditors last week.

Mr. Philip Foley, of the Foley Mfg. Co., was among the Chicagoans who visited the Kansas City show.

Last week the delivery wagon of I. C. Silliman, the west side florist, was converted into a "prairie schooner" by several small boys, who appropriated the rig and started west to "kill Indians." The prompt action of a suspicious policeman saved the Indians from extermination and restored the wagon to its owner.

The formal opening of the Ogden Floral Co., 848 West Harrison street, took place last Saturday. An excellent display was made.

A meeting of growers has been called for 3 o'clock next Saturday afternoon at the Palmer House to consider plans for a flower market in this city.

At the league games bowled last Tuesday evening the McKellar & Winterson's won three games from the Retailers and the Vaughan team won two out of three from the Wholesalers.

Nightshirt troubles seem to be epidemic in the Breitmeyer family. Fred B. tried to bring his with him to Chicago and almost exactly duplicated his brother's experience at Asheville.

Mr. Alex. Wallace, editor of the Florists' Exchange, New York, is in the city attending the convention and the exhibition.

The largest apple orchard in the world is being planted in Laclede County, Mo. It contains 5,000 acres. The orchard is owned by a company with a capital stock of $1,000,000. The officers of the company are: President, William Bayard Craig, chancellor of Drake University, Des Moines, Iowa; Vice-President, Dr. G. W. Miller, of Des Moines; Secretary, Frank M. Carroll, Des Moines; Treasurer, A. T. Zwart, of the Des Moines National Bank. Among the members of the Board of Directors are: Judge C. A. Bishop, of the Iowa Supreme Court; M. J. Wragg, president of the Iowa State Horticultural Society; S. A. Hughes, of St. Louis, general immigration agent of the 'Frisco system, and William C. Carroll, of Kansas City.

Bridgeton, N. J.—The city council has decided to spend $40,000 for a public park, the ordinance being passed by a unanimous vote.

McHenry, Ill.—H. M. Jensen has removed to Woodstock, where he will build greenhouses and establish a business.

You make a mistake if you buy Araucaria Excelsa from some other firm, as it is impossible for any other firm to give you such value for the money as we can. Why? Because we make a specialty of them; filling our houses in early April with the best to be found in Europe, raised from top cuttings only. All must be sold before Christmas to make room for Easter plants.

ORANGE, N. J.

The attraction at the November meeting of the New Jersey Floricultural Society was the exhibition of a series of lantern-slides, which had been prepared by the Society of American Florists for their convention when in New York and now loaned by Mr. Robert Kift in the name of that society.

The pictures covered that field of floral art, attending the decoration of the simple dwelling, the mansion, the country church, the metropolitan church, decorations for balls, dinners and special public occasions and gave illustrations of the more brilliant events in the history of the craft, among which was the prize pieces of Hugh Graham, the work of Thorley, Small and The Rosary, the Bradley-Martin ball and Vanderbilt-Marlboro wedding, together with some special decorations at the White House.

It demonstrated its usefulness as a means of entertainment and instruction at our society meetings and if taken up largely by them will call strenuously for some bureau where appropriate pictures may be obtained at small cost, for use by floral societies. There was more than the usual expression of pleasure at a successful meeting and a demand for the repetition of its presentation.

IMPORTANT DAMAGE CASE.

Two suits, of interest to persons interested in floriculture, have recently been settled in the courts. They are suits brought by Miss Sarah B. Fay and Mr. Michael H. Walsh against the N. Y., N. H. & H. R. R. Co., to recover for injury done to their rose gardens at Woods Hole, Mass., by the poisonous gases in the smoke from a fire set by the railroad.

On May 13, 1901, the railroad tore down and set fire to some old buildings on their premises at Woods Hole. Part of the material burned was tarred roofing, and the smoke from this fire, containing carbolic acid gas and other gases injurious to plants, was blown over into the gardens of Miss Fay and Mr. Walsh, and many of the rose plants killed and others seriously injured. Suits were brought and the cases referred to Prescott F. Hall, Esq., of Boston, as auditor. At the hearings Miss Fay and Mr. Walsh were represented by the Hon. Robert M. Morse and Mr. Henry M. Hutchings, and the railroad by Mr. Thomas C. Day. The auditor assessed the damages to Miss Fay at $5,387 and the damages to Mr. Walsh at $16,602. Before the cases were to be tried at Barnstable the railroad paid $20,000 to settle both cases.

It is of special interest that damages were awarded, not only for the market value of the standard varieties but for the stocks of new roses raised by Mr. Walsh and not yet disseminated, and that the values of these were largely determined by the success of Mr. Walsh's previous introductions; also, "for loss of prize money and of advertising at exhibitions." Mr. Walsh had in the past received numerous prizes at exhibitions and the value of the prizes he would have won but for the loss of his stock, and the resulting advertising, was considered in the estimate of damage suffered.

In the address to the auditor appear many references to previous decisions in similar cases that would be of great value to the attorney of any florist having to prosecute a suit for damages of the character named. An important precedent has been established that will be of great benefit to others who suffer damage of this sort.

A NEW YORK RHYMSTER.

Mr. Hartman, of Bradshaw & Hartman inspired by the mountain dew stories of Mr. Bradshaw after his southern trip for holly, has drifted into song, as the following lines will show:

Bradshaw and Hartman are made of the stuff
That never yields and never takes a bluff.
They traveled through the south, o'er mountains high,
On the backs of mules (don't ask them why).
They found the goods now so much in demand,
The brilliant holly, now so gay and grand.
Enough! They'll have to fill your store,
And if you say so they can give you more.
Thanksgiving is near; take a case or two
To sell with your flowers; 'tis a novelty true.
So give them a call, you know where they're at,
53 West 28th st., you've got that down pat.

WOOD FOR FUEL.

We are compelled to heat our greenhouses (three of them, 20x200) with wood this winter owing to scarcity of coal in this locality. We are to use 3-foot hardwood maple and beech, split. Our boilers (two of them) heat the entire plant, are sectional, one fire box being 4x4 ft. and the other 4x5 ft. We heat with steam.

Kindly advise if we can maintain a night temperature of 50 degrees. We grow carnations only. The outside temperature gets as low during winter as 15 to 20 degrees below zero. Under bench heat. Outside benches have four return pipes each, middle benches two pipes each. Two main supply pipes (overhead), 2½-inch, in each house. Returns, 1-inch. Mains out of boilers, 5-inch. Two houses connected, one detached.

No. 404.

In answer to inquiry No. 404, judging by the size of the fire boxes, the boilers are more than sufficient to heat the houses in question and the arrangement of the heating surface is liberal. In firing with wood, a portion of the grates should be covered with some convenient non-combustible material, the exact arrangement of the covering will depend largely upon the construction of the grates. If the grates are of the ordinary sectional shaking variety, it would be well to disconnect two-thirds from the shaking mechanism; that is, starting from the front, leave the first grate connected, disconnect the next two, using the fourth, disconnect the next two and so on, covering the fixed grates with a piece of sheet iron, fire clay or any other convenient material. If the grates are fixed, that is, non-shaking, cover the whole excepting a space of about two inches around all four sides. In firing with wood, very little bottom air is required and a liberal supply directly into the fire through the lower part of the fire-door is desirable.

CINCINNATI.

The cool spell, which arrived the first of last week, proved to be of short duration; but fortunately it had the desired effect of shortening the supply of both roses and carnations.

Carnations came in freely, which put down the price considerably before they could be moved. Even the better grades suffered some, but not to any great extent.

Chrysanthemums in all colors, sizes and shapes are coming in in vast quantities. They sell very well and at a price that, all things considered, is very good.

George & Allan are now cutting both Romans and narcissus. They sell at $4 per 100. Violets are now much sought after and a very good supply is available, both single and double. The single ones seem to have the call.

Business is averaging very good. Many wedding decorations are booked for this week. Julius Baer has one in which he will use many hundred Bonnaffons. This mum is being grown very largely this year and as usual sells well.

Saturday was the regular meeting of the Cincinnati Florists' Society, also the annual chrysanthemum show. The show was first-class and among the great number of blooms shown there was not one that was not all that could be desired.

The judges were C. J. Jones, T. W. Hardesty and R. A. Kelly. The competition for best vase of Bonnaffons was close and it was almost a toss up which vase would win. The winners were as follows: Vase white mums—R. Witterstaetter, 1st with Chadwick and 3rd with Eaton; the E. G. Hill Co. 2nd with Eaton. Vase pink—Wm. Rodgers 1st, 2nd and 3rd, with Perrin. The E. G. Hill Co. had Mlle. Marie Liger entered in this class, but the judges considered Perrin good enough to beat it for all prizes. Vase yellow—R. Witterstaeter, 1st and 2nd with Col. D. Appleton; the E. G. Hill Co., 3rd with Eaton. Vase Bonnaffon—The E. G. Hill Co., 1st; R. Witterstaeter, 2nd; W. Rodgers, 3rd.

General display went to R. Witterstaeter, who staged, beside mums, several vases containing over one hundred of this year's seedlings, every one of which showed good qualities. Two vases of Enquirers were in first-class shape.

George & Allan made a very creditable display, including chrysanthemums, roses, Romans, narcissus and valley, the latter being very fine. They also staged in competition for the S. A. F. O. H. medals a plant of adiantum, which, although it closely resembled cuneatum, is a vast improvement over it.

J. A. Peterson staged a vase of Lawson which contained 100 blooms. The judges awarded it a certificate of merit.

W. Murphy showed a vase of Murphy's White, which was in very good shape. Henry Schwarz had a vase of Appleton which were very good.

The press committee did some good work and a very large crowd was the result. These shows are always free to the public and this time there were very close to five thousand people who passed through the club rooms to see the chrysanthemums.

In the evening the society meeting was held, but very little business was done. L. H. Kirk was voted into the club. A motion to hold a general show on the second Saturday of December was referred to the show committee with power to act.

Ben George was officer of the day, but we failed to see the swallow tail and stove-pipe hat. All flowers securing prizes became the property of the society and E. G. Gillett was appointed to dispose of them to best advantage.

Frank Snyder, formerly of Gallipolis, Ohio, is now with J. A. Peterson, at Westwood.

Jim Allan, who has been spending a month's vacation in Boston, is expected home this week.

B. Eschner, of Philadelphia, was a caller.

R. Witterstaetter will take in the Chicago show. C. J. OHMER.

THE photographs of the Kansas City show that were reproduced in our last issue were by Davidson, the photographer, Kansas City, from whom duplicates may be obtained if desired.

The Lake Erie & Western railroad is preparing to plant on available tracts of land along its right of way an immense number of trees, to be used when they have attained suitable size, for railroad ties. The expense for ties for a railroad system is something gigantic, each tie when laid in the track costing something near $1, and the price is constantly increasing as timber becomes more scarce. F. G. Miller, assistant forestry expert in the Bureau of Forestry at Washington, has been conferring with the officials of the road concerning the undertaking.

Joliet, Ill.—Mr. and Mrs. Wilson M. Tiplady welcomed a daughter October 29. She has been named Enchantress. Mother and child doing well.

Lafayette, Ind.—Geo. W. Spitzer, of the Hogan-Johnson Drug Company, is building on his west side property a greenhouse to cost $2,000.

Marengo, Ill.—C. W. Prescott, the nurseryman, has admitted his son William to partnership and the firm name will be C. W. Prescott & Son.

ST. PAUL.

Chrysanthemum Show.

The flower show, under the auspices of the Ladies' Auxiliary of the N. W. Manufacturers' Association, opened November 10, most auspiciously on time, with a fine exhibit made by local florists and two private growers.

This is the first attempt at holding a flower show in this city in several years, and much credit is due to the ladies who planned the exhibition.

The awards were as follows:

Collection of single stem chrysanthemums, any color—1st, L. L. May & Co., $25.00; 2nd, Holm & Olsen, $10.00. Collection chrysanthemum plants, 1st, Holm & Olsen, $15.00; 2nd, L. L. May & Co., $10.00; 3rd, Vogt Bros., $5.00. Collection of cut flowers, 1st, L. L. May & Co., $10.00. Basket or design, 1st, Holm & Olsen, $25.00; 2nd, E. F. Lemke, $15.00. Collection of orchids, Dr. R. Schiffman, $25.00. Collection of crotons and foliage plants, 1st, L. L. May & Co., $15.00; 2nd, E. F. Lemke, $5.00. Collection of cut roses, not less than 12 kinds, Minneapolis Floral Co., $20.00. Designs or baskets of cut flowers, Windmiller & Co., Mankato, $10.00; R. J. Mendenhall, Minneapolis, $10.00; one prize equally divided. Aug. S. Swanson, and A. Hallstrom, gardener for J. J. Hill, made fine displays not for competition. In my next I hope to describe the different exhibits in detail. N. Y. Z.

An Iowa nursery agent has been posing as a representative of the Experiment Station at Ames, and obtained orders upon the strength of this alleged connection. The matter was called to the attention of Professor Price, who expresses the hope that the man will be prosecuted to the extent of the law.

Shenandoah, Ia.—D. S. Lake is building an immense packing shed. It will be 130x195 feet, with an "L" 75x164 feet. The side walls will be 14 feet high and 20 inches thick, with an air space. Switches from the railroad tracks will be run into the building, and cars will be loaded under cover. The building will cover practically an acre of ground.

The Florists' Manual is a fine work, and we are sure you will have orders for more after a few of the florists here have seen it.—Martin & Forbes, Portland, Oregon.

LILLIAN POND

AT THE GREAT NEW YORK FLOWER SHOW IT SCORED 94 POINTS!

AT THE GREAT NEW YORK FLOWER SHOW IT WAS AWARDED FIRST PRIZE!

PLACE YOUR ORDERS AT ONCE.

You need this grand variety. It cannot be beaten in habit and growth. Extra early and free.

It will bring you more money to the square foot than any white carnation you have ever grown.

MR. S. J. REUTER, Westerly, R. I.

We have had the exclusive sale of the Lillian Pond during the past four years. There is no other white carnation shipped us that is so much in demand as the Lillian Pond. It was always ordered in advance at a price in excess of other white carnations. It is a good commercial flower; stands handling and shipping well; large, fine form; strong stems; a good keeper and very fragrant. WELCH BROS.

MR. S. J. REUTER, Westerly, R. I.

Dear Sir: Please book my order for 50 Lillian Pond carnation for a start—will require more later. I consider this the best white carnation on the market today. We have handled it in large numbers in our cut flower trade through Welch Bros. of Boston, and we can easily get fifteen cents more than for any other kind per dozen. I am pleased to have the chance of getting some of the stock for myself, for it is certainly "a stunner" and will keep its place with any of the "novelties" coming out this season. We have plenty of good ones in other colors, but we wanted a good white, and I certainly feel as if your Lillian Pond fills the bill. I certainly wish you every success with it. I remain,

Respectfully yours,
ALEXANDER EMSLIE.

MR. S. J. REUTER, Westerly, R. I.

Dear Sir: We handled the Lillian Pond last year and we think it is the very best white pink on the market today. Its keeping qualities are unsurpassed.

Yours truly, THORNTON BROS.,
Lawrence, Mass.

MR. S. J. REUTER, Westerly, R. I.

Dear Sir: I consider the Lillian Pond to be the best selling white pink in the market. Having handled it two years would highly recommend it to growers as a first-class variety in every way. Yours very truly,
JOHN McKENZIE.

Trade dropped off considerably during Thursday and Friday of last week, but the extra fine weather of Saturday helped to run off a lot of the surplus stock, although we believe that the continual rush of mums will have a tendency to overload the market for a few days, and we hear on all sides that "the last bunch of chrysanthemums are just lovely yet," which those of the trade recognize as one of the reasons why mums usually kill the cut flower market after they have been in abont three weeks.

We notice a considerable increase in the supply of carnations, and note that some of the large growers are pulling down the price considerably.

Good mums are being sold at from 2 to 8 cents, roses from 1½ to 6 cents and carnations at from 1 to 3 cents. Seeing the kind of stock that is going at so low a figure we wonder where the higher priced stuff comes in. The Timothy Eaton mum is filling the front windows of most of the large stores.

Mr. John Cotterill has just returned home from a deer hunt feeling much recuperated. He reported game scarce but said he had a good time. Mr. Cotterill is cutting some Golden Weddings, which are as fine as any to be seen in the city.

Los Angeles, Cal.—Mrs. Theodosia B. Shepherd, of Ventura, Cal., recently addressed two large audiences in this city. THE FINEST PINK ROSE EVER INTRODUCED.

CANADIAN QUEEN.

Winner of the only Medal given at the New York Flower Show October, 1902, for new rose. This Queen among roses is a sport from Mrs. Pierpont Morgan, possessing all its vigorous habits; stands erect with strong stem and beautiful clean cut foliage. The flower is perfect in form, each petal opening out faultlessly, and in size equals Morgan, being four inches in diameter. The color is a shell pink throughout of exceptional shade that will make it the peer of all other roses in light pink. The plant is most prolific and the keeping qualities are unusually good.

American Florist, report New York Show:—"Canadian Queen from the Dale Estate, Brampton, leads in the novelty section."

The Florists' Exchange, of New York, Nov. 1, 1902:—"Among the new things on exhibition are: The Canadian Queen rose, shown by the Dale Estate, Brampton, Ont., a sport from Mrs. Pierpont Morgan, of a beautiful shade of pink, lighter than that of Mrs. Morgan and a little deeper than the color of Mrs. Oliver Ames. This new-comer is highly spoken of by the rose growers present."

J. B. Keller's Sons, of Rochester, N. Y., write Oct. 20, 1902:—"Of all the pink roses we have ever seen we think this one (Canadian Queen) is the prettiest both in color and shape of flower and beats everything in a pink rose, in our estimation. If it is as good a grower and as free a bloomer as it appears to be it ought to have a phenomenal sale if you intend putting it on the market. We do not know of anything that will compare with it."

T. Young, Jr., of New York, under date of Nov. 4, 1902:—"Gentlemen: The Canadian Queens you have been shipping to me have arrived in the very best of condition, and I like the rose very much. It has been shown to the principal retailers and they all admire it. Its keeping qualities are excellent, and it will no doubt prove a valuable acquisition to the list of good roses and also prove to be a profitable rose to the grower as well as the retailer."

TESTIMONIALS PROFFERED BY A FEW FLORISTS WHO HAVE SEEN THE ROSE.

J. S. Murray, Montreal, Que., writes under date Oct. 2, 1902:—"Dear Sirs: Thank you so much for sending me the new rose, Canadian Queen, which I think lovely and waxy and am sure will be very salable. The color, stem and foliage are beautiful. My customers who saw it to-day seem highly pleased with it. The fragrance, too, is delightful."

Philip Breitmeyer, of Detroit, Mich., Oct. 7, 1902:—"Canadian Queen is rightly named, you should be proud of it. I think it is a grand color. Canadian Queen fills just the want; it will supplant Cusin. To bear out what I say we want as many as we can plant for next season, if you will send it out. Put us on early so as to get an order in."

S. Tidy & Son, Toronto, Canada, say under date Oct. 2, 1902:—"We think the new rose is a lovely color and predict a great success for it, providing it has all the good qualities of the parent, and judging from what we saw of Mrs. Oliver Ames at the spring New York show would say without hesitation that Canadian Queen is in every way its superior."

W. J. Palmer, of Buffalo, N. Y., writes under date Oct. 22, 1902:—"The Queen roses received last night were very fine, could not have been better. Should say that Canadian Queen is a better rose than Morgan or Cusin, and when you get ready to send it out will have to try some of it."

We have had this rose (unknown to the public) for three years but have not exhibited it until now, as we desired to make such a test of its qualities as would warrant us in recommending it to the trade, and we have now no hesitation in saying that it is in every way a more than desirable light pink rose, the best ever sent out and a necessity to any good grower.

PITTSBURG.

No material change has occurred since last week's report, the only change being a decided falling off in roses, which are now somewhat scarce and naturally in big demand. The general tone of the market is somewhat brighter and from now on a steady demand is looked for. Shipping trade is reported as very steady and its continuance can be expected. Reports from all local growers as to stock, and prospects for a good cut for Thanksgiving, are very satisfactory.

The supply of Beauties is still limited, the demand consuming all of them. The quality is very good.

Carnations still remain plentiful, the poorer grades, such as culls, remaining unsold. The standards and fancies find ready sales at fair prices.

Chrysanthemums are now in full sway, and, of course, have somewhat of a depressing effect on other stock. The demand for them is steady. The demand for the medium-sized ones, especially white, such as Ivory, still exceeds the supply. The following local growers who are growing quantities of mums this season are Fred Burki, Theodore Beckert, Wm. Lauch, B. L. Elliott, James Bros. and Charles Hoffmeyer. Some very fine specimens of Golden Wedding, Appleton, Maud Dean, Wanamaker, Perrin, Timothy Eaton, Mayflower and Queen have been sent in by them.

The first paper white narcissus seen this season at the Cut Flower Co.'s were sent in by Charles Koenig.

Julius Ludwig is still cutting some good outdoor cosmos.

C. H. Roney, of Jamestown, N. Y., was a visitor last week.

Ernest Zieger, manager of C. T. Siebert's flower stands in the Liberty Market, was busy last week with funeral work. He reports business very good.

John Britenbaugh, of Milvale, who claims to be the originator of the Little Beauty fuchsia, and Miss Catherine Brown were married last week. They have the best wishes of all the craft.

Frank Faulk, one of the few true sportsmen amongst us florists, spent a few days in the wilds of our nearby mountains, hunting pheasant. He was quite successful, bagging 42 birds. Keep an eye on Snoden, Randolph and Blonde Langhans, boys. Watch them take to the woods with bag and gun!

John Foss is passing around the Perfectos on account of a big, bouncing baby girl, which arrived last week.

Henry Sheaff, Sr., father of Harvey Sheaff, manager of Mrs. E. A. Williams' Penn avenue store, died November 7, at his home in Canonsburg, Pa. Mr. Sheaff served through the civil war in the Tenth Pennsylvania Reserves.

UTICA, N. Y.

The monthly meeting of the Utica Florists' Club was held on Thursday evening, November 6, at the office of Wm. P. Pfeiffer, our vice-president. Quite a large attendance was brought out by a notice that we would have the pleasure of seeing the new carnation, Enchantress. It did not arrive until about 10:30 p. m., but the boys all waited to see it. It arrived in fine condition. After the meeting was over we were served with, I was going to say, a banquet. At any rate, it was very close to it, and the boys all seemed to enjoy it as well, and I am afraid it was a little bit late when we all arrived home.

The club is to have a flower meeting Friday night, November 14, in their new rooms, of which you will hear more later.

Our club is in a very flourishing condition. We have about forty members and are not going to stop until we get them all in the fold.

Trade is fairly good all around.

We had a call yesterday from John E. Hughes, of Oneida. John has to come to Utica about so often to see the good things grown here.

Our bowling club will be ready for work in about two weeks. We are waiting for the new alleys in the Manmerchor building, where we were burned out last winter. S.

MILWAUKEE.

The Florists' Club held a meeting Friday evening and discussed matters pertaining to the next convention of the S. A. F. & O. H. Active work by the various committees will begin after the first of next year. More suitable club rooms, centrally located, will be rented, and perhaps a wholesalers' and retailers' bowling team will be organized. Quite a number will attend the Chicago mum show.

LETTER HEADS.

A reader wishes suggestions as to the best form of letter head. He finds that some local people fail to understand that he makes up funeral designs, but dislikes to put "Funeral designs a specialty" upon his letter head or card, as some florists do.

If he wishes to emphasize the fact that he makes up funeral designs and does not wish to mention them especially, he might use the phrase "Flowers and floral designs for all occasions."

If we were going to do a general business covering all departments we would have our card read something like this: "John Smith, Florist, 223 Jones St., Brownville, O. Flowers and Floral Designs for all Occasions. Decorations of Plants and Flowers for House or Church. Blooming Plants always on hand. Bedding Plants in the Spring. Telephone A 42."

Maybe some of our readers can suggest something better than this.

PRONUNCIATION.

Replying to C. R. the correct pronunciation of Nephrolepis is Nef-rol-e-pis, with the accent on the second syllable, the o in that syllable having the sound of o in not. A pinna (pronounced pinna, with the accent on the first syllable and the a as in Persia) is one of the primary divisions of a pinnate leaf such as that of the nephrolepis. The plural of pinna is pinnæ (pronounced pin-ne, with the accent on the first syllable and the e long as in meat). Pinnate means feathered.

A pinnule (pronounced pin-ul, with the accent on the first syllable and the u long as in mute) is one of the subdivisions of a pinna when same is itself feathered.

The Manual of Business is the title of a very handy volume issued by Daniel Stern, publisher of the American Artisan, Chicago. It contains a vast amount of information that is very convenient to have where it can be readily referred to, such for instance as the rules regarding drafts, notes, banking customs, making of contracts, liability of principals for acts of agents, mortgages, judgments, etc.

Minister (to one of his members, a venerable old gardener): "You have reached a great age, John." John: "Deed ha'e I, sir, for gin I leeve till the 11th o' next month, I'll be an otogerarium."—Glasgow Evening Times.

THE EXHIBITIONS.

THE PHILADELPHIA SHOW.

The chrysanthemum show of the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society, which closed last Saturday evening, was an unqualified success from every standpoint. The exhibits were numerous and of great merit, the effects superb and the attendance away ahead of expectations; in fact, the interest shown was remarkable. A deal of hard work on the three days previous put everything in shape on the opening evening, and when on Tuesday, the 11th, at 8 p. m., the doors of the Horticultural Hall were opened, a magnificent sight was displayed. The corridor was decorated with specimen bay trees. To the right and left of the main stairway were standard and specimen chrysanthemums and Boston ferns, and on the pillars two great vases of foliage plants and vines. The first landing was rich in color, a mass of chrysanthemum Pennsylvania surmounted by palms, with great vases of twenty blooms of specimen Timothy Eaton, Col. Appleton and other choice exhibition varieties.

The effect in the main hall was very striking. The center of the hall was occupied by a large specimen Cycas circinalis elevated on high, surrounded by a group of well-grown crotons of the best varieties richly colored. On both sides of this central group were the larger chrysanthemums in 8 and 10-inch pots, edged by the smaller ones in 6-inch pots. The color effect was heightened by the large number of rich red, bronze and terra-cotta varieties, which set off the lighter shades to great advantage. The stage was occupied by an exhibit of 250 varieties of cacti, all labeled and carefully arranged on sand, with moss between. Some of these cacti were very old and rare specimens. In front of the stage was a handsome exhibit of Pierson's fern, Nephrolepis Piersoni, of which so much has been said. The "Deacon," who is very conservative, describes it in this way: "It is a fine thing; if you had a house of it and another of Boston, the Pierson's would sell first." At the other end was a large table and group of Pandanus Sanderi shown in good form.

The prizes for 6-inch chrysanthemums brought out sharp competition. Merza and Eaton in whites, Appleton and Park in yellows, Murdock and Morel in pinks and Childs in reds appeared to be favorites. Against the wall were groups of foliage plants with a few gay chrysanthemums scattered throughout, but these groups were not so prominent as at the past few shows. The exhibit of cut chrysanthemums in the approaches to the foyer was exceedingly fine. Many of the standard varieties shown were of unusually high quality, while a few promising novelties appeared. Of the latter the Yellow Eaton was the most remarkable, resembling its sister closely in every aspect except that of color, which is a deep yellow.

A small but very fine exhibit of ferns filled the foyer, some of the specimens showing superior culture. Downstairs were the begonias, a large table of Rex varieties, all very finely marked and colored, in the ante-room, and a table of splendid Gloire de Lorraine with some specimens of other flowering sorts. Next was a table of cyclamens in full bloom —a great novelty at this season. A table of well-grown adiantums came next, and along the wall were hardy chrysanthemums of many varieties, all labeled—a most popular exhibit. There were more of the same sort upstairs.

The rose exhibit was not large, but brought out some interesting features: Ideal, a sport from La France, the color a clearer shade of pink than the parent variety, seemingly an improvement; Franz Deegen, a seedling produced by crossing Kaiserin Augusta Victoria with Sunset, and this seedling with Comtesse de Frigneuse, resembles Madam Hoste in the closed form, but when open shows a pleasing saffron shade, stems strong, foliage rather light. The Beauties were very fine, also Liberty and Ivory.

The feature of the carnation table was two vases, one from the east, the other from the west, of an undisseminated variety, which his Grace of York feelingly described in these words: "Enchantress is an enchantress." The color is soft pink, beautifully shaded, blooms large and full, stems strong and of good length.

The Craig cup went to a pretty blush seedling, unnamed. Adonis was considered by the judges as the winner of this cup, but was disqualified through noncompliance with the schedule. There was a good exhibit of violets and pansies.

The collection of vegetables was enormous, stretching out into a hitherto unused room in the rear, and very fine in quality. Temporary sloping shelves at the back of the tables displayed the grapes to advantage. A pretty table of tulips in several colors, made of paper, was very effective.

Secretary David Rust was greatly pleased with the results of the society's efforts.

The competition among the private gardeners was very keen, and despite the disappointment of non-prize winners the best of feeling existed throughout. There were ninety-two exhibitors as against seventy-five last year, with a total of 940 entries, all told. The official attendance has not as yet been given out. It is safe to say, however, that the exhibition has proved a financial success and made a record which it will be difficult to surpass. The secretary suggests that the table decorations, which brought out only one exhibit this season, ought not to be depended upon for the third day attraction, but that the schedule be so altered as to bring something on that day which may prove more popular.

There are two points of especial interest which must be mentioned before closing; one, the valuable exhibit of seedling cypripediums of promise; the other, the excellent music, which added so greatly to the pleasure of this memorable gathering.

Vase of Yellow Eaton Chrysanthemums Exhibited by Robert Craig & Son, at the Philadelphia Show.

Show Notes.

It was a grand affair.

Secretary Rust and his band of helpers worked hard and deserve lots of credit.

Joseph Hurley's exhibits were features of the main hall. Brutus proves a good show variety.

Philip Freud, who is with Henry F. Michell, made a hit with his beds of tulips in full bloom.

William Robertson made a fine showing with his specimen plants and flowers.

Jacob Becker seems to have a good rose in Ideal. It keeps better than La France; the blooms average better in quality and the color is more pleasing. He had forty plants last season; now he has benched 2,200.

J. Austin Shaw, of New York, was among the many visitors to the show.

It was a great social gathering of florists, gardeners and amateurs.

The Beauty rose contest was a good old-time struggle between John Burton and Joseph Heacock, with honors easy.

He: "That is Timothy Heaton."
She: "It is Timothy Eaton, dear."
He: "TIMOTHY HEATON, love."
His informant was a Yorkshire man.

BUFFALO.

The event that overshadowed all else floriculturally this past week was the H. A. Meldrum Company Department Store show of chrysanthemums. This firm is young in years, but overflowing with energy and enterprise, and as a result is developing and evolving far beyond its older rivals. When first I heard of the idea it struck me as a solution of the flower show problem. Of course, the local club should be able to hold an exhibition of its own, and has done so on several occasions, but always to the great pecuniary loss of the half dozen men who have done all the work, sacrificed their plants and ferns and then gone deep into their pockets to pay the fiddler. Glory is a pleasant sensation when it does not come too high, and you are not glorifying the men who haven't raised a finger to help, or even given the affair their moral support.

So this enterprising firm has given thousands of our citizens a fine show of chrysanthemum blooms. It brought crowds to their store. They estimated that 15,000 people visited the show on the last day alone. Their sales went thousands of dollars above their normal business. The florists received in premiums a handsome price for their flowers. So I cannot see but that all parties are to be congratulated and happy over the result. As evidence that the firm was pleased with this initial attempt, they have already announced that they will increase the amount of premiums next year fourfold, and will offer some prizes that will induce the best chrysanthemum and rose growers in the country to make exhibits. The premium list was very short and simple—only fifteen classes and three prizes for each class. There were five classes for designs—a basket, a plateau, a wreath, a spray and an original design. They were all very good in their way, but it is doubtful if they could not be dispensed with without any loss to the attraction. Anything suggestive of a funeral, as a wreath or a spray, has no place in a flower show. They may appeal to some warped minds, but to those of good taste they are vulgar.

The E. G. Hill Company sent a vase of the beautiful Marie Liger, but it was a little past its best and the judges could not see its worth. This firm also sent a vase of Richardson, a lovely pink of the Maud Dean type, but much brighter in color. Nathan Smith & Son sent 25 blooms in 25 varieties. They were a fine lot and among them were many beautiful flowers. The remainder were all from local growers. Mr. Kasting exhibited some vases of Timothy Eaton and Maud Dean grown by Mr. Christensen, of Eggertsville, that would be hard to beat at any show in the country.

The list of prize winners would be only of local interest, but briefly is as follows: C. D. Zimmerman, one 2nd and two 3rd; A. J. Reichert, two 3rd; L. H. Neubeck, one 2nd and one 3rd; S. A. Anderson, five 1st, four 2nd and three 3rd; Mrs. D. Newlands, one 1st; N. Smith & Son, one 1st; William Scott, five 1st, eight 2nd and two 3rd; W. F. Kasting, two 1st, one 2nd and one 3rd; C. H. Keitsch, one 3rd; William Belsey, one 1st; Mr. Karmuth, one 3rd.

Messrs. C. H. Keitsch, Thomas Fitzgerald, of the Botanic Garden, and Chas. L. Dole, of Lockport, did ably as judges, and some of the contests were very close. A few of the local florists held aloof and thought it would not be worth while to come in. They were not missed, as all available floor space was filled up, and next year they will see the wisdom of being sociable. Mr. Tom Coleman should be proud of his management of this show, his first experience.

There was only one occurrence that caused a ripple of annoyance in this otherwise smooth and pleasant affair. Three classes of cut blooms were open only to growers of Erie (our home) county. However, the schedule read, the meaning was that the flowers should be the produce of their greenhouses. But one florist received some fine flowers from out of town and entered them as the produce of his houses. The fraud was so palpable that all other exhibitors protested, but in vain. Unfortunately none of us had visited his greenhouses within a week or two, and he had removed the soil where these flowers had supposedly grown, so there was no remnant to judge from, but we are all morally and absolutely sure they were grown 400 miles away. The guilty man put up a good bluff. When you do stoop to such a trick a good bluff is a necessary accompaniment and a long and frequent practice in both makes proficiency. The judges could not help themselves, for they judged only what they saw. It is a great pity that such contemptible tricks can ever exist, and another year they will be guarded against.

W. J. Palmer & Son opened their new branch or uptown store today. It is an ideal corner for the business. Two sides are glass and any one passing down Main street can not but see the well-appointed store. Mr. Palmer deserves all the success that has come to him. He has worked hard with hands and head and few young men have stuck to business as he has done. We wish him success and lots of it on the corner of Main and Genesee. W. S.

On Friday there was a competition in seedlings that brought out a great many fine new ones. A light pink seedling named Fiancée, shown by F. Dorner & Sons Co. and purchased from them by the Chicago Carnation Co., of Joliet, Ill., swept everything before it. An illustration and description will be found elsewhere in this issue. The awards in the several classes follow, twenty blooms being required in each class. No less than twenty-four seedlings were entered in these classes:

Best white, F. Dorner & Sons Co., with seedling No. 123 (00).

Best red, E. T. Grave, with Elsie Martin.

Best dark pink, Thompson Car. Co., with Nelson Fisher.

Best light pink, F. Dorner & Sons Co. with Fiancée.

Best any other color, Chicago Carnation Co., with Harlowarden.

Floral Arrangements.

The competitions on both Friday and Saturday brought out large and attractive displays and the entries were all excellent. They were a strong feature of the exhibition. As all will be illustrated in these columns later, we will give only brief descriptions now.

For basket of orchids, T. D. Mosconosotes was first with a large low basket of Cattleya Percivalliana, arranged in Adiantum Farleyense. E. G. Uihlein was second with a handle basket of mixed orchids, the handle being very gracefully covered with small flowered oncidiums, etc.

Other Awards.

The judges recommended the highest award in the gift of the society to the F. R. Pierson Co., Tarrytown, N. Y., for the new fern Nephrolepis Piersoni. A gold medal was awarded the new yellow rose Franz Deegen, shown by the South Park Floral Co. and Ernst Asmus.

Notes.

Lager & Hurrell, Summit, N. J., made a fine display of orchid plants in bloom.

Aug. Jurgens displayed some bunches of remarkably fine valley.

The attendance was very satisfactory in spite of several rainy days and, the rent not being so monumental as in recent years, the society will probably have a comfortable balance on the right side of the ledger.

THE EXHIBITIONS.

The largest and principal exhibitions are over and are matters of history to those interested. Boston, Philadelphia and some other cities have had their annual displays, without any extra effort or feature, which presumably have paid their way, for in those large cities there are true lovers of flowers sufficient to patronize these annual functions where no great expense is entailed. In cities of from 200,000 to 400,000 people the problem is not yet solved, "How to hold a financially successful chrysanthemum exhibition on its own merits." Kansas City is an entire exception and no criterion. Any other city of its size might have done what Kansas City has done if it had had the men and the pluck and phenomenal enterprise to promote and carry it through, but it is too late now. It belongs entirely to a class of its own and cannot be duplicated.

The flood, Grecian art and philosophy, the rise and decline of Rome, the battle of Hastings, the commonwealth of Cromwell, the rebellion of the thirteen states, the battle of Waterloo, the truths of the inferences of Charles Darwin and the genius of a Taggart and a Thorpe mark epochs in the march of the world onward and upward, so we will pass the Kansas City show as phenomenal. If there were many attempted to emulate it they could not be successful, because the material does not exist to support them. Still one other, in the East, could surely be carried out on the same broad and liberal plans. Long may Kansas City be successful in her great flower shows, although it stretches our faith to believe that it can be annually a great success in a city or locality where the people, with the exception perhaps of a very small per cent, have no true love and less knowledge of plants and flowers, and the present spectacular success is surely a fad which is liable to evaporate at any time.

The Madison Square exhibition in New York, although not bringing out a quarter of the exhibits that it should, was yet a most artistic and beautiful exhibition and reflected the greatest credit on the management, design and labor of the committee in charge; but in the center of Greater New York, with its three millions of people and its marvelous wealth and culture and material for an exhibition, within thirty miles equal to the combined resources of the whole country, with all these great opportunities, the result was enough to chill the soul of the most ardent exhibition enthusiast.

From what we hear of Chicago, it was in all ways a success, not phenomenal or spectacular, but a splendid exhibition, and paid its way. They know how to advertise in that great city; the wind blows their handbills and utterances into the uttermost parts of Illinois and adjacent states. After traversing the great chain of lakes we found one sticking to a log on the shores of Goat Island, close to the brink of Niagara. It was impervious to water, being saturated with alcohol, and in large letters was printed, "Dont fail to see Chicago's great Chrysanthemum Show."

The convention of the American Chrysanthemum Society added greatly to the interest of the Chicago exhibition, although it possibly made no perceptible addition to the attendance. We deeply regret that we could not lend our assistance to the convention, if only with our mute presence, and had we reason to suspect that on returning home we should have been presented with twin baby girls, as was the majestic Emil Buettner, we should have gone, even at any sacrifice to the loss of a leg or the balance of our hair.

And now we have arrived at the point for which these remarks have an excuse. Some of you had the pleasure of hearing the address of President Herrington. All of you have an opportunity to read it, and every one of you whose eyes are not obscured by two large silver dollars should read it. It is true that Mr. Herrington had the retrospective view of several years to draw from and the future was all his own, and he did it well. It is comprehensive, earnest and has the true ring of the lover of his profession and his pets, of the horticulturist and gardener, who delights in the produce of his skill, and incidentally the revenue it brings.

To me by far the most important part of the address was that devoted to the question, "How to make our chrysanthemum shows attractive and a success." If many of our clubs and societies in many cities of the country are to continue an attempt to hold exhibitions, no subject to us can be of greater interest. There is one broad fact, not so well known to those who know only this country, which has the greatest influence on attendance at flower shows, and it is the fact that but a very small percentage of our people, including the millionaire as well as the millwright, has any real taste or fondness or knowledge of plants and flowers. Our trade in floriculture is in a most healthy state and ever growing. Flowers are wanted for beautifying the home. It is lovely to give them and sweet to receive, and they are welcome guests at almost every event of our lives. They carry sentiment and affection wherever they go and are becoming indispensable in all well-regulated homes, but all this is not knowing the flowers. It is love and admiration for their beauty and sweetness, but little knowledge of them. In fact, to be brief, gardening is not yet a recreation of our people.

To explain the difference that exists in Europe, or that part of it with which I have an acquaintance, the British Isles, every merchant, lawyer, doctor, minister of the parish, bishop and priest, mechanic and mill operative—yes, the lowly laborer in the rural districts—has his garden or his pet flowers, and can talk gardening. The country squire and lord of the manor, even if his fancy runs to foxhounds, must keep posted on gardening topics, for 'tis good form. Is it any wonder, then, that they can hold a horticultural exhibition in every small town. People go not only to admire the beautiful, but are interested in the latest novelties and cultural skill displayed. If the greatest interest and fondness for their gardens did not exist, how could the thousands of firms whose business is the distribution of plants exist in so small a territory? We have a few people of this kind in every neighborhood, but you can count them on your fingers in ours, and you will be sure to see them at our local shows—good, faithful people, they will be at your show, even if lonesome.

This is not always going to be so; the taste for gardening and the interest in the plants is growing fast, but we must wait. Our people can see just as fine flowers of every kind in our florists' shops as can be seen at any flower show, and unless it's the fad to go they are not going to waste time and be bored by looking at simply quantities of the same thing duplicated a dozen times. Mr. Herrington spoke very much to the point when he said we should have a greater variety in our chrysanthemum flowers to attract the public. If you have seen a vase of fifty Timothy Eatons or Col. Appletons, you have seen all the beauty that these flowers are capable of affording, and a dozen vases of them is a surfeit. I well remember last year of seeing a lady of considerable pretensions to culture turn away from a vase of monstrous mums and remark to her friend, "Hideous."

Variety and novelty we must put before the people, but how it is to be done and how the commercial man can afford to grow the uncommercial varieties I am not going into at present. I am entirely in sympathy with those who protested against spliced stems. That is retrogression with a vengeance, and our people won't stand for it. If short stems are to be used, then let the flowers be down close to the dark green bed of moss. If in bottles and the stem is only six inches long above the bottles, these weak-necked specimens will hang their heads in all directions and look anything but attractive. I have seen such displays this fall, and they won't do.

We should have flower shows, even if at a sacrifice, for they are educators in every community in which they are held, and I trust ere long some smart man or matron will think of some feature that can be used to draw and please the public—statuary barred. It, like the flowers, is too mute; action is what is wanted. The dramas of Bulwer Lytton are grand from a literary view; the dialogue is wonderful; but there is no action; hence, with one exception, they are never heard of. Action and life we must have until a good share of our people take a real interest in gardening.

William Scott.

A GREAT NEW CARNATION.

It Breaks all Records.

At the Chicago exhibition there appeared on Friday a new pink carnation that created a sensation. It was an immense flower of ideal form and a wonderful soft and pleasing shade of pink, very similar to the color of Marquis. It seemed practically flawless and the judges awarded it not only the prize in the class for best pink seedling lighter in color than Scott, in which Enchantress and many fine seedlings had been entered, but the silver cup for best seedling shown and a certificate of merit also, in addition to pronouncing it the best carnation produced up to date. And all who saw it agreed that the judges had been none too lavish with their awards and commendation. It easily outclassed everything else on exhibition, and the display was the largest and finest ever seen at a fall exhibition.

This remarkable new carnation is a seedling raised by Fred Dorner, Lafayette, Ind., but the stock has been purchased by the Chicago Carnation Co., Joliet, Ill. It will probably be introduced next year. The accompanying engraving is from a flash light photograph and does not do justice to the subject.

TUXEDO, N. Y.

The first exhibition by the Tuxedo, N. Y., Horticultural Society was held in the club ballroom on November 7, 8 and 9. That the efforts of the committee in charge were appreciated was well illustrated by the spontaneous expressions of pleasure by the crowds of spectators on first entering the hall. The arrangement was made as spectacular as stock would admit, and the competitive exhibits were so arranged that a new pleasure awaited the patrons as they made the circuit of the hall. The vegetable classes were poorly filled, as vegetables are very little grown outdoors, soil conditions not giving much encouragement in that line of the profession. The soil is still in a crude state, rocky and sandy.

Among the special exhibits were a table of oncidiums and cattleyas, trimmed with Adiantum Farleyense, groups of stove plants, Golden Privet and evergreen, by W. A. Manda, of South Orange, N. J. Evergreens and a fine plant of the new fern Nephrolepis Anna Foster, by Bobbink & Atkins, Rutherford, N. J. Seed exhibits by Cluecas & Boddington Co. and J. M. Thorburn & Co., of New York City.

piece of Phoenix rupicola, 20 feet high, a perfect plant. On a raised platform were four orange trees and two Cycas revoluta. All were fine plants. The ripe fruit on the orange trees were shown off to advantage by a series of electric lamps cunningly arranged among them. All were from H. W. Poor's estate.

The place of honor, entrance group, was filled with chrysanthemum bush plants trained in all manner of shapes, a very fine lot, from R. Mortimer's greenhouse. Four tree ferns, also from H. W. Poor's, were much admired.

In chrysanthemum plants and blooms the winners of first prizes were Richard Mortimer, P. Lorillard (Thos. Murray, gardener), C. B. Alexander and H. W. Poor. In foliage plants winners of firsts were C. B. Alexander (Wm. Hastings, gardener), and H. W. Poor. In roses C. B. Alexander won three firsts and H. W. Poor two. C. E. Westley and P. Lorillard won firsts for violets. C. B. Alexander won first for table center piece. In carnations C. B. Alexander took four firsts. In the vegetable classes firsts were won by A. D. Juillard and C. B. Alexander. There was an interesting display of fruit.

Among chrysanthemums, the most admired was a bloom of Dr. Englehart, of English extraction, shown by H. W. Poor, Esq. In color a good pink, habit incurved, in fact, it might be styled a pink Appleton, as it very strongly resembles this old favorite.

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y.

The Dutchess County Hort. Society gave its eighth annual exhibition in the State Armory here Nov. 11 to 13. The grand hall was brilliantly illuminated with 600 electric lights and the exhibits were most effectively arranged. The show was most creditable to all and the flowers and plants as good as any I have seen this year. The table decorations were remarkably good.

Lyman Brown, president of the society, had some fine displays from the State Hospital. Mr. Brown holds the record of "100 new members" as his one day's offering to the annals of the society, which is now one of the strongest in the country, with a membership of nearly 300 and a record for hospitality and progress unequalled. W. G. Saltford is entitled to special credit for his good work at this show.

In the decorative plant classes the leading prize winners were Archibald Rogers (Samuel Horn, gardener); Winthrop Sargent (W. G. Gomersall, gardener), Frederick Vanderbilt (Robt. Gardner, gardener), F. R. Newbold (Thos. Bell, gardener), and Daniel S. Lamont (A. Nichols, gardener).

In the chrysanthemum bloom classes winners were W. G. Saltford, Samuel Thorne (I. L. Powell, gardener), Archibald Rogers, F. W. Vanderbilt, Winthrop Sargent and Levi P. Morton (Thos. Talbot, gardener).

Prize winners for roses and carnations were Giraud Foster, Archibald Rogers, Samuel Thorne, Daniel Lamont, M. B. Tillottson, W. H. Waite, Adam Laub & Son and W. G. Saltford.

In chrysanthemum plants leading winners were Daniel Lamont, Frederick Potter (W. C. Roberts, gardener), Winthrop Sargent, F. W. Vanderbilt and F. R. Newbold.

The violet contest was especially interesting. The leading prizes were taken by J. Herman Asher (Thos. Bell, gardener). W. G. Gomersall won first for table decoration and second went to G. H. Howarth.

TARRYTOWN, N. Y.

Through the courtesy of Secretary Neubrand I was given two very interesting hours on the last day of the show at Tarrytown, and was more than charmed by the artistic arrangement of the exhibits, their excellent quality and the grand specimen plants and ferns from the great private collections in this vicinity. This fourth exhibition of the Tarrytown society is away ahead of its predecessors, financially and artistically. The poster was a handsome one, much in evidence in the city stores, and the attendance was very gratifying to the officers and members of the society. Its patrons include all the wealthy residents of this charming neighborhood. The Music Hall, where the exhibition took place, is a splendid room for the purpose. In the center was a bank of the Pierson fern, which received the society's silver medal.

The vegetable and fruit exhibit was a grand one. A large delegation of professors and pupils from the Briarcliff Manor School were delighted visitors on Thursday afternoon.

In the chrysanthemum plant classes the leading prize-winners were Wm. Scott, gardener for Jos. Eastman; Wm. C. Roberts, gardener for Frederick Potter; Jos. Haworth, gardener for David Oppenheimer, and Geo. Middleton, gardener for Wm. Rockefeller.

In the chrysanthemum cut bloom classes winners of firsts were Geo. Middleton, Wm. Scott, Wm. C. Roberts, Samuel Riddell (gardener for F. A. Constable), Wm. Nye (gardener for Miss Blanche Potter), and John Henry (gardener for Samuel Goodman).

Varieties prominent in the winning entries were: Lady Roberts, Merza, A. J. Balfour, Florence Molyneux, Kate Broomhead, Appleton, Nellie Pockett, Mrs. Barkley, Goldmine, Mrs. Jerome Jones, Timothy Eaton, Peter Kay, W. H. Chadwick, Golden Wedding, Mme. Carnot, Mr. T. Carrington, Mrs. Mease, Mrs. J. C. Neville, Mrs. J. Mileham, J. R. Upton, Princess Bessaraba, John Shrimpton.

In miscellaneous plants the leading prizes were won by Howard Nichols, gardener for Mrs. J. B. Trevor; W. H. Waite, superintendent for Samuel Untermeyer; Wm. Scott, and Ernest Townsend, gardener for C. A. Gould.

In cut roses and carnations the winners of first awards were W. H. Waite, Geo. Middleton, Jas. Ballantyne, Wm. Nye, Geo. Draycott, Robt. Allan and Wm. C. Roberts. Firsts on violets were taken by Richard Lange, John Johnson and Wm. Nye. Howard Nichols was first for table center piece. Several special prizes were awarded.

ELMIRA, N. Y.

Elmira Horticultural Society.

The Fifth Annual Chrysanthemum Exhibition was held Nov. 11 and 12, and the flowers exhibited and the attendance would indicate no falling off in interest in the Queen of Autumn. The exhibits were large and the flowers in nearly all classes showed improvement in quality over former years.

The Board of Trade cup for best seedling not disseminated excited the most interest among the prizes. It was awarded to a seedling originated by Mr. Rawson, which may be described as follows: White tinted primrose, petals broad and twisted, reflexed center, incurved, good sized stem and foliage. It was grown and exhibited by Mr. John Rudy and may be named "Strathmont."

William Paul Binder, of Rider, Md., sent three blooms of Mrs. Harry V. Casey, which is a very promising variety, beautiful pure light pink, broad petals, reflexed, tips incurved and of good size.

From Nathan Smith & Son came a collection of their splendid old and new varieties, including among others the great prize winner, F. J. Taggart; the fine red bronze, Edgar Sanders; the beautiful yellow, Mrs. J. J. Glessner; Bentley and Merza.

R. Vincent, Jr. & Son, of White Marsh, Md., sent a large and interesting collection of pompons.

The exhibit from the Strathmont greenhouses of Hon. J. S. Fassett showed the intelligent, liberal interest of that gentleman and the able care of the gardener, John B. Rudy. Among the large number of varieties staged the most notable in this exhibit were Timothy Eaton, Calvat 99, a new French white, a beautiful English pink variety called Mrs. Barksdale, Jessie Cottee, Thomas Carrington, also a fine vase of Liberty roses, some violets and seedling carnations.

The best of H. N. Hoffman's exhibits were some very large Timothy Eaton and Col. Appleton mums, a vase of 100 Estelle carnations of large size and deep, rich color, and some well developed plants of cyclamen in full bloom.

Grove P. Rawson had an attractive exhibit filling two tables, the most noticeable being Col. Appleton, Lady Hanham, Idavan, Orizaba and Philadelphia mums, good roses, Prosperity and Lawson carnations and some well-developed plants of celestial pepper, Chinese lantern plant and various solanums.

Fred La France and Geo. Backer exhibited some good carnations of several varieties, and Emerson Orvis some chrysanthemum plants and cut flowers and carnations.

Robert Leavitt displayed his flowers and decorative material in a neat and attractive booth.

The success of the exhibition is due very largely to the busy labors of the secretary, Miss Flora Swift, and her able assistants, who are to be sincerely congratulated on the result of their efforts. H.

INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

The Society of Indiana Florists held its fall exhibition at the State House on the 12th. The exhibits were not as extensive as they might have been, but the room was well filled and the quality was very good. The public was invited free and a good many people viewed the show.

The exhibitors were mostly local, with the exception of Messrs. Stuart & Haugh, of Anderson, and the South Park Floral Co., of New Castle. A certificate of merit was awarded to Mr. H. W. Rieman for a vase of a seedling mum called "Adelia." It is of Robinson form and general appearance, but it is not troubled with the weak neck which so often ruins Mrs. Robinson. This variety is sure to make a grand commercial sort, as Mr. Rieman says it is a very easy doer. He also showed several other seedlings of decided merit and a vase of his silver medal white "Majestic," which is a grand thing.

Baur & Smith had on exhibition a fine lot of carnation seedlings, among which were several striking ones. Beatrice is apparently a Dorothy of Daybreak shade and should make a good commercial sort. John Mitchel, a fine large white; The News, a fine large scarlet; Fascination, a large Daybreak shade, and Cherry Ripe, of Leslie Paul color; all attracted much attention. The largest carnation blooms in the hall were of a white seedling called Monstrosum, the blooms of which were over 3½ inches. They also showed Mrs. Lawson, E. Crocker and Crane in good shape, and three vases of mums—Eaton, Mary Hill and a small pure white of their own.

Bertermann Bros. filled up a table with banked up back of it and made the prettiest display in the room. Their tables always have many novelties not often seen, such as orchids of various kinds and rare ferns. Their Begonia Lorraine and cyclamen are unusually fine this year.

E. A. Nelson filled a table with mums, carnations, roses, Boston ferns, cyclamen and Gl. de Lorraine, all of which were well grown and made a good show.

John Hartje had a nice lot of carnation seedlings and as usual they attracted much attention. John has some good whites which should be heard from soon. He also showed a large vase of Appleton which were good.

E. Huckreide & Son showed six vases of well grown mums and a fine lot of market plants in 6 and 8-inch pots, besides some fine single stem plants. All these were very fine.

Wm. Glaubke showed three fine plants in 6-inch pots which were wonderful for that size pot. Also a vase of the old Diana, which brought back memories of olden times when this and old Kioto and Cullingfordii were the main stand-bys in the mum line.

The Young & Smith Co. showed a fine lot of violets, for which they have become famous, and justly so, as their blooms are hard to beat. They seldom have any surplus.

Mr. Stuart came down from Anderson with a grand lot of mums, roses and carnations. His Eaton and Appleton were grand. The roses were Brides, Maids and Golden Gates and the carnations were Lawson and Avondale, all of which were of extra high quality.

The South Park Floral Co., of New Castle, sent down a vase of the new rose Franz Deegen, which were very good, though not so good as I have seen them. This ought to make a good commercial sort and if it holds up well all winter it will have a good sale, as a good yellow rose is wanted badly.

There were no certificates awarded on carnations, because we always have a show principally of carnations in January and they show their true character better then.

Phil Conway showed a fine vase of Bonnaffon mums. A. B.

The name of the variety exhibited by Nathan Smith & Son at Cincinnati on November 8 as Jersey Cream has been changed to Mrs. J. J. Mitchell.

NEW YORK, Nov. 8.—Nathan Smith & Son exhibited Convention Hall, pure white, Inc. Jap., with red reflexed guard petals. Scored 97 points. The E. G. Hill Co. exhibited Yellow Eaton, bright canary yellow. Scored 86 points commercial scale.

CHRYSANTHEMUM MRS. E. THURKELL.

I noticed the account of a chrysanthemum in many of the trade papers, which is attracting considerable attention as an exhibition variety. There were two blooms shown at Chicago under the name of Mme. Thirkall. Being interested in all new comers, and desiring to know of its origin, have after some search been able to locate said variety. The correct name is Mrs. E. Thurkell, one of Mr. Thos. Pocketts seedlings. Herewith I append a description as given in G. Brunning & Sons' catalogue, who are noted Australian raisers: "Mrs. E. Thurkell, very deep yellow, late flowers, bronzy yellow, extra large, grand exhibition variety, best on late crown buds."

I furnish you this information with the hope that all parties cataloguing may adopt the correct name and thus avoid some confusion.

ELMER D. SMITH.

ST. PAUL.

The first local exhibition in many years, a list of awards of which was noted in last week's issue, was a decided success, and from present indications will hereafter be made an annual affair.

The first day the weather was ideal. On Tuesday and Wednesday, however, the rain descended and made going out anything but pleasant. In spite of the weather, however, there was a good attendance, so good that the management decided to keep the show open another day, and reduced the admission price to 10 cents, with the result of a very largely increased attendance.

The show was made a society event, in which the elite of the city participated. Monday was colonial day, and the ladies powdered their hair as in the days of Auld Lang Syne and dispensed punch and refreshments with rare grace and celerity. Tuesday was German day and the ladies served tea and luncheon dressed in the "Vaterland" costume. Wednesday was Japanese day, this being very appropriately dedicated to the home of the chrysanthemum, the chief flower of the show. As on the previous days, costumes representing the country were worn.

Governor Van Sant and staff were present Monday evening and opened the show in a neat two-minute speech. A ladies' stringed band discoursed music night and day and Monday evening the famous Minneapolis Journal Newsboy band played.

At the close of the show on Thursday the ladies decided to repeat the show annually, as it was a decided success florally, socially and financially.

Frank Berry, of Stillwater, was judge of cut flowers. Thos. Hall, Gust Malmquist and Prof. S. B. Greene were judges of plants. Supt. Nussbaumer, of the city parks, built a pagoda in the center of the hall, using a great many plants in the roof. While as a display it would not be considered worthy of a prize, still as a great assistance to the ladies and to the florists it was very commendable, and he has the thanks of all for his labors to make the show a success.

L. L. May's display was the best in the hall, both in the number and quality of the flowers and plants and in the artistic arrangement of the whole. A mantel and fireplace made of greens and flowers and a beautiful Persian rug in an original design, made of pink, white and yellow mums, was most beautiful and attractive. He displayed 22 varieties of single stem mums, including Hill's new Mme. Liger, 17 varieties of carnations, 11 varieties of roses and 5 of violets.

Holm & Olsen had a very creditable display of mums, both in plants and cut flowers, also roses and carnations. Their prize design was a cornucopia of mums in relief on a background of the same flowers. It was most highly praised by all and was a fine piece of work. It was arranged by E. P. Holm, the senior member of the firm.

Aug S. Swanson's display of palms, ferns, araucarias, pandanns, draeaenas, begonias, ficus and other decorative plants was very large and attractive. He also displayed a few of the best mums and a table centerpiece which was changed daily. Monday it was a basket of that most charming orchid Oncidium varicosum in long drooping sprays. Tuesday cattleyas graced the board, while on Wednesday a most magnificent basket of Salvia splendens gave a glow of warmth and richness to the surroundings. Mr. Swanson's entire display was very fine, but was not entered for competition.

Dr. Schiffmann had an elegant display of over 50 orchids in bloom, and says it would have been much larger and richer had the show been held two weeks earlier.

Windmiller & Co. displayed a magnificent vase made of Ivory mums with handles of Daybreak carnations; a garland of valley was interwoven with the mums. The vase held a dozen of the very choicest long-stemmed Beauties.

E. F. Lemke's display was one of the best in the room. In addition to a large collection of cut mums and roses he had palms, ferns, ficus, etc. He also displayed a large basket tastily arranged of Autumn Glory mums, and a harp of roses over 5 feet in height, made up in Louis Venzke's best style.

The Minneapolis Floral Co. exhibited 15 varieties of roses and 25 of cut mums. A. Hallstrom, gardener for J. J. Hill, had a fine display of mums and decorative plants, also cypripediums.

Vogt Bros. showed a fine collection of palms, ferns and mums; a well-made basket of roses, and a shaft or column of mums.

Mendenhall displayed Adiantum Farleyense; mums, roses, carnations and a cross of roses and a Gates Ajar design.

The best mums seen were Timothy Eaton, Yellow Eaton, Appleton, Golden Wedding, Autumn Glory and Mme. Liger.

The best roses were Beauty, Bride, Bridesmaid, Liberty and La France. The best carnations, Enchantress, Prosperity, Bradt, Lawson, Gov. Wolcott, Estelle.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS.

Some Varieties.

I see with pleasure that Convention Hall, the new white variety of Messrs. N. Smith & Son, was awarded 97 points when exhibited before the committee in New York last week. I thought it a perfect model when I saw it for the first time two weeks ago. It is of the purest white, so white that Mrs. Weeks is dirty compared with it. My object in speaking of it now is to express surprise that this variety does not appear to figure much in the flower show reports throughout the West so far. Possibly it may be later out there, and not ready in time for exhibiting. Certain it is that Eaton or any other white with which I am acquainted would not be able to compare with it if set up as I saw it recently.

Another white that has surprised me this year in the way it finished is Florence Molyneux. This variety was very weak in growth all the season, and I marked it down as a good thing to get rid of. I was consequently greatly surprised when Florence showed, to use a colloquial expression, that she "had a great head on her." The only fault was that the head was a little too heavy for the neck; but from my own and others' experience with it I feel justified in recommending this variety for a good trial next season as a midseason to late exhibition sort.

Yellow Eaton is not having the luck that its progenitor had when struggling on the boards for recognition, for I see that Appleton beat it in the cup contest at Chicago, and the White Eaton beat it when set up in the competition for 50 flowers of one variety at the Institute in New York. I did not see the Chicago competition, but I know that Appleton is a hard variety to run up against in a competition, and is a better color than any Yellow Eaton I have yet seen.

I have never yet seen a white variety produce a yellow sport that is a really deep yellow. Look at Basset, the yellow sport of Robinson, Yellow Robinson, Yellow Jerome Jones, Yellow Mutual Friend and a host of others. The color in all these varieties is too light for them to show well at an exhibition when the class calls for a vase of yellow, 6 or 12 flowers, or whatever the case may be. The yellow inside the petal is yellow enough in Yellow Eaton, but the reverse of the petal is much lighter, and as much of the reverse is seen it makes the flower appear lighter than it really is. Where Yellow Eaton will find recognition is with those large commercial growers who put out a thousand plants on the bench and figure on cutting a thousand flowers. This is the greatest merit of the white Eaton, and the yellow one deserves to be grown extensively for the same reason. When a variety produces many culls, as lots of the finest exhibition kinds do, their value falls greatly in the commercial grower's eyes.

The competition in New York when Yellow Eaton was beaten by the original Eaton I did see, and in this case it was beaten solely because the flowers of the white variety were so much larger. This is, of course, no disgrace for Yellow Eaton, because since it is a sport from the white it naturally follows that it could be grown equally as large, the difference being one of cultural skill merely.

What kind of luck could a variety have anyway that is burdened with such a name as Oronhyatecka. I believe the gentleman it is called after is a prominent Forester, and if I were a mum and received such a name I would certainly feel like "taking to the woods." Persiflage aside Yellow Eaton will be grown extensively next year by those who grow Eaton well, and their name is legion.

Exhibitions.

The exhibitions are now practically over and seem, generally speaking, to have been successful. New York is apparently an exception so far as the financial end of it goes, but blase New York wants to attend nothing more elevating than a Tammany overflow meeting or Hubers' Musee. Unless a prizefight or a murder trial is thrown in as a side attraction, it does not seem that there will ever be a satisfactory attendance at a flower show in the principal city of the "effete East." The smaller horticultural societies in many neighboring towns around New York put up good shows, and are not doing any kicking, but they work on a very different basis. They are helped financially by the wealthy residents, who take a personal interest in the show and expect their gardeners to exhibit and bring home some prizes. This results in a good show, with lots of competition and lots of local interest, and also is very beneficial to the aforementioned wealthy residents as it compels their gardeners to grow good stock in order to keep up with the procession. In the east the private gardener has practically driven the commercial grower away from the exhibition table by the excellence of his product, while in the west the commercial man still seems to hold down everything in sight. Time will undoubtedly bring the western commercial grower to his knees, when the spirit of horticultural emulation gets to working among the western millionaires and they go in for raising larger flowers than their neighbors.

Merza has made a tremendous showing at several exhibitions. Flowers 30 inches in circumference are spoken of at the Boston show while Tarrytown and Cedarhurst also record phenomenal flowers of this variety. The habit it has of wilting quickly is often the only drawback that prevents Merza from being grown much more extensively.

ROSES.

Seasonable Hints.

In seasonable hints of last week a slight digression was made from the subject I intended to write about—viz: the propagating house, its care, etc.

In the first place, the propagating house to be a success should be built and fitted up for this express purpose, and as cuttings in their earlier stages are very impatient of direct sunshine it should be placed in such a position as to be easily shaded. One of the best houses for this purpose I have seen was built against the north wall of a rose house. This wall was seven feet high, the house had a span roof, with the long slope to the north, was ten feet wide, thus allowing space for two benches, one against the north and another against the south wall, with a path in the center.

The south bench required practically no shading, while the north bench was shaded by having a thin muslin curtain hung in front of it in such a way as to be easily removed when not required.

A great drawback to most propagating houses is in having the benches too near the ventilators, thus allowing the cold air to come in direct contact with the cuttings before being qualified by the temperature of the house.

A very serviceable and economic bench can be constructed much on the same lines as the tile-bottomed benches used in growing houses, only substituting bricks for tiles, placing the bricks close enough together to prevent the sand from running through. As the bricks absorb the heat and retain it for a long time it will be easily seen that a much steadier bottom heat can be maintained than could be obtained by using either slates or wood for bottoming. The initial cost, of course, will be greater, but if the benches are properly constructed they are practically indestructible and will in a year or two repay the outlay.

In order to have full control of the temperature under the benches they should be enclosed with walls of either cement or brick and should be independent of the walls of the house, and ample provision made for regulating the heat by having a number of sliding panels placed at intervals of six feet apart along the walls.

Previous to filling the benches with the material to be used as a propagating medium, the bricks should receive a coating of hot lime wash. This serves the double purpose of destroying insects and their eggs, and is also a safe guard against fungoid growths, and should be repeated with each fresh batch of cuttings.

Some growers recommend a mixture of sulphur with the lime wash as a preventive of fungoid growths. I cannot say if there is any merit in this, but the experiment is inexpensive and will not endanger the young stock.

CARNATION NOTES—EAST.

Cuttings.

As advised last week, secure at least a portion of your supply of those varieties you intend to add to your list, having them come unrooted. It is early yet to commence general propagation, but this matter can be in your minds for consideration as to the advisability of making a test.

As to the advantage of this method, I claim carnation cuttings taken from plants and directly packed in damp moss, are in better condition to stand a journey and will arrive in better condition, than those taken from the cutting bench where they have made delicate roots. More or less harm is done in handling and packing rooted cuttings; also the change of temperature from sand to shipping box on its journey is harmful and especially so, if the sand has been kept at too high a temperature. Any grower will agree that it is an advantage to put cuttings in soil as soon as possible after being rooted, reducing exposure of roots to air to a minimum.

We hear of varieties that do not succeed in some sections the first year, but improve the next. So familiarity does not always breed contempt, but I believe the cause is due to the fact that they must be acclimatized, and the sooner this process is begun the better. Is it not reasonable to state that the process will begin from the moment the unrooted cutting is placed in the different sand, watered and syringed with the different water, and surrounded by the changed condition, air, etc.? It would seem to me like a plant born of a seed and one likely to adapt itself to new conditions quickly.

This may seem like a lot of extra work or entirely unnecessary, but it is all these extra details that tend to score touchdowns and goals; more than that it is no longer an experiment with us, as the method has been demonstrated again and again, invariably with the best results. Where will you obtain your supply of the cuttings of the varieties purchased last year, and which you intend to continue? Will you send them back where purchased, thinking they can be rooted there only?

In view of the foregoing it may be well to state emphatically that my remarks are not in the least intended to discourage or belittle the business of rooted cutting specialists or to make any grounds for reduction in the price of cuttings. On one hand they are usually better equipped than most growers; on the other hand unrooted cuttings should sell at the same price as rooted ones. I neglected to say earlier that when these cuttings arrive, give them immediate attention, first giving them a bath in ammoniacal-copper solution, then into the sand at once.

GEO. S. OSBORN.

After Thanksgiving day and possibly even before you will begin to think of your Xmas crop of carnation blooms. Those who find it profitable to grow especially for Xmas and Easter should have been handling their plants with that end in view for several weeks past and keeping the buds off and the shoots pinched back until about the first of this month and now they would be coming along in a rush with a big crop of buds just in time for Xmas. We need a constant supply of blooms from September until the next September, and possibly that is why I did not think of writing on this subject earlier in the season. Of course we need an extra lot of blooms at those times, too, and we try to have our heaviest cuts then, but you will find it more difficult to manage than when you don't care much whether you have blooms then or not.

The first part of this month has been exceedingly warm and it has partly upset our calculations. It has hastened the buds along on some varieties so that many have opened sooner than they were expected and shoots that would have bloomed just about the holidays have their buds showing now. If the weather remains cool and largely cloudy it may retard them again to some extent, but with bright weather some of the crops will be off before then. It is a pity sometimes that we can not regulate the weather, but think of what a glut there would be every holiday if we could, so I guess it is best after all that we can not regulate it.

Don't try to retard them much by running the temperature very low or you will have a lot of bursted calyxes on your hands, and don't try to force out the next crop or you will have a lot of weak stems and soft plants on your hands. The only way to regulate your carnation crops is by keeping off the buds and allowing them to come when it is time to allow a crop to mature by the date you want them. Much forcing or retarding by manipulating the temperature will nearly always result in disaster to the crops. There is nothing that is more difficult to counteract than a spell of warm weather, as there is no way to keep the temperature down in the houses when it is warm outside, and just when you may be thinking that your crops are all going to come in just right your hopes may be dashed to the ground by a spell of September weather in November. We can fight cold weather with our steam pipes, but old Sol has the upper hand of us when he chooses to take a hand.

We are now putting the third supporting strings on some of our benches. All the taller varieties, such as White Cloud, Lorna, etc., need them long before Mrs. Joost and Lawson, and others of the upright and stiff stemmed varieties. Put them on before the stems begin to grow crooked. Such varieties as Mrs. Bradt, that have very heavy blooms, should have supports close up to the buds to keep their weight off the stems as it will gradually make the stems grow crooked from being constantly bent over.

A. F. J. BAUR.

COLD STORAGE VALLEY.

Will a temperature of 18 to 20 degrees be safe for cold storage of valley in summer? Mine has been kept this summer at 31 to 33 degrees and it has not been satisfactory. For a while in the spring the temperature was about 40, but the boxes we opened to use from were all right then.

We repack our valley when received in the fall into cases of about 1,000 each, using moss around the outside, and sprinkle sand through the bundles of roots. We have access to two rooms in the cold storage house, kept at above named temperatures, but there is no intermediate temperature at our command.

If 18 to 20 above zero is too low, would it be safe to give the cases some extra protection and still leave them in that temperature? W. S. H.

Some few years ago was published a series of articles by Mr. Robt. Simpson, the best of authority on forcing, as well as storing, this beautiful and important little flower. I don't have the article at hand, but I can remember that the temperature for summer storage was at 28 to 30 Fahrenheit. Much lower—anything like 12 to 14 degrees of frost for months at a time—would destroy the flower and altogether weaken the growth. Even at 33, or 1 or 2 degrees above freezing, there is a slight start into growth. By some means you had better obtain the temperature best suited for these roots, and that quoted from Mr. Simpson is, I have found, the right thing.

I understand that some of the New York importers put away for cold storage the original cases just as they were packed in Europe. If this is so, it is remarkable how well they come out and satisfactorily force, as has been our experience with these roots in the month of August. We would prefer for our own use, when packing the roots in March for cold storage, to see that the roots were moist, not wet, and that there was a good covering of moss, top, bottom and sides of each box. We don't believe it feasible to put the roots in 12 degrees of frost and so envelope them as to keep them above that temperature. To do this would be keeping them absolutely air tight, and that would never do. Keep them between 28 and 30.

William Scott.

CARNATION TROUBLES.

I send two carnation plants that I think are affected with stem-rot. I have a house of Joost and am losing three and four plants a week from this disease, though they are giving me the best crop of blooms I have ever had. Please give me a remedy for this disease.

I also enclose a bnd and bloom of White Cloud. The plants are healthy and the stem is good, but the blooms are largely diseased. What is the remedy? C. V. K.

The two carnation plants came in good condition and showed plainly what is troubling yonr carnations. It is not the common form of stem-rot and cannot be combatted with lime like the common form, or rhizoctonia rot. This is one called fusarium rot, and it is entirely distinct from the other, in that it is a dry rot, whereas the other one is a wet rot.

This one is also far more difficult to combat than the other, and I have never heard of a cure for it. Whenever we notice a plant that is attacked by it we usually pull it up and burn it and in that way we have so far kept our stock almost entirely free from it. This is by far the safest way to combat it. If you do not wish to sacrifice the diseased plants I would advise yon to spray the plants with the bordeaux mixture or the copper solution, preferably the latter. Dissolve one pound of snlphate of copper in one gallon of ammonia, and use one part to 50 of water and spray the plants thoroughly twice each week until you see that the disease has disappeared from your plants. Apply it in the morning after all the blooms have been picked, as it will stain them, though not so bad as the bordeaux mixtnre.

The bloom and bud you sent were pretty well dried up when they arrived here and they were of little help to me in diagnosing the case. I was not able to find any thrips, owing to the condition of the blooms, but from your description of it I am inclined to think the gentleman was correct when he told you it was thrips that was causing your trouble. You seem positive that it is not thrips, but are you sure that you know thrips when you see them, or do you know just how to find them? Take a bud that is showing about ½ inch of petal above the calyx and unfold the petals, one after another and look closely for a tiny insect about 1-16 to ⅛ of an inch in length and very quick of movement. I think you will find them.

If you have only white varieties in that house you need not be afraid to fumigate all you like, and I would advise you to do so every evening for a week; but if you have colored varieties in the house it will take most of the color out of the blooms and your loss will be considerable. A good tablespoonful of cayenne pepper on each pile of tobacco stems will help to make it more effective. Give abundant ventilation to free the blooms of the tobacco odor.

AZALEAS FOR CHRISTMAS.

"F" asks: "What varieties of azaleas are best for holiday sales, and in what temperature should they be kept at night to have them in season?"

There are three varieties that are especially suited for early forcing, and they are: The well known Dentsche Perle, for white, is indispensable and can be had in flower at Christmas time without any trouble; Vervaeneana, the beautiful salmon and white, which forces well; and for a deep rosy pink, Simon Mardner is fine. Helene Thelmann is another beautiful rose pink that forces well, but it is not easily procured. The above are all semi-double and will fill the bill for this early season of flowering.

I have learned from wiser, if not balder, heads that contrary to what would appear reasonable, the plants that you have kept over summer on your own place, either planted out or in pots, and which should now be well set with buds, are not the plants for Christmas flowering. The newly imported plants are altogether better for this purpose. I think I can account for this by the conditions that the imported plants are subjected to after being lifted from the beds in Belgium. They are packed in close boxes, cross the Atlantic in the hold of the vessel, and the closeness and heat give the buds a start and they are ready with a little extra heat to go on and open their flowers. A temperature of 65 degrees at night will do for any of the varieties named and syringe daily until the flowers are open.

American Institute Show.

The American Institute exhibition last Wednesday and Thursday was a very creditable one, and well attended. The quality was superb and quantity abundant for the limited space for exhibits. Chas. H. Allen displayed his "White Lawson" and F. R. Pierson his prize winning Pierson fern. James Scott showed evidences of ability in the carnations grown by his "charges" at Randall's Island, and so demonstrated his ability to do "missionary work." The violets were superb.

Franz Deegen is the name that has settled on the new yellow rose by Ernst Asmus, and I suppose we will have to make the best of it. Messrs. Roehrs and Hale had their usual fine banks of decorative plants with orchid dressing, and Lager & Hurrell had their usual excellent orchid exhibit.

In the palm and fern classes the prize winners were Howard Nicol, Geo. Hale and Alex McKenzie. Specials were awarded to Lager & Hurrell for their orchids, to H. T. Clinkaberry for cypripediums, to Howard Nicol for ferns, to C. H. Allen for carnations, and to P. Sorenson for greenhouse plants.

In roses Louis M. Noe was first on 12 Beauties and 25 Teas, and Geo. Hale on 25 Brides and 25 Maids. First on violets was won by Lyons & Strickland, second by C. G. Velie & Son.

In the chrysanthemum bloom classes A. Herrington was first on 50 blooms, with white Eaton, second being taken by E. G. Hill Co., with Yellow Eaton. E. G. Hill Co. was first for pink, with the new R. E. Richardson. For 25 flowers W. Duckham was first, his collection including Appleton, Eaton, Carnot, Mme. Thurkall, Convention Hall and a number of interesting new sorts. J. G. McNicol was second. A. Herrington was first on 30 blooms in six varieties, his sorts being Eaton, Chadwick, Kate Broomhead, G. J. Warren, Appleton and Mrs. Barkley. Second went to James Bell.

In the chrysanthemum plant classes J. G. McNicol took three firsts and James Bell three.

F. R. Pierson Co. received a medal for their new fern, Nephrolepis Piersoni. Julius Roehrs was first for group of ornamental plants. Alex McKenzie won a special for poinsettias, Wm. Duckham a special for 50 mum blooms and A. Herrington for Gerbera Jamesoni.

Notes.

This week "turns the tide" in the cut flower business that has been so long ebbing; and the wholesalers and retailers alike will rejoice as the skies clear, the long period of dullness ends and "the flowing tide comes in." The horse show and the foot ball games are helping to reduce the violet and mum supply a little, and the cooler weather certainly is close at hand. "The good old summer time" has been "lingering in the lap" of autumn. Saturday it was 70 degrees. No wonder the market is glutted. Well, everything comes to the patient waiter, even prosperity. We anticipate a good season and a very helpful Thanksgiving. Holly will be used quite extensively in decorations.

One of the finest dinners of the year was given at Sherry's to M. Cambon, the French ambassador, last week, the floral decorations being very elaborate.

Among fine wedding displays lately was the Ellsworth wedding by Alex. McConnell, at the Church of the Heavenly Rest, which was entirely in white mums, the bridal bouquet of Dendrobium formosum and the bridesmaids' of "Cristopher Columbus" mums, which Traendly manufactures out of Ivory so deftly that its own "grower" wouldn't know it.

On the 25th, at the Grace church, McConnell has the Clark wedding, which will be one of the most elaborate of the year and which any of the city florists would find it advantageous to "look upon." The whole back wall of the church will be covered with wild smilax and on each side of the altar, columns extending to the roof, the whole decorated with white chrysanthemums. The same scheme of decoration will be used on the altar and pulpit, pedestals reaching down the center aisle to the door.

The Briarcliff Greenhouses, through Mr. Paul M. Pierson, have invited a few growers and friends to an "inspection visit" to their Scarboro greenhouses this Thursday, and especially to see the new house, 53x300, just completed on the "new principle," concerning which the Pierson-Sefton Co. are headquarters for information. The Briarcliff Farms, an estate of 8,000 acres, with the largest herd of Jersey cattle in the world, is on the programme.

Mr. Wesley B. Leach, with James McManus, the wholesale florist, this city, and also of the firm of J. & W. Leach, Astoria, L. I., was married Nov. 12 to Miss Florence A. Ayres, of the same town. The ceremony was a quiet one on account of the recent death of the bride's grandparent. The Review extends congratulations.

Seedling Chrysanthemums at the Chicago Show.

A Visit to Philadelphia.

The Philadelphia show was a hummer. I am sure Mr. Young will give you a thorough history of its achievements, but he insisted on my "impressions" being added and here they are.

Certainly it was the finest exhibition of the year, unless Kansas City overtopped it in extent, as did New York in space and unique decoration. All other places are handicapped at the start by their magnificent "hall." Better call it a "palace," for that is what it is, with its grand staircases, decorated ceilings and unparalleled conveniences. As to the exhibits they were abundant, varied and about as near perfection as we will get this side of the land of perpetual flowers. Specimen ferns were enormous; standard and bush mum plants worth the journey alone. I never saw anything better anywhere.

Dreer's new Pandanus is a charming thing. This firm knew a good thing when it secured control of it for the earth, for you know, of course, this firm owns it, and any sales of it in Europe are made by them.

F. R. Pierson Co., of course, laid hands on another gold medal for their fine group of Piersoni. It must be getting monotonous—this gold medal hunting. It's so easy to corral 'em!

That cycas of John Thatcher's was a gem. Jos. Hurley had a wonderful cacti exhibit, 250 varieties.

David Rust makes a rustling and efficient manager. Everything was in apple pie order, the cleanliness and neatness of the exhibits very noticeable, the order and restfulness of the whole show delightful. And such crowds, and the best people; really it was good to be there.

Down below the merry bowlers bowled, and John Westcott divulged the secret of his famous "punch." Deacon Harris got too gay in a bowling match Friday evening and allowed some opponent to drop a ball on his favorite bunion, so he is now laid up for repairs. Strange how lively these old young men get in that staid old Quaker town.

I see the cupboards of the club are full of cups won, and as there is no more room, perhaps Chicago and New York may get a cupboard of their own made for the winnings at Milwaukee.

Gude Bros., of Washington, were interested visitors on Friday night. John May and Leonard Barron, of New York, were also at the hall the same evening. There were no dissentients as to the quality and success of the exhibition.

There was not much time for visitations in a day; but I paid a few "pastoral visits," investigated the new market and beheld some charming retail windows, as well as some fine wholesale establishments.

At Dreer's the pandanus made an attractive window. Mr. Strohlein, of the company, had just returned from a week's visit at Richmond, where, after 30 years of absence, he helped to celebrate the golden wedding of his parents and renewed many happy memories.

Michell's is a busy place these days, and every day with its increased room and facilities. The brothers are always cordial in their welcome.

Harry Bayersdorfer and Paul Berkowitz were "too busy to breathe," but they took time to show me the evidences of enormous shipments and report the greatest business in their history.

Mr. Kift was gathering inspiration at the foot ball game, but his store and windows were as neat as himself, and he looks ready for a big winter's business.

So does Hugh Graham, whose orchid table decoration at the show, by the way, was a center of admiration.

Your Thanksgiving number was voted a "gem" by the trade here.

The new market is a success; the room large and convenient: the manager, Mr. Meehan, a most agreeable gentleman, a hustler and an optimist. As a distinct feature of the venture, I might mention the display of palms and supplies by the great growers of the vicinity, an innovation which will appeal, I am sure, as facilities and room increase, to the New York plantsmen. Dreer, Heacock and Harris have some splendid sample stock there and keep a representative at the market through the day.

Bowling.

A special meeting of the New York Bowling Club was held on Monday evening. There was a fair attendance and every prospect of a large membership during the balance of the season. Some excellent scores were made this week. A few of the best are here recorded:

BOSTON.

Trade Conditions.

Distinct changes have occurred, but nothing revolutionary! Chrysanthemums are going first-class, and purchasers must be on hand early, as all the bargains go early, and generally all the desirable flowers also. Roses have shortened up appreciably. Prices have changed but little, really, but there is no surplus left to sell under price, and probably all strain is off the rose question until the lull succeeding the holidays, anyway, and perhaps until spring.

Carnations are not so plentiful and their quality is vastly improved, so that better ones can be obtained for the same money and the heavy surplus of cheap ones is missing. It is not expected that poor ones will become scarce enough to cost more than good ones. Violets continue rather scarce, and are expected to remain so for some time, but I hear no one advance any reason why. All other flowers are running irregularly; paper whites very gradually increasing; greens of all kinds plentiful enough; and Robinson, of Court square, speaks of his new crop of bronze galax as of A1 quality.

Notes.

The Boston Globe gave me the first tidings of a horrible matter enacted in the woods of Maine. Mr. Wilfrid Wheeler, a well-known young florist of Concord, Mass., shot and instantly killed his guide while hunting deer on Thursday of last week. The party of four separated without sufficient understanding, and the uncertain light and a slight snow falling made Wheeler mistake the guide for a deer, with the above terrible result. Mr. Wheeler is a fine young man, upon whose mind the sad consequences will weigh heavily.

Mr. E. A. Richards, formerly of Lynn, was in town on Saturday from Greenfield, where he has been located for a couple of years or more. He is working up a good trade there, and feels so well pleased with it that he has purchased floral property and contemplates costly improvements thereon soon. But flowers, decorative plants and a renewal of his subscription for the fastest growing floral paper were his chief business items.

Miss Eunice Belcher sends out a tidy announcement concerning the opening of the "Medford Flower Store" at No. 9 High street, that city. Her expression, "Flowers for all occasions at prices inducing continued patronage," is original and worthy of imitation. Success attend upon her. J. S. Manter.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Market.

The cut flower market is improving despite immense quantities of flowers brought in by the warm weather. Prices range much the same with no indications of a general advance for Thanksgiving. Carnations are still too plentiful, great quantities of the poorest grades and some valley and chrysanthemums being sold on the street for a mere song. S. S. Pennock is receiving quantities of fine Dendrobium formosum. The first Roman hyacinths are coming in. W. J. Baker is handling some fine sprays. Chrysanthemums are a little less plentiful than a week ago.

Wyncote.

Joseph Heacock has a splendid collection of well grown palms. A visit to his place one day this week impressed me with the marvelous growth a few years had seen in the cultivation of foliage plants at Wyncote. Not very long ago there was not a palm to be seen there; today they are numbered by the hundred thousand in all sizes from the tiny seedling to specimens in 12-inch pots.

A house, 275 feet by 25 feet, filled with very handsome plants, fully six feet high, showed superior culture. One lot of Areca lutescens in 10-inch pots, beautifully shaped, with luxuriant dark green foliage, was particularly attractive; this size is very scarce about Philadelphia now. Three other great houses were filled with 4, 6 and 8-inch arecas and kentias, all in prime condition. Ten or twelve smaller houses, each 100 feet long, were also devoted to these varieties of palms. There are some made-up plants of Kentia Belmoreana, but most of this variety are grown singly to meet the market requirements.

A couple of houses devoted to Cocos Weddeliana were a pretty sight. Mr. Heacock has a method of growing these tiny specimens that produces a vigorous and perfectly symmetrical plant. There was a nice batch of Latania borbonica in 4-inch pots, just showing character leaves. Great quantities of kentia seed, both Belmoreana and Forsteriana, have lately been sown. Areca lutescens in 6-inch pots were well done.

There are about a dozen houses of Beauties, all in excellent condition, full of breaks and without a trace of spot. A few Beauties are being tried in ground beds. Two large houses are devoted to carnations. One is filled with White Cloud, the other with Melba, Mrs. Frances Joost and Mrs. Lawson. The propagating house is partly filled with Cypripedium insigne, well covered with buds and blooms.

The Flower Market.

Manager Meehan reports business as steadily increasing. Cut flowers are selling well, most of the growers selling out early each morning. A number of fine foliage plants are kept in stock as samples, and many orders have resulted therefrom. One lot of a thousand plants was sold last week. Applications for space are coming in at an encouraging rate. Richard Umfried, for many years with Fred Ehret, the uptown commission florist, began his duties as assistant to the manager last Monday. Mr. Umfried has a thorough knowledge of the business, and will be a great acquisition to the new enterprise.

A number of distinguished out-of-town visitors dropped in last week.

The choice of stalls will be auctioned on Saturday morning, November 22, instead of last Saturday, as previously stated.

Bowling.

The Florist Bowling team, all simonpure florists now, defeated the Eagle club in three straight games in a bowlers' league contest last week. In this match the new system of changing players in the middle of the contest was put in practice. George M. Moss, D. T. Conner and Walter Yeates, bowling in all three games, while W. R. Gibson, Frank Potites, and W. K. Harris each bowled in but two matches. Phil.

Mrs. Lemuel Ball, wife of Lemuel Ball, of Wissinoming, died last Sunday after a very brief illness, the cause of death being some form of kidney disease. Mr. Ball has the deepest sympathy of his many friends in his bereavement. T.

BALTIMORE.

The Market.

The weather here has not been such as tends to a flourishing condition of business. We have had but one general killing frost, and in situations at all sheltered bedding plants stand outdoors almost unharmed. During the past two weeks on several days the mercury stood at 76 degrees. A number of growers of chrysanthemums amongst the trucksters and small farmers are bringing in very creditable flowers grown outside without protection. The bulk of the mums is over and pretty much everybody in the trade is glad of it, though some growers, like the resourceful and worthy William Christy, promise to keep shipments up until Christmas. Great quantities of all grades have been put on the market and, notwithstanding the large numbers passing into the hands of the street venders, many must have gone to waste.

Carnations also, so far this season, have been in excess of the demand, and the sidewalk dealers have been offering good flowers at from 6 to 10 cents a dozen, to the disgust of the regular market men, and of the stores as well.

With the passing of the chrysanthemums a general stiffening up of all kinds of stock may be looked for. Indeed, good roses are already in demand, quite up to, if not beyond, the supply. Violets are coming in very slowly and their quality cannot be put down as first-class. Many shipped from the south are fair enough to the sight, but they lose all fragrance in their journey. Women of fashion are again displaying large bunches on the corsage.

Unprecedented dullness has characterized the trade for the past two weeks. The chrysanthemum deliveries have been largely in excess of demand. Today (November 17) there is a palpable improvement, and flowers are in considerable more request, roses being short of requirements.

Chrysanthemum Show.

Chrysanthemum shows have had their turn here. At two of our large parks for several days there were throngs of visitors to see the displays, and last week the Gardeners' Club held its annual show at the accustomed place, Lehmann's Hall. There were some fine flowers staged, but neither quantity nor general display was equal to the exhibitions of former years. The Eatons, Appletons and Chamberlains were fine examples, without any remarkable preponderance of quality amongst the various deposits in the several classes. Some interest and some feeling seemed aroused in the award of a special prize of a piece of silver from a mercantile house for the best vase of fifty pinks, the ribbon going to Thos. H. Patterson for his Maud Dean, over a seedling, Mrs. Casey, of Paul W. Binder, which gave promise last year of possessing desirable qualities. One of the daily papers is authority for the statement that the judges gave half an hour to the decision of the contest.

The judges were: Messrs. Gude (W. F.), Baner and Blackistone, all of Washington. The show had no effect in stimulating trade, as it has sometimes had before, and the attendance of visitors was disappointing. Doubtless the park displays accounted in part for this, though many think it is due to the want of anything like novel features, or varying disposition of material from year to year.

Notes.

Amongst the trade there has been a general brushing up for the season's trade, and stores and wagons have been repainted and decorated. William J. Halliday, of 316 North Charles street, has remodeled his premises, covering the walls with plate mirrors, not only adding to the apparent space, but making an attractive and tasteful change. The wood work is all white and the effect is neat and pleasing.

A new candidate for public favor is Ernest Prigge, who has opened a new store on Liberty street, near Lexington, in the very center of the retail shopping section. He comes lately from the Lake View Greenhouses at Jamestown, N. Y., though he was engaged at one time as a florist in this vicinity.

J. A. Ritter, of North Charles street and North avenue, whose attention heretofore has been divided between a flourishing florist store and a tonsorial establishment, informs us that he has sold the latter and will hereafter devote his entire time to the sale of plants and flowers. B.

CHICAGO.

The Banquet.

The annual banquet of the Florists' Club at the Auditorium Hotel last Thursday night was a very enjoyable affair. About 100 sat down to table and the dinner was strictly first-class. Mr. P. J. Hauswirth was chairman of the committee of arrangements, which is always a guarantee as to the quality of the viands and accessories.

With the advent of the coffee and cigars, President Winterson, of the Florists' Club, in a short address introduced Mr. W. H. Chadwick, president of the Horticultural Society of Chicago, as toastmaster.

President Herrington, of the Chrysanthemum Society of America, responded to a toast to that organization, and said the members owed a debt of gratitude to the Horticultural Society of Chicago for making possible the joint exhibition then in progress. He believed there was a great and useful future before the Chrysanthemum Society, and his announcement that thirty new members had been added to the roll the day before was received with applause. He concluded by presenting to John Poehlmann the silver cup won by his firm for best ten chrysanthemum blooms at the exhibition.

E. G. Hill responded to "Progress in Horticulture," noting the great advances made, especially in the last decade, and Elmer D. Smith spoke to "Progress in the Culture of Chrysanthemums," making some interesting comparisons between the varieties of today and of a dozen years ago.

Prof. John F. Cowell responded for the "Botanic Gardens" and cited several important plant introductions through them. Judge W. J. Vesey paid a pretty tribute to the beauty and fragrance of the rose and the carnation, and Frank Robinson responded for Kansas City. Alex Wallace, of the Florists' Exchange, responded for "The Horticultural Press," and C. C. Pollworth to "The Next Meeting of the S. A. F." G. A. Rackham, J. D. Carmody, W. N. Rudd, J. C. Vaughan, Philip Foley, and others were also heard.

Frank Carter, G. H. Pieser, Jr., and the club quartette enlivened the program with numerous songs, and Anton Then gave a special selection of his own.

A telegram of condolence was sent to Edgar Sanders, whose enforced absence was regretted by all.

Out of town visitors present were: A. Herrington, Madison, N. J.; E. G. Hill, Richmond, Ind.; J. F. Cowell, Buffalo; Alex Wallace, New York; F. E. Dorner, Jr., Lafayette, Ind.; Elmer D. Smith, Adrian, Mich.; W. J. Vesey, Ft. Wayne, Ind.; J. J. Beneke, Fred C. Weber, F. M. Ellis, Otto G. Koenig, C. A. Kuehn, A. Jablonsky, J. F. Ammann, Theo. Miller, Fred. H. Meinhardt, J. Other Visitors.

Among other visitors not at the banquet and not reported last week were: H. G. Berning and wife, St. Louis; M. F. Kyle, Kalamazoo, Mich.; G. F. Crabb and Eli Cross, Grand Rapids, Mich.; Miss Arnold, Omaha, Neb.; E. Holland, N. Olmsted, O.; C. E. Wonsetler, Bryan, O.; Chas. E. Gullett, Lincoln, Ill.; H. W. Buckbee, Rockford, Ill.; Geo. A. Notes.

The sun showed his face again on Wednesday. If the bright weather continues, and without a cold snap, the Thanksgiving supply ought to be ample.

Mrs. C. L. Washburn has been taken seriously ill and is now at a Michigan health resort.

Edgar Sanders continues to improve and keeps cheery and happy. He much enjoys visits from his friends in the trade.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

Business the past week was somewhat better, as compared with the week before, owing to a number of social events and a large amount of funeral work. With Thanksgiving on hand for next week a decided increase in business is expected.

The rose stock is very fine; in fact, better than seen for some time.

Carnations are coming in freely, and the percentage of really first-class blooms is large and for which there is an active demand, while the common sorts are left over for the cheap trade.

The good supply of chrysanthemums continues, but the demand for them has been rather slow. The fancy sorts sell better, and, while the price on them remains about as before, sales are more ready and the stock no longer accumulates at the wholesale houses.

Within the past week violets have been coming in large lots and of very fine quality. The supply is larger than the demand and many remain unsold. Lily of the valley and Romans continue in fair supply and the demand is good. Some good, clean smilax is seen, which sells well.

The prospects for a good supply of and a brisk demand for cut flowers for Thanksgiving day are good.

Trip to Chicago.

As we were not in the "show business" this year, a party of eighteen florists spent three days inspecting the Chicago show. Not only did we enjoy the grand show of cut blooms, but also the good fellowship that was extended to us on every hand. I could write column after column on what and whom we saw and heard, but knowing that space at this time of the year is limited, I will say that the trip was a most enjoyable and instructive one and those who did not make it missed a treat. The growers of the party, Messrs. Ammann, Steidle, Jablonsky, Windt, Meinhardt, Koenig and Miller are loud in their praises of what they saw at the large establishments around Chicago and Joliet. The bowlers were well entertained on Wednesday night by Messrs. Hauswirth, Kreitling, Asmus, Balluff and little Philip Foley, and we leave it to them to tell the story of how we came near winning the last game with the assistance of the ex-St. Louis boy, J. S. Wilson.

On Thursday night we were more than repaid for our visit by attending the annual banquet of the Chicago Florists' Club at the Auditorium. We were sorry to have to leave the hall so early in order to catch the train and leave all our old and new friends without saying good-by. We missed the good-natured Emil Buettner at the banquet, but of course the twins come first.

The St. Louis delegation wishes me to express, through the Review, their thanks to the Chicago brothers for their kind and generous treatment shown them during their stay in the city.

Expressions Heard on the Trip.

Fred Meinhardt, wife and sister, had a great time and stayed longer than any of the rest of us.

Otto Koenig was talking World's Fair to all visitors, and they think Otto is just the man to take charge of the floricultural end of it.

A. Jablonsky, who was much taken with roast quail with chestnut dressing, says he never before ate so much or so many good things.

Fred Weber and Theo. Miller are much pleased with their visit and the good times they had.

Fred Ammann, John Steidle and Windt, Jr., say they never before saw so much glass and so many roses and carnations, and were well paid for their visit.

Carew Sanders put in most of the time with his cousin, Edgar Sanders, who was greatly missed by all his friends.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Berning had a good time among their friends the short time they were there.

C. Kuehn and Frank M. Ellis made the rounds of the wholesalers and growers, which had a good effect on them in a business way.

As for myself, I must say that the trip was well worth the time spent, and the opportunity to meet so many good friends and the good, kind words for the success of the Review make recollections of the trip a pleasure.

Notes.

We had with us the past week the big and mighty Arnold Ringier, selling for Barnard & Co., Chicago.

Mr. Creighton, representing Henry A. Dreer, of Philadelphia, was a visitor and reports a very successful trip.

Mr. S. S. Skidelsky, the man who sells everything a florist needs, is here this week.

B. Eschner, of M. Rice & Co., Philadelphia, is with us this week booking holiday novelties.

The finest chrysanthemum seen at the Chicago show was the large pink exhibited by The E. G. Hill Company and named R. E. Richardson. This is a St. Louis production by Wm. Schray & Sons. The St. Louis delegation was proud of it, as would the Schray boys have been, had they seen it as we did.

CHRYSANTHEMUM CUT BLOOMS.

BY CHAS. W. JOHNSON.

[Presented at the Chrysanthemum Society of America to the Chicago convention.]

In presenting this subject to you my first duty will be to review the cut bloom chrysanthemums that have gone before, or in other words, the foundations of our popular kinds of today. In looking over the varieties that we consider standards now we can hardly realize how very few of the veterans we still have with us. One of the oldest favorites is Ivory, a grand old variety but now being grown less each year; it is being discarded on account of not being large enough for present day requirements.

Geo. W. Childs, a variety which has long been the stand-by in reds, is still on deck and possessing, as it does, so many good points it is likely to remain with us for awhile yet. I suppose this variety at the time of introduction was the most distinct American seedling.

Mrs. Jerome Jones, that beautiful incurved with such handsome foliage and whose blossoms keep so well, did not get a very good start owing to its requirements not being properly understood. I remember the first plant of this variety that came under my notice. It was grown in a 6-inch pot with stunted foliage and dirty white flower with wide open center. But what a transformation we did behold the next season or two when this selfsame variety had jumped to first place as the leading commercial and prize winning kind of its season. It is still well up among the first rank with its graceful blooms and well clothed footstalks, which size alone has beaten.

Major Bonnaffon is another of the old wonders that lack of size is proving its undoing. Without a doubt this variety was at one time grown more than all others combined. This is also a very distinct sort, possessing characteristics entirely its own and which our hybridizers have not been able to infuse into the later day seedlings.

Niveus, Philadelphia, Mrs. W. C. Egan, Yellow Queen and H. L. Sunderbruch are still grown to meet some special purpose but are no longer considered the wonders as of old. Mrs. Henry Robinson, Modesto, Pennsylvania, Mayflower, Jeannie Falconer and Mrs. Perrin are very much alive yet and well able to hold their heads among the leaders. But what has become of the Queen, Harry May, Mr. Hicks Arnold, Harry E. Widener, Frank Thompson, Mrs. E. G. Hill, Gold, Mermaid, Robert Bottomley, Minnie Wanamaker, J. C. Vaughan, Exquisite, Ada Spaulding, Mrs. Alpheus Hardy, Eda Prass, Lilian B. Bird, varieties without which a few years ago an exhibition collection would not have been complete? Mutual Friend is still holding its own and is found in most collections, and as seen this year I believe it is doing better than it ever was.

Foreign Varieties in America.

Of the vast number of foreign varieties that have been introduced into this country we have to award first honors to that sterling French variety, Viviand-Morel, which we still see in various grades of quality, some seasons extra fine, others not so good, though it would seem as though most of us are still loath to let it go. Golden wedding, from the other side of the globe, cannot yet be beaten in its season. This variety was very disappointing the first year or two after being introduced. Several growers were so disgusted with it because of its being so infested with disease that they pulled out the plants without letting them come into bloom; but time has proven that our golden friend was made of better stuff than we even then dared suppose and today it is simply grand. W. H. Lincoln, in its day a fine yellow for cut blooms, is now being pushed aside by many much better, though for growing into specimen bush plants it is still a top notch yellow.

After these three varieties we have to skip a few years before anything very useful from an American standpoint came to hand. Several English varieties put in their appearance, but after due examination how very few of them could pass muster. One that looked at first to be a winner was Mrs. Henry Weeks, but she was too fussy and could not bear so much sunshine; we had, therefore, with regrets, to let her go. Not any of the other English varieties ever got far enough into the front ranks to be classed as standards. We have several English varieties now on trial which seem a great deal more promising. The two leaders are Kate Broomhead, a magnificent bronze, fine grower, good even color, likes plenty of sunshine and one that will give the best of them a close race.

Mrs. Coombes, a massive reflexed pink, is another wonderful variety with the same easy growth, stout stems clothed with heavy foliage. We are much impressed with this one and the more we see of it the better we like it.

A. J. Balfour, another pink from England, pleases us very much on account of its beautiful clear color. We did not get this one till late, consequently it did not have a fair show and is a little under size. Mrs. Barclay is another pink monster with very heavy foliage, and though it may seem a little coarse it is still a striking variety. We are also trying some of Mr. Godfrey's finest set of novelties with results that are hardly up to our expectations. Godfrey's King and Queen Alexander has made the best showing of the lot, but can only be used in collections and they will have to increase in size to hold a place there. Bessie Godfrey, upon which we have been building great hopes, have not been realized. Maybe we can do better with this one another season.

The Australian people use as their motto "Advance Australia," and the Australian chrysanthemum raisers are certainly acting up to it, for some of the new varieties that they are giving us are truly wonderful. We have Nellie Peckett, a very distinct sort and a gem in every way. Though it has not enough substance for commercial purposes it can find a place in exhibition collections. Walleroo and Mr. T. Carrington are also two very telling varieties for exhibition and late reports from England on several more varieties now on trial lead us to expect something amazing.

We are getting some very fine things from France, but most of them have the very serious fault of being such ungainly tall growers and so many of them coming with long necks. Mme. Deis, a very large reflexed white, pleases us very much. It is very slow to make cuttings and if this is overcome the variety should prove a winner. M. Chenon de Leche, a rosy buff reflexed, is fine for exhibition and in Europe this variety is considered the finest ever raised. Mme. R. Cadbury, a very large showy white, is another grand sort. Mme. Carnot and its yellow sports, Mrs. Mease and Chas. Warren, we have had with us for some time, and though they require special culture they are still splendid varieties.

American Varieties Abroad.

It is quite amusing to read what the European growers think of some of our most popular kinds. One or two varieties which we think are top notchers are described there as nothing startling, while many of our early sorts are classed as late. But this is no doubt due to the different climatic conditions. In looking over the English reports it would seem as though Our Mutual Friend is entitled to first place among American varieties in that country, closely followed by Modesto, Niveus, Sunstone, Western King, Simplicity, Mrs. E. W. Clark and Geo. W. Childs, varieties that have all made their mark.

The first year that I was in Chicago we used to grow our chrysanthemums out in the field during the summer, lifting them in the fall the same as we now treat carnations, and I believe the first house of single stem chrysanthemums around this part of the country was grown at Mount Greenwood. At that time we put the cuttings in along in June or the early part of July and planted in the benches early in August, growing them along as fast as possible, taking the first bud that put in its appearance. We then thought we got fine blooms, but they would not be in it today. Now we have to commence to propagate some of the varieties in March, selecting the best wood attainable, potting them up as soon as rooted and giving them a light airy space with a night temperature of between 40 and 50 degrees. Some of the varieties that need to be propagated early are Mrs. Jerome Jones and its sports, Brutus, Nellie Peckett, Mutual Friend, Major Bonnaffon and most of the early kinds.

Exhibition Blooms.

Stock that is intended to produce exhibition blooms should be planted the last of May or by June the 10th at the latest. We find that we get as good results from six inches of soil as when a greater depth is used, so I would not advise planting in any deeper benches than the regulation six inches. Stock planted as early as this needs ample room and should be set nine by ten inches apart. They will also require at least seven feet of head room and a little more if they can have it, for a great many of our best varieties will use up all of this.

The question of what kind of soil to use must be decided to a certain extent by the nature of the soil in the locality where we may be situated. Chrysanthemums respond readily to a good rich compost, but in using a very rich soil greater care will have to be taken to get them started right. A little over-watering before the plants have got used to the soil will make a great many of them turn yellow and get diseased and plants so affected will never amount to anything. Some seasons our soil in this western country will be as dry as powder and if put into the benches in this condition it is difficult to get the water to work down evenly to the bottom, consequently the roots of the plants derive very little benefit from watering while soil is in this condition. The better way is to turn the hose onto the compost pile before bringing it into the house; by doing this you can have the soil in any condition you want. This season we used the prairie sod as found in this locality, mixing it as follows: Two loads of sod, one load of clay, and one of well rotted cow manure, and after on the benches a liberal sprinkling of fine bone meal was forked into it. This has given us excellent results.

After planting chrysanthemums will stand all the sunshine and ventilation they can get, also liberal syringings should be given them two or three times a day. After the plants are well started keep the soil open by scratching the surface every little while and keep the beds clear of weeds. This, together with picking the lateral shoots out and attending to the tying will be the general routine of the work in caring for the plants from the time they are planted until the buds are ready to take. While mapping out the plan for planting the character of growth and time of flowering of the several varieties should be taken into consideration, the tall and dwarf growers kept separate, also the early midseason and late ones planted in sections by themselves.

A great deal has been written about the proper time to take the buds and this most important matter must be governed by the variety in question, also considering the time of planting. Early planted stock if kept growing actively can be timed to form a bud between the middle and end of July. This one must be rubbed out, throwing the plants into growth again, giving them time to make another bud from August 20th, which according to my experience in nearly all cases will make the finest blooms. I timed several varieties this season on various buds. Col. Appleton buds taken between Aug. 26 and Sept. 10 have developed magnificent blooms, with centers full ready to cut Oct. 25. Mrs. Jerome Jones buds taken at same time are showing full flowers solid to center ready to cut Oct. 30. Our experience with Timothy Eaton being very limited until this season, I was a little doubtful about taking an August bud, so had them removed, excepting about 50 plants, buds of which were taken the last week in August; these have developed into nice bloom and are ready to cut Nov. 1.

The plants on which the August bud was rubbed out went right into growth again and added another two feet of stem with the result that Nov. 1 not any of them are ready and the blooms are not nearly so good. The first buds attained a height of 4½ feet and the latter ones 6½ feet. With the variety Mrs. Coombes buds taken the last of August made wonderful blooms, read to cut Oct. 20, of very much greater depth and fuller flowers than on the plants where a later bud was taken. I do not wish to be understood that this bud is the only bud to take and am only giving my experience, hoping other growers will do the same.

Referring to liquid manures, I do not use the commercial fertilizers to any great extent, except an occasional dose of nitrate of soda and a dressing of Clay's fertilizer. In applying liquids we always use a Kinney pump. We give just as much attention to temperature and ventilation in our chrysanthemum houses as we do in the rose, palm, or fern houses, and aim to have the night temperature as nearly as possible 50 degrees, especially when the petals are unfolding. After the flower is part way out, we sometimes have to raise this slightly to keep the moisture from settling on the blooms. When they are half open we shade the glass a little; this we find a great help in keeping them from burning; it also develops the blooms slowly and hence gives them greater substance.

Now, gentlemen, in conclusion, I must beg that you accept this paper in the sense that it is intended, it being only my experience.

The week opened with an encouraging rise in prices, especially in roses, carnations and violets, but a reaction set in later. On Wednesday the receipts of violets were enormous and with a light demand they were a drug in the market. Prices fell to half what they were on Monday. The quality of all stock is improving.

The weather remains warm for the season but is dark and gloomy most of the time. There has been a marked shortening of the cut of roses and prices are already about up to quotations for Thanksgiving. Should a cold wave arrive now the shortage would be serious for that event. The carnation receipts are not nearly so large and the chances are that many are being held on the plants. Don't over do it, gentlemen. A bare market just before a holiday gives a much better opportunity to realize to best advantage than during a slump at the last. Keep in close touch with your comoission man and give him a chance to take the market at its best.

The Thanksgiving quotations printed above are an average of the figures given by the various houses, but it is just about like guessing on the weather.

Outlook bright for Thanksgiving. Mums are still in good demand and crop will hold out for next week. Roses are beginning to shorten up, consequently prices are a little stiffer; Beauties are holding their own as usual. Carnations plentiful and stock very fine, whites and light color moving best. Short carnations (white) for funeral work are finding ready sale at 75c per 100. Sweet peas, new crop, are coming in very fine. Some fine cattleyas and cypripediums are in evidence. Smilax is very fine. Violets are up to the standard. Wild smilax moving well. DILGER.

CLEVELAND.

Various Items.

Business is all that could be expected, and as far as I could learn, almost everyone is satisfied. A visit to the different establishments found everybody looking forward to Christmas.

Although there is more or less complaint from other places in regard to the waning popularity of the mum, I hardly think such is the case here. There seems to be about the same demand as heretofore, and there is a general feeeling of satisfaction here in regard to the returns from them; in fact, one grower said to me that this year his chrysanthemums had paid him better than ever before.

A. Schmitt, of Glenville, when visited was found busy planting out some old tulip bulbs for early spring cutting. When asked about trade he said he had no complaint to make; everything was all right; no use complaining, it did no good. This is typical of Mr. Schmitt. I believe one of his mottoes is "Do the best you can, and let the rest take care of itself." His place has the appearance of being governed by a man that it satisfied with what he has done. Here I found the stock in first-class condition, bulbs all planted and in their winter quarters. Where to get good soil is a burning question with him, as it is with all others who are situated in or near large cities.

Fred Aul was busy shifting plants and endeavoring to make more room in houses that are now overcrowded. Here I found some very good mums, the two Deans, Eaton, Chadwick, Appleton and others. He made the same complaint that I have heard from others about Appleton. It can not be left after it is fit to cut, as it drops its head and breaks the stem close to the flower.

G. M. Naumann is all ready for winter to set in, having everything under glass. Here I found a fine stock of Gloire de Lorraine begonias that are in prime condition, covered with buds and flowers; also the finest cyclamen. I dare say, to be seen anywhere around Cleveland, the plants being in 7-inch pots with buds and flowers too numerous to number. He also has a house of violets that gives great promise. He seems always to have good success with mums of all varieties; in fact, Max is a good grower of almost any stock. If you want to see him swell up with pride, ask him to show you his seedling carnation, named after his daughter. He has just reason to be proud of this carnation, for, as grown by him, it is certainly a money-maker. The flowers are of good size, some measuring three inches, on strong, healthy plants with no surplus grass; a good color, somewhat darker than Scott, nicely fringed and with a good calyx. He also has several other seedlings.

Thomas Burns, formerly employed by S. N. Pentecost, has moved to Norwalk and gone into business for himself.

A Big Mistake.

You make a mistake if you buy Araucaria Excelsa from some other firm, as it is impossible for any other firm to give you such value for the money as we can. Why? Because we make a specialty of them: filling our houses in early April with the best to be found in Europe, raised from top cuttings only. All must be sold before Christmas to make room for Easter plants.

CINCINNATI.

The Market.

There was a slight decline in business during the past week, due, no doubt, to the fine weather we have been having.

Chrysanthemums are now at ebb, and the market has steadied itself nicely and prices have an upward tendency. Some Al Chadwick sell readily at 20 and 25 cents each and Jerome Jones is a close second at 15 to 18 cents. Golden Wedding is being cut in large quantities, but in many instances the petals are badly spotted, which, of course, renders them all but useless. Good flowers of this variety bring $1.80 to $2 per dozen. White Bonnaffon has proved itself to be a top-notcher for a medium white. It is certainly a beautiful little mum, and sells on sight. Some of this variety grown by Frank Huntsman, of Fort Thomas, Ky., are the best selling white on the market at present. They bring $1.50 per dozen. A great number of the famous Timothy Eaton were in the market, but I cannot say anything in favor of this stiff, overgrown flower as a commercial variety.

Roses were in fair supply with improved quality. Golden Gate is coming to the front with rapid strides, and as a seller it is proving itself to be A1. Ivory also takes well, and there is undoubtedly a future for it. Liberty is a top-notcher and is rapidly approaching its high water-mark as to quality. Brides and Maids of very good quality are to be had now. A fair lot of Beauties are coming in, but there are very few of the real long-stemmed ones. As to that, though, a 24-inch Beauty is fast becoming a standard and that size is by far the best seller.

Carnations are equal to the demand. The best sell well. Poor grades move slowly. Some extra fine Lawsons are to be had. Dorothy is in first-class shape. Both Estelle and America are showing up well. The present dark weather will undoubtedly shorten the supply of this flower a great deal, and an advance in price is very likely to occur shortly.

Violets are selling well and more could be used to advantage. Single ones bring the highest price, although double ones do very well. Romans, narcissus and valley are equal to the demand. Some Longiflorum lilies are in and sell very nicely.

Notes.

F. W. Ball, formerly with the Cincinnati Cut Flower Co., has sold out his interest in same and bought out Charlie Jones' Fourth street store, where he will hold forth in the future, doing a retail business. Dock Sunderbruch purchased Mr. Ball's interest and will continue the business.

I regret to report the death of the father of H. M. Altick, of Dayton, Ohio, which occurred during the past week, the funeral taking place on Thursday.

Mr. E. G. Gillett reports the sales of the new early white chrysanthemum, Estelle, as being very good. This variety took well with the store men, who pronounced it a fine seller.

Fred Weltz, of Wilmington, Ohio, and J. T. Herdigen, of Auburn, Ind., were callers. C. J. Ohmer.

The Market.

The large shipments of carnations and chrysanthemums continued during last week, causing a severe decline in prices on the lower grades of stock. Consignments of chrysanthemums were very heavy, but the demand was slow and in consequence prices were low. Fancy grades of carnations found a ready market, but many of the standard grades and culls remained unsold. The weather was so like summer that flowers did not seem to attract the transient trade.

In Beauties the supply is about equal to the demand and prices have remained steady. There was a shortage in Maids, Brides and Liberties until Saturday, November 15, when large quantities arrived.

The supply of valley, violets and all green stock is now regular.

Various Items.

At the regular monthly meeting of the Florist Club, held on Wednesday evening, November 12, the subject for discussion was "Chrysanthemums," and, from the little outdoor pompon to the best blooms of the latest varieties, they were taken up and critically discussed. The meeting was largely attended. The membership of the club is rapidly increasing, which is probably due to the interesting discussions being held.

Elmer E. Siebert, who has been acting as superintendent of Highland Park, has resigned his position.

R. N. Lockwood, representing Stumpp & Walter Co., of New York; J. E. Bonsall, of Salem, Ohio, and Harry Chaapel, of Williamsport, Pa., were visitors here last week.

Sidney Gibbs' plant at Woodville, Pa., was badly damaged by fire on the evening of November 11. A new dwelling house, a palm and new propagating house and fifteen feet of the ends of seven carnation houses were destroyed. The origin of the fire is unknown. The loss is about $10,000, covered by insurance.

Mrs. E. A. Williams had the decorations at Duquesne Garden for the banquet and ball given by the Scottish Rite Masons, at their fiftieth annual reunion. The decorations were very beautiful and expensive.

The largest social function of the season was the housewarming at Alexander R. Peacock's new palatial home. The decorations were gorgeous, and large quantities of orchids, American Beauties and chrysanthemums were used. Suffice it to say that the decorations were exquisite. Randolph & McClements had this decoration. Mr. Peacock is a member of the U. S. Steel Co.

The Pittsburg Cut Flower Co. is handling some very good Cypripedium insigne, Roman hyacinths and paper white narcissus. Mr. Clarke, of that company, informs the writer that they are adding new consignors right along and that out of town shipments are increasing. This question was put to him the other day by one of our prominent retailers: "Could not more odds and ends such as bouvardia, candytuft, sweet alyssum, swainsona, ixia, Bride gladiolus, ranunculus, etc., be sold here?" Brother Clarke said a limited quantity could be sold if they had it.

A slick individual worked this little game successfully on one of the downtown florists last week. He 'phoned for a handsome box of cut flowers, to cost $25, and to be delivered to a well known address, with instructions to the salesman to send sufficient change for a $50 check. The fellow met the messenger at the entrance to the house, relieved him of his box and $25 change, and handed him a tip and a worthless check. Hoo-Hoo.

At the last meeting of the Pittsburg and Allegheny Florists' and Gardeners' Club, I was instructed to notify you officially that the officers of the club for the year 1902 are as follows: President, Wm. Falconer; vice-president, E. C. Reineman; secretary, H. P. Joslin; assistant secretary, E. C. Ludwig; treasurer, Fred Burki; executive committee, Fred Burki, Jno. Bader, P. S. Randolph.

H. P. Joslin, Sec'y.

A Seasonable Hint.—This is a good time to order a copy of the Florists' Manual, by William Scott, if you do not already have a copy. It costs $5, but contains more matter of real value to florists than a library of other books costing from $50 to $75.

MINNEAPOLIS.

Among the Growers.

Prominent among the big places of the Northwest, the establishment of the Minneapolis Floral Co., at Thirty-sixth street and Calhoun boulevard, Minneapolis, easily ranks first. It is, of course, but a mere pigmy compared with some of the giants around Chicago and farther East, but here in the North Star state we consider it large. While one of the largest places it is also one of the youngest and is a living example of what push and capital combined can accomplish.

The houses are 155 feet in length, running east and west, and are built on a side hill facing the south, an ideal location for a greenhouse. The Garland gutters used here are 7 feet 6 inches from the ground, the houses of an average width of 16 feet. The pitch of the roof is very steep and the peak of the largest house 25 feet high. Butted glass was used in the construction, but Mr. Monson, the proprietor, tells me it is the last time he will use butted glass. As rapidly as possible the glass will be relaid and lapped. So much for the houses containing 90,000 square feet of glass.

As for the stock grown in them, as the reader may have surmised, it is fine, first-class and choice. In roses one is almost lost in the forest of growth comprising all of the best varieties and many others which seem to thrive well here.

Brides and Bridesmaids revel in their environment, and at the time of my visit were in fine crop. Beauties and Queen of Edgely are also grown here in large numbers and fine quality. Liberty also thrives here, though it has never fulfilled expectations. Meteor produces abundantly until the "dark December days." Helen Gould was looking fine, being in full crop, but is a very capricious variety, and requires constant watching and continuous coddling to produce perfect blossoms. When its nature is better understood I predict a great popularity for this new beauty. Sunset, which is well known, and Sunrise, which is comparatively new, are both thriving side by side in separate benches. President Carnot, Kaiserin and Testout are also grown. A few French seedlings are being tried in the hope of securing some new desirable variety.

Mums are also grown in quantity, as is evidenced by the long list of desirable varieties in bloom at the time of my visit. I will name a few of them, though I am sure there are just as many more desirable varieties that are not named here. Golden Beauty, a large late yellow; Timothy Eaton, with blooms fully 12 to 15 inches in diameter; Elmer Smith, a deep orange; Kate Brown, bronzy yellow; Flora Hill, creamy white; Adele, a most beautiful pink; Nesota, a daisy-like flat yellow of good form and substance; W. H. Chadwick, White Bonnaffon, W. H. Rieman, Major Bonnaffon, Autumn Glory, Mutual Friend, as large as ever; Mme. Faure, a new white; Col. Appleton, and many more.

Carnations, though planted late, were looking fine. Mr. Monson was the first to appreciate the value of Prosperity and has planted it quite heavily. Sample blooms 3¾ inches in diameter were noted. All the leading varieties are grown, though Lawson and Prosperity are the leaders. A new fancy variety, a cream overlaid, flushed and striped with scarlet, is strikingly beautiful.

The violets here are the finest I have ever seen. The plants were benched in July, and from one bench of 1,500 plants 25,000 blooms had been picked up to Nov. 1. Mr. Monson estimates the returns from this house of 3,000 plants at $1 per plant for the season, a very encouraging outlook. The varieties grown are Marie Louise, Lady Campbell, Swanley White; California, and Princess of Wales, single.

It is not alone in cut flowers that Mr. Monson's success has been achieved. In the plant and bulb line he has always dealt heavily. For next spring he has 16,000 lilies, 1,000 azaleas, besides rhododendrons, camellias, lilacs, etc., in large quantities. For Christmas a fine supply of well grown peppers were much in evidence, the bright, showy fruit contrasting nicely with the green stems and foliage. A large number of oranges in fruit were also noted, as well as palms, ferns, araucarias and a general line of decorative stock.

Grading is being done now for another block of houses, to be erected this winter.

DENVER, COLO.

The warm weather has made the trade in flowers quite dull, especially so with chrysanthemums, which are selling at from $1 to $2 per dozen and are a drug at that. But the florist is looking for a change, both in the weather and in the demand for flowers.

In taking in the greenhouses we find that the finest mums are to be found at Brenkert's.

As there was no mum show given this fall by the Florists' Club, the Danie's & Fisher Co. had a private show of their own, and a very creditable display it was.

The carnations of N. A. Benson are magnificent in every way. They were planted in the benches in the spring and grown through the summer without any glass in the houses.

The Colfax Avenue Floral Co. has disposed of a great many pot mums this fall and its carnations are doing nicely.

At the Park Floral Co.'s most of the mums are cut, and the cyclamens are doing well. Mr. Valentine, of the Park Floral Co., is seriously ill, having undergone two operations, but am glad to hear that everything looks favorable for his speedy recovery. John Sked, who has been with this firm for some time, has taken a position as manager of a greenhouse plant at Boulder.

Newlander & Rollin are building quite an extensive addition to their plant in Harman, and Mrs. Mauff is going to add some new houses to her plant in the same town.

Ernest Flohr, of the Gallup Floral Co., has been having an experience with inflammatory rheumatism.

At Glauber's, in Montclair, everything is in elegant shape, and especially his roses. THORN.

Mr. Emil Glauber, Montclair, Colo., says there is a fine opportunity for a flower commission man in Denver. He says there is now no commission house in that city, and he is sure one would be a success and of profit to all.

The Eastman Seed Co., East Sumner, Maine, report a fine crop of seed of their very early tomato, the "Bright and Early," notwithstanding the unfavorable season.

At the Kansas City show Nathan Smith & Son won a gold medal in addition to the prize of $150, with their new plumed chrysanthemum, Mrs. F. J. Taggart.

Toronto, Ont.—R. Mearns has added a new carnation house. He reports a good season and everything all right except the coal bill.

UTICA, N. Y.

The Florists' Club, of Utica, celebrated the opening of more commodious quarters in the Mannerchor building on Friday evening, November 14, by holding a special flower meeting, followed by a bountifnl repast, which was enjoyed by about thirty of the members.

Besides the flowers furnished by the members of the club, the F. R. Pierson Co. sent us a box of the wonderful Piersoni fern, for which we extend our many thanks. I think there is not a florist in Utica who will not try a few of them. We were also favored with a bunch of the Enchantress carnation from Mr. Fisher, Ellis, Mass., to whom also we are very thankful. We also wish to thank the Dale Estate for a box of the new rose, Canadian Queen. Although it did not arrive until the morning after the meeting, the secretary took the trouble to see that the members had a chance to see it, and they are all praises for the Queen.

Now that we are in permanent quarters we are expecting great things for our club, which is steadily growing, having received two applications for membership at the special meeting.

We are going to have a carnation meeting in February. There are a great many growers of this beautiful flower here, and many of the flowers were seen at the special meeting. Our president was presented with an oddity in the shape of a blue carnation, grown by C. F. Seitzer, our worthy treasurer.

We understand that Mr. Peter Crowe has purchased quite a lot of the new rose, Canadian Queen, which indicates that he must think well of it, and I presume that others also will grow it here.

Chrysanthemums for Thanksgiving day are not over plenty. There will be some good Eatons, as that variety is somewhat late here. There were some very good blooms of most of the varieties grown here, and they sold very well.

Our next regular meeting will be held December 4, when you will hear from us again. S.

Malta, Ohio.—W. C. Scovell's business has increased 40 per cent the past year, and prospects for a still greater increase are good.

Three Rivers, Mich.—Wm. Dyer, who is the only florist here, is well satisfied with the amount of business done the past year. He has lately changed his heating system from flue to hot water.

FLORISTS' PUBLISHING CO.....Caxton Building.....CHICAGO.

TORONTO.

Trade during the last week has picked up considerably, and the market now assumes a more steady tone. Mums are commencing to show a scarcity, and this is having the effect of increasing the demand for roses and carnations, of which there has been an oversupply, but we notice the wholesale men already quoting several varieties of roses short in quantity.

The long-waited-for opening of the new St. Lawrence Market took place on Saturday, November 15, when Mayor Howland officially declared the market open for business. This is a very fine building, 340 feet long and 136 feet 6 inches wide, with a steel truss roof 138 feet 6-inch span with glass center. The flower department is partitioned off 50 feet by 90 feet, and promises to be quite a boon to the market trade, which has fallen off considerably during the last few years and has been gradually reverting into the hands of the department stores, which handle that cheap quality of stuff that in former years was sold at the market. This trade will, it is expected, come back to the market now that they have such a commodious and comfortable place for handling it. All the old heads were on hand with their stock on Saturday, and all, without exception, reported a splendid day.

As we look over the cuts of the various exhibits at the different mum shows we regret that our own show has been called off this year. We also hear some of the growers, who had the misfortune to receive only 3rd, 4th, 5th or 6th prize last year, judging their stock this year as first prize winners. Just wait, boys, you will get another chance.

Mr. F. Browne, of Barrie, is sending in some very fine Major Bonnaffon mums, and Mr. A. E. Cole, of Grimbsby, Princess violets.

An event of some interest, and especially to F. C. Miller & Sons, of Bracondale, was the christening of their new yellow chrysanthemum, Dr. Oronhyatekha, a sport from Eaton. This is a pale yellow, somewhat resembling Colonel Appleton in color, with the same size and substance of Eaton. It originated and was grown by Miller & Sons, and on Tuesday afternoon, November 11, Dr. Oronhyatekha, the chief of the Foresters, together with the officials and staff of the Temple building, were invited up to christen this mum, which was done in good style, and can be very properly characterized as a small event elaborately carried out. After the ceremony, cake and stimulants of various strengths were served in the packing shed.

Although none of the florists were invited they are promised a bunch of it to display in their windows, which we may hear about later. D. J.
